Question of the Week

For Sewer Commission candidates: How viable is the option of sending more Cohasset sewerage to Hull and could that be a cost-effective alternative for some Cohasset homes with failing septic systems?

SEWER COMMISSION/ Jim Dow

On the surface, sending additional flow from Cohasset homes with failing septic systems appears to be a viable option but only if it is given the approval of the Cohasset Sewer Commission. That approval can only be given if the town stays within the parameters set forth in the inter-municipal agreement between Cohasset and Hull for allowable flow.

A certain amount of gallons per day, based on an average daily flow and a peak daily flow were negotiated on at the beginning of the project based on the number of properties that the new sewer system passed. Capacity is a major issue when it comes to increasing the number of homes that send their sewerage to Hull even though it is not the only consideration, there are many factors involved. If the additional flow pushes the total volume over the agreed upon amount, renegotiations with both Hull and Hingham would be required. The average daily flow rate and the peak flow rate vary with weather conditions and the addition of more homes may push the overall flow close to our total allotment.

There is additional capacity available to us at the Hull treatment plant but in order to purchase it, there would be a significant expense involved. Depending on the number of homes that have failing septic systems in the area, perhaps the addition of a smaller satellite treatment facility could be built. These units could service a number of homes throughout certain neighborhoods that are in environmentally sensitive areas. Neighborhoods that would be benefit from this type of system would include those with properties near the public water supply and any of the harbor inlet areas. Unfortunately, there is no cheap or easy way to discharge or treat sewerage.

SEWER COMMISSION/ Wayne Sawchuk

The question of expanding the North Cohasset sewer district will present a number of challenges to the Sewer Commissioners and the Town.

The district utilizes low-pressure sewage grinder pumps and small diameter forced sewer mains. The individual pumps discharge into slightly larger sewer mains running through the streets ultimately ending up at the Hull Sewer Treatment Plant.

Cohasset has purchased a limited flow capacity to the Hull plant and to increase the quantity of the permitted flow will require new negotiations with the Town of Hull. Costs have risen for chemicals and electricity and any increases in permitted flows would likely be accompanied by significantly increased costs.

In addition, Cohasset needs to reserve a portion of the current capacity for the normal increase in the flow rate growth in existing North Cohasset Sewer District.

Over the past couple of years, the Sewer Commissioners have been making slight modifications and changes to the district on a case by case basis. This was attempting to solve individual existing house septic system failures without opening up any large areas to new development.

I would expect that the Sewer Commissioners would continue to monitor the current sewage flows to Hull with an eye towards continuing the policy of solving individual or small groups of problem septic areas, but not significantly extending the North Cohasset Sewer District into undeveloped areas.

Before the question could be answered as to "if the sewer district could be expanded" to serve areas such as portions of Forest Avenue, The Town and its engineers would need to determine if the forced sewer mains that were installed already would have sufficient additional capacity to carry the added flows. Also, if the Town of Hull would have to allow additional flows to the proposed areas, and at what cost.

For Planning Board candidates: Cedarmere could best be described as a "sleeping giant." Where does that project stand and what control could the Planning Board exercise over its future development?

PLANNING BOARD/ Charles Samuelson

The Cedarmere project is currently approved by the town. Being an approved project it is up to the developer to commence work. If the developer desires to modify or change the existing plan, then the normal permitting/approval process for the town would be required.

I don't believe it would be proper for me to express an opinion or comment on a specific project that may come before the Planning Board in the future. This is more to the point since there is no information even regarding intent on behalf of the developer to modify the existing plan or what those modifications would entail.

PLANNING BOARD/ Clark Brewer

The goals for this parcel under the (smfrd) senior multi family residential district was to create affordable senior housing and give downsizing seniors reasonable housing options to stay in Cohasset, creating housing diversity that seemed missing. The permit plans was for senior housing 55+ with 105 residential units on 41 acres. The design included attractive carriage style, cottage style and a large manor house. Site work commenced in 2005 with road layout, large earth movement and a sales model was built. The marketing team had an open house in October 2005, with a 2400sf cottage style house and an asking price of just under $1million. Many agreed that this was not the alternative for downsizing seniors expected. Assessed property values at 100 Pond Street and Wheelwright Farms are $400K to $500K.

I know of no recent activity or redevelopment plans in the works. There are serious obstacles to development for this parcel, including the large land acquisition cost and available sewer and septic options.

The project can be built as presently permitted with 105 units, an as of right single-family subdivision or residential cluster development district is 50 units or under chapter 40B with either rental or for sale units. By comparison, a density similar to the Avalon project is 150 units a density allowed under the original overlay district is over 300 units. A larger number of units distributes the land cost better but any substantial change to the project would need to go through permitting process.

The planning board may recommend changes to zoning including an overlay district, it could discourage future 40B projects by recommending a housing plan be created to meet the 10 percent affordable requirement. The planning board could imagine a future use for the parcel and encourage a project with different goals.

For Selectman candidates: "See you in court!" could be the mantra for Cohasset. Can the selectmen do more to control the town's legal costs?

SELECTMAN/ Karen Quigley

Since we live in a litigious society and the more affluent the community the more litigious, the question is: is this the norm or does it reflect a lack of confidence in the fair application of our bylaws and regulations?

If the former, perhaps there is nothing anyone can do. If the latter, the public should take confidence in the fact that, as a rule, the Town prevails. The bad news is we still incur significant legal fees.

What can the Selectmen do?

Oversight is being exercised. The Town Manager monitors and analyzes the town's legal costs by board, by category, in dollars and percentages. FYTD of roughly $107,000, 70 percent is ZBA and Planning Board related and 17 percent is Board of Health related. In these cases a permit is denied, or a permit is granted and is appealed by an abutter. 9 percent is labor related, i.e. negotiation, grievance, and 4 percent is miscellaneous. Note: Cohasset's legal costs are fairly consistent and comparable but we do pay more per capita.

Choice is limited as few firms practice municipal law.

If lack of confidence is the issue, the Selectmen, as the board that sets the overall tone of town government, can encourage transparency, public information, and respect by town boards. It may result in fewer appeals.

The cost of litigation should not weaken the will to defend the decisions of our town boards and commissions, but it is only fiscally prudent to keep an eye on why the town is in litigation.

SELECTMAN/ Fred Koed

We live in a complex and litigious society. This issue has come to the forefront at various times over the years. As a town we have "controls" in the form of by-laws, rules, regulations and codes that need to be enforced to protect the common good. Cohasset would not be our beautiful town if anyone was allowed to run amok with our controls.

I have looked at legal budgets and expenses from at least four perspectives over my last 21 years of public service, having served on the advisory committee, the housing authority, the water commission and the board of selectmen. On the advisory committee and the board of selectmen in particular we studied the legal representation issue.

We've looked at a flat fee structure. We've looked at cost plus structure. We've looked at adding comprehensive cost accounting. When certain boards had larger legal bills, we've worked with those boards and town counsel on strategies to reduce costs. Periodically town counsel will hold a seminar to discuss cost-effective strategies.

There has always been a certain amount of routine annual legal work that needs to be performed no matter what. The ideal way to handle that portion is a flat fee per year for that work, eliminating the cost accounting overhead of too many billing details on reams of paper. The remaining specialized matters are then handled with by more comprehensive itemized billing system and reviewed by the town manager and the selectmen, keeping an eye on expenses.

The last strategy is expenditure oversight. This involves periodic expense reports on how much other departments are spending compared to the budget and historical spending. All town boards and the selectmen's have a responsibility and duty to protect the town's interests and to make sure legal expenses are cost effect and wisely spent.

For School Committee candidate: How important is the METCO program to Cohasset and is it time to revisit Cohasset's participation in light of budget restraints?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Alfred Slanetz

Today's world is highly diverse. Objectively, Cohasset is not. METCO is one way which our school exposes our children to diversity and gives participating children access to a better education than may be available in their own neighborhood. Establishing mutual respect and friendships with people with different backgrounds and experiences is enriching and part of a quality educational experience. As a METCO host family, I can attest that my children have developed empathy, respect for differences and friendship due in part to the friendship with our METCO student and her family over the years.

For the most part, our METCO students appreciate the opportunity that has been given to them. They have parents who care about education. They are traveling a long way to Cohasset every day. They don't want to waste their time. Cohasset's METCO director is a testament to the program's long term success: she was a METCO student in Scituate.

Cohasset currently receives $288,000 annually from the METCO grant. Of this, $100,000 covers transportation and $188,000 covers instructional support. The instructional support pays the METCO Director, Aid/ Bus Monitor and $87,000 in teacher salaries. Cohasset has 47 METCO students; hence the instructional support represents $4,000 per student. However, Cohasset's cost per pupil is $10,702 fully loaded ($8000 if offsets are taken for fees, grants, donations and employee benefits). Thus, through non-METCO revenue (property taxes, fees, donations, grants) Cohasset is funding a METCO shortfall of at least $188,000 per year. An appropriate level of State funding for METCO would be funding of the school at the school's fully loaded per pupil cost. The State needs to become more responsible. In the meantime, the educational value of METCO to our students and the differences we are making in the METCO student's lives are worth the cost.

2. Physical disability.
3. Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by April 5 to be counted.

Election supper is April 3

The Annual Election Supper, a springtime tradition, will be held at the Beechwood Congregational Church on Church Street. Candidates and voters are invited to get together for dinner on Thursday evening, April 3, at 6:30. Dinner will include roast pork, roast potatoes, carrots, Harvard beets, dessert as well as beverages. Before dinner, all candidates will be introduced. Tickets are $10 for adults and $5 for children. Skippers make believers by winning

State title run caps off magical season

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

State Champion. State Champion. State Champion.

Maybe if Cohasset High head coach John LeVangie repeats those words over and over again he will start to believe what transpired this season.

"Everything has happened so fast and it's been so hectic," LeVangie said Tuesday afternoon. "This was a good team no question.

"They came from the back of the pack at 2-2 and played all good teams, especially in the sectionals. I'm starting to believe this now but it's taking a long time to sink in."

The Skippers wrapped up the Div. 4 State title with a 44-36 win over Manchester-Essex. They finished the season with a 23-2 overall record, giving them the best record in Eastern Mass.

Meredith Kelly (So.), Sammi Lehr (Jr.) and Tori Lehr (So.) were all named to the South Shore League all-star team for the SSL champs.

Kelly was named to the All-Garden first team. Her 15 points and game-changing defense in the final earned her the spot.

"That's out of Division 1, 2, 3 and 4 teams so that's pretty impressive," LeVangie said. "She was underrated all year on offense but was an all-star because of her defense."

Kelly also played a big hand in what LeVangie considers a possible turning point in the season.

"At Hull she hit free throws to win the game with less than one second to play," he said. "The kids started to believe they could win after that. And then they started beating teams that they squeaked by the first time by 13 or 14 points."

The 42-year veteran coached Carly Salerno's father Matt and Kayla Farren's father Paul during the 1977-78 and 1978-79 seasons.

"They were incredibly happy, like they won it themselves," LeVangie said about the proud dads. "It meant an awful lot to them and to me."

The Skippers will carry their 21-game win streak into next season. As an added plus, no players will have to come home

CYBSA draft

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association (CYBSA) will hold its roster selection draft Thursday, April 3 at 7:00 p.m. in the Cohasset Middle-High School Library. The purpose of the draft is to allocate players to teams in all Baseball and Softball divisions with the exception of the Major League Baseball Division. Teams in the Major League Baseball division have already been selected.

Leagues included in the draft are: Farm League baseball, Instructional softball, National League baseball & softball, American League baseball & softball, Major League softball and Junior League baseball & softball.

The CYBSA is always looking for coaches. If you are interested in coaching in any of these divisions, please plan on attending the draft.

Little League requires background checks (CORI) on all league volunteers to ensure the safety of the children entrusted to our care. Please bring a photocopy of your license to the draft where you will be asked to fill out the necessary forms. Individuals, however well intentioned, not complying will not be allowed to coach.

If you have any questions about the draft or CORI requirements please contact Erik Golz at (617) 230-2559.

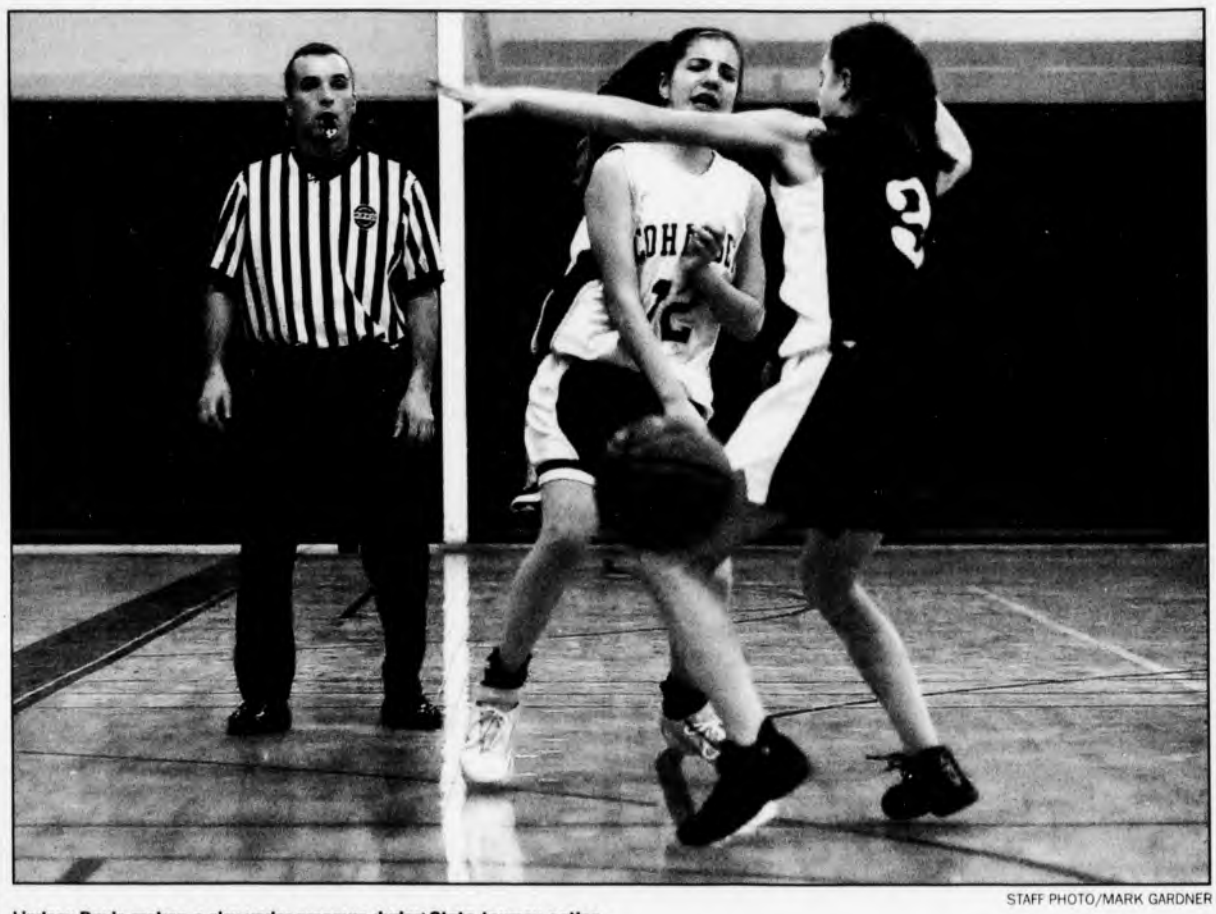
from college for the banner ceremony. The Skippers didn't graduate any seniors.

LeVangie agreed that youthful exuberance proved to be a bonus and not a bane.

"They are young and I do think it helped them at times," he said. "I'm not sure they realized what they were accomplishing. But the juniors were real leaders and that was big."

The State champs will appear in the Little League parade and will also make a trip to the State House to rub shoulders with some of the Beacon Hill bigwigs.

All in a days work for the newest big-wigs in Cohasset.



"You go back ten years ago and there is no girls varsity basketball in Cohasset," LeVangie said. "You go back four years ago and we have ten girls on the varsity and junior varsity combined. Now we have 23 girls in the program and the numbers in the younger programs are fantastic.

"(Popularity) has been growing. There has never really been a solid girls basketball program in school history, but now you have the younger kids looking up to these girls. I walk around town and I see kids playing basketball everywhere now."

Sally Meehan wins writing contest

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

This talented gal will receive a $100 savings bond, tickets to a Celtics game, and attend the awards ceremony on April 13th at TD Banknorth Garden's Sports Museum. Talk about exciting!

Hopefully everyone had a good Easter weekend last week! No school and no work was a fabulous way to begin a well-deserved weekend filled with rest and relaxation. With just over two months left of test taking and waking up before 6:30 a.m., the school days are increasingly hard to endure. Luckily, the cold weather and "gale force" winds offer little reason to want to be outside. These days, even the slightest glimpse of Mr. Sunshine can send students' endorphins into overdrive!

This week, upper classmen and freshmen relished the sounds of silence, at least during first and second periods when the 10th graders established their place in high school by taking the unavoidable MCAS. But don't worry 9th graders, your turn is coming.... and on the bright side, no homework for a week? Middle school kids also participated in practice MCAS making for very calm mornings for all of CHS. Clearly they were saving their suppressed energy for home and lunchtime.

The Jazz Band concert on Thursday was true music to the audience's ears. Always on point, this gifted group proves that Cohasset can breed exceptional talent. Speaking of which, a special congratulations to senior Sally Meehan, who won first place in the Will McDonough Writing Contest for her sports essay. This talented gal will receive a $100 savings bond, tickets to a Celtics game, and attend the awards ceremony on April 13th at TD Banknorth Garden's Sports Museum. Talk about exciting!

Now here is a rundown of the week!

• Monday, March 24: A relatively uneventful return to the classrooms.

• Tuesday, March 25: The 2HB pencils were in full motion as 10th-grade testers tackled the English Composition MCAS. Also, the varsity girls lacrosse team put up their sticks as they scrimmaged against Hingham.

• Wednesday, March 26: The boy's baseball and JV lacrosse stepped on the fields to scrimmage.

• Thursday, March 27: The final day of brain overloading for grades 6,7,8, and 10!

• Friday, March 28: Donning their dancing shoes and snappiest outfits, the future high schoolers stepped out to enjoy a middle school dance.

Well, that's it for me this week. Have a great weekend!

Christine Kent is a senior at CHS. Her column appears weekly in the Mariner.

Wonders of Math and Science

Families, students take part in Osgood evening

South Shore's Astronomical Society member, Mel Macdonald, makes a few adjustments on his Orion Sky Telescope during the Osgood Science and Math Night at the Osgood School last week. Both MacDonald and Michael Marks of The Sky Connection brought the stars and moon a bit closer for the students and families who attended the event.

First-grader Bryan Thomas, 7, shows his Zoob DNA Model that he and his family created for the Osgood School Science and Math Night. Behind him are other children assembling mock DNA models.

Eight-year-old Marina Longo looks through the viewfinder of a Questar Telescope for a better look at the planets during the Osgood School's Science and Math Night. The Sky Connection of Dedham provided the instruments for the event, with technical assistance by chief astro-guide Michael Marks, also a South Shore Astronomical Society member.

Eight-year-olds, Zoe Doherty, left and Emma Earl-Loft, both Osgood School second graders, view the Saltwater Aquarium created by Cohasset High School Marine Science students. The tank is a combination of three tanks filled with plants and fish, as well as a small lobster found in the waters under the Cunningham Bridge.

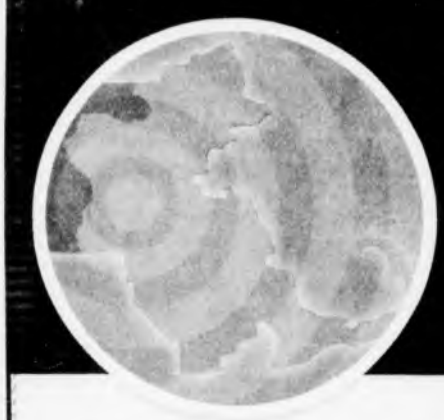
Mel Barrett and daughter Georgia in their kitchen, which is one that will be open for the South Shore Community Center Kitchen Tour.



'Dream' Kitchen Tour is April 11

South Shore Community Center Kitchen Tour will take place from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Friday, April 11. Cost is $25, $30 after March 31. Tickets can be purchased at South Shore Community Center or by calling 781-383-0088. Payment can be made by cash, check or charge.

The history and beauty of the homes participating in the 2008 South Shore Community Center Kitchen tour celebrate both the old and the new and capture the essence of the seaside community of Cohasset. This year, the South Shore Community Center is proud to have the opportunity to showcase five homes. Four of the homes are scattered along the coastline off of Jerusalem Road and one home is directly on Cohasset's historic town common.

One of the homes participating in the tour is the Barrett home. Originally built in 1885, this home sits on a hill overlooking Straight's Pond. The renovation of this home took place in 2003, with the goal of maintaining the architectural integrity of the home while providing the homeowners with modern day amenities. The kitchen, in particular, demonstrates this delicate balance. Designed by Kitchen Concepts of Norwell, this modern-day version of a classic Victorian kitchen combines period details from glass cabinet knobs and white farmer's sink with white Carerra marble countertops, sub-zero refrigerator and Viking stove. The homeowner is working with Kate Dickerson Designs of Hingham and florist Sue Chessia, both of whom volunteered their time to wow visitors with beautiful table settings, arrangements and accents. Also, the Borrowed Butler and Hola will provide light fare.

Tickets for the tour may be purchased by visiting or calling South Shore Community Center at 781-383-0088.

LIBRARY

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Meet Author Michael Tougias – Michael Tougias, author of 14 books, will present a narrated outdoor humor slide presentation at 7 p.m., on Thursday, April 3. Free. This is a Cohasset Reads Together event.

Movie Matinee at the Library – Relax and enjoy a free screening of the classic film "Citizen Kane" starring Orson Welles, Joseph Cotton and Agnes Moorhead, at 11 a.m., on Friday, April 4. Remarkable, influential, and unforgettable drama tracing the rise of publishing mogul, Charles Foster Kane (Orson Welles) from humble beginnings to riches and accolades beyond belief. Based on the life of publishing tycoon William Randolph Hearst, "Citizen Kane" is considered one of the greatest movies of all time. Black and white; not rated; 120 minutes; 1941. Winner of the Academy Award for Best Original Screenplay, 1942. Free admission and free refreshments courtesy of Friends of the Library. Movie site license sponsored by the Friends of the Library and Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

Cohasset Reads Together Finale – It's hard to believe the town-wide reading initiative is coming to a close. The books "Walden" by Henry David Thoreau and "A Walk in the Woods" by Bill Bryson inspired readers to think about the American wilderness and environment. There have been eight weeks of programs and events. The library will have flyers and information available on area walking trails, local environmental groups and reading discussion guides for the books. Enjoy a free granola bar while reminiscing about a favorite Cohasset Reads Together event at 2 p.m., on Sunday, April 6.

FOR CHILDREN

Music and Stories – MamaSteph will perform in the Meeting Room on Mondays from 10:30 to 11 a.m., through the end of April.

Drop In Story Time – Tuesdays, at 10:30 a.m., through the end of April, in the Children's Room.

GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

SAN DIEGO -

Food is an essential part of my school-age daughter's day. When Melanie blurts, "I'm hungry" on vacation, that's my cue to find sustenance immediately or face her wrath, replete with tears and a tantrum.

Yielding to her hunger pangs at SeaWorld San Diego, I had a plate of chicken fingers in front of her in almost record time.

But then, as San Diego's famous son, Dr. Seuss, might say, something strange and truly amazing happened. Melanie was not stuffing her face. In fact, her eyes were the size of doughnuts as she stared in awe at an orca whale doing a back flip, not more than 10 feet from where we were sitting.

We started in San Diego and ended a week later in San Francisco, stopping at some of America's best-known theme parks, world-class zoos and aquariums, and, of course, spectacular beaches. The bulk of our traveling time was spent on Highway 1, the sort of road you see in car ads, where the convertible hugs the wide turns as cliffs plunge to the Pacific below, especially on the S-curves of Big Sur.

While in San Diego, we checked out more animals at the San Diego Zoo. The latest member of the panda family, Zhen Zhen ("Precious"), was born here this past August. While she is too young for prime time, her brother, Su Lin, was wowing the crowds high atop the bamboo tree. The next day we headed 30 miles north of the city to Wild Animal Park. On a hot air balloon ride, we had an exciting bird's eye view of the lions, giraffes, elephants, rhinos and other animals, safari style.

Disneyland, Legoland, Knott's Berry Farm and Universal Studios Hollywood are four of the theme parks located in Southern California. With limited time, we decided to stop only at Legoland. Many of the rides are mellow, even for a preschooler. Still we enjoyed Miniland, a detailed reproduction of American landmarks and cities made out of, you guessed it, millions of Legos.

If you do Disneyland in Anaheim, the latest, greatest attractions are the underwater excursion, Finding Nemo Submarine Voyage, and rocking to the revamped roller coaster, Space Mountain.

California's golden stretch of shoreline seduced us as we headed north on Highway 1 outside of Los Angeles. We stopped at the Santa Barbara pier to watch artists use the sun to draw on driftwood by means of a magnifying glass. We also met Brother Feather, a hippie whose 1976 Dodge van was filled with the detritus of his life.

"For a buck, you can go on in and check it out," said Brother Feather, and my kids didn't hesitate to experience this time travel machine. Inside were smurfs, trolls, the Pink Panther and images of peacemakers like John Lennon and Bob Marley.

For a quick snack, we turned off at the "Copenhagen of the California coast," Solvang. The downtown area is reminiscent of an Old Danish village with small bakeries and gift shops dotted with windmills and thatched roofs. We parked outside the Danish Village Bakery (1529 Mission Drive), owned by the same family for four generations, and tried Aebleskiver, a pancake-like ball, and other treats.

Next stop was Hearst Castle and the dreamy blue-tiled indoor pool, inlaid with 22-karat gold; a real "wow." More natural wows can be found four miles north on the beach at Piedres Blancas, where we watched hundreds of large elephant seals lounging, grunting, wrestling and diving into the Pacific.

Continuing north, the mountains of Los Padres National Forest rise above the Pacific and the road becomes a mix of ups, downs and hairpin turns as you enter Big Sur. A quarter-mile walk at Pfeiffer Burns State Park leads you to the precipitous rock, waterfalls and wildflowers of this paradise.

We spent two nights in Monterey, so we had time to visit one of the nation's most innovative aquariums - the Monterey Bay Aquarium - bike along the waterfront past seals and dine at seafood restaurants on the street known as Cannery Row.

Last stop was San Fran, two hours away. Here we rode the cable cars up and down the hilly city, took a cruise under the Golden Gate Bridge, and had dim sum in Chinatown, trying to convince son Jake to try jellyfish, saying it was just noodles. The highlight, however, was the Exploratorium. Housed within the walls of San Francisco's Palace of Fine Arts, the museum contains countless hands-on activities that investigate the realms of science and art. I was having so much fun that the kids had to tell me when it was time to leave.

Other suggested drive itineraries in California include a five- to six-day trip that continues on Highway 1, north of San Francisco, through some of the world's most magnificent Redwood forest (Avenue of the Giants), stopping at small artsy communities and wineries. This part of the state is still very wild and undiscovered.

Another option is a three- to four-day jaunt into the Gold Country, starting in Sonora, and stopping in the towns of Columbia, Angels Camp and Murphys to tour old gold mines and drink in saloons. Head through the Sierra foothills to Placerville, which used to be named "Hangtown" because of the number of people hung there during the Gold Rush. There are a lot of off-the-beaten-track wineries along the way, and during springtime, the fields are filled with colorful wildflowers.

Another interesting five- to six-day route takes visitors into the desert, past the resorts of Palm Springs, through the moonscapes of the Mojave and into Death Valley. On the way, stop at Pioneertown, built in the 1940s as a western movie set (Roy Rogers was one of the investors).

On Saturday, Feb. 9, Boy Scout Troop 28 from Cohasset participated in the Klondike Derby held at Camp Squanto in Plymouth, along with dozens of teams from across the South Shore.

The Klondike Derby is an annual competition that tests scout's outdoor camping and winter survival skills. Each patrol of five to seven scouts has to transport a sled filled with gear to 10 stations set up around the 650- acre camp. At each station, the patrol has to demonstrate a particular skill. At each station, the patrol is judged on a 50-point scale based on their ability to complete the task correctly and safely, to demonstrate knowledge in the area being tested, and on leadership and teamwork. The participants arrived at the camp at 7 a.m. and had to be at the last station by 3:30 p.m.

Cohasset's Troop 28 entered three patrols with a total of 16 scouts. Each patrol competed separately and all three patrols finished the entire course.

The stations include tests of ability to start fires without the aid of matches, to demonstrate competence with a map and compass, plant and animal track identification, camping and cooking skills, show 15 different knots and lashings, estimating the height of trees and the width of a river

The most dramatic station requires teams to safely get the patrol, and its sled, across a river (using a dry gully as the river). Each patrol lashed logs together to form a bridge, which was pushed, across the river. One scout, secured to safety lines, crossed the bridge carrying ropes. The ropes were secured around a tree on either side of the river and tightened. The scouts then hoisted the sled onto the main rope by hooks on the sleds, and guided it across the river. The remaining members of the patrol then crossed the log bridge with the gear taken from the sled to lighten it. Finally, the ropes were all taken down. All of this had to be done in less than 25 minutes.

The most dramatic station requires teams to safely get the patrol, and its sled, across a river (using a dry gully as the river).

Cohasset's White Owl patrol completed this task with a perfect score of 50. That patrol, lead by Life Scout Tucker Oddliefson, included Derek Benson, Brodie Jackish, Max Reel, Clark Index and Jack Thomae.

Another difficult station required the patrol to construct an emergency shelter. The shelter is required to be large enough for the entire patrol and secure enough to withstand wind, rain and snow. The Delta Patrol achieved Troop 28's high score on this station with a 46. That patrol, lead by Life Scout Christian Quebec, included Thomas Fogarty, Andrew Leighton, Cody Piepenbrink, Jack O'Brien and Julien Geyer.

Cohasset's weak spot in recent years had been the First Aid station, in which the patrol is given an injury victim and is required to demonstrate first aid skills including proper notification of emergency backup, care of lacerations, splinting, poisons and constructing and using an emergency stretcher. All three patrols turned in high scores at this station, lead by the Snake Patrol, which scored a 44. That patrol, lead by Star Scout Robbie Hillman, included Blake Erler, Hugh Gideon-Murphy, Alex Kent and Sasha Nakashima.

All three Cohasset patrols turned in respectable overall scores. The White Owl edged the Delta Patrol by two points, 419 to 417, with the strong-finishing Snake Patrol close behind with 394 points. The troop will continue to work on these skills on its frequent camping and hiking trips, and looks forward to competing again next year.

Troop 28 welcomes boys 11 through 17 who are interested in outdoor adventure, service opportunities and fun. Anyone who is interested should inquire at troop28scoutmaster@comcast.net, or check out the troop's website at www.troop28cohasset.org.

Pembroke Dealer Shocks Community:

"Cars To Sell For Just $29* Down & $99 Per Month"

Pembroke Area Shoppers Express Disbelief But Dealer Remains Optimistic As Unprecedented 4-Day Sale Approaches, March 27th – 30th

Dan Ready
Staff Writer

Pembroke, MA — Mr. Rob McGee, Owner of McGee Pre-Owned Superstore on Route 139 in Pembroke, announced plans today for a great new way to buy cars that's simple and inexpensive. This unique event, also known as the "National Automotive 'Insider' Sales Event," has been sweeping the United States. The customers who take part in this event are on the 'inside' to great savings on Pre-Owned vehicles and pay only $29* down and $99* per month.

The event will be held for four days only, this Thursday, March 27th through Sunday, March 30th, regardless of any weather conditions that arise.

McGee offers a simple explanation for this unprecedented event, "New vehicle sales at our Chevrolet Dealership have been record-breaking. Now we're overstocked with high quality Pre-Owned vehicles including recent lease turn-ins, factory-program cars, recent trade-ins, near new vehicle duplications and bank repossessions that have been shipped to our Pembroke location for immediate liquidation." He adds, "I can't remember the last time so many rare opportunities were available to us at one time, so we decided to let the general public take advantage of these incredible values rather than sell them to wholesalers or strangers at auctions." During the "National Automotive 'Insider' Sales Event," every vehicle will be clearly marked and available for the low down payment of $29*. Every effort will be made to obtain credit approval for those who may have had credit problems in the past.

During this event, the vehicle selection couldn't be any better. Many of them are late model vehicles with low mileage and the balance of their factory warranties remaining. There will be many makes and models from which to choose including Dodge, Chevrolet, Ford, Chrysler, Honda, Nissan and Toyota. An abundance of SUVs will also be featured, including Tahoes, Rav-4s, Grand Cherokees, Explorers, and more.

"Customers Can Purchase A Pre-Owned Vehicle for Just $29* Down and Only $99* Per Month During The "National Automotive 'Insider' Sales Event" We Are Conducting At McGee Pre-Owned Superstore This Weekend."

Rob McGee — Owner

For auto shoppers looking for a very low monthly payment there will be many choices, including a 2004 Toyota Corolla for just $29 down and $99 a month. Sample payments will be clearly marked on vehicles. All you'll need to do is obtain credit approval, pick a vehicle and a payment. It's that simple.

McGee cites another example, a 2005 Chevrolet Impala for only $29* down and $99* per month. For those auto shoppers looking to trade their current vehicle, all trades are welcome, paid off or not. You don't want to miss this unique opportunity to obtain a Pre-Owned car, truck, minivan or sport utility vehicle with an unbelievably low down payment of just twenty-nine* dollars!

In order to assist buyers with loan processing, finance representatives will be on hand for immediate approval and delivery of all vehicles sold during this event.

BIG APPLE CIRCUS HITS BOSTON

30th anniversary tour combines new and old acts

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Paul Binder first learned to appreciate artistic intimacy in the circus experience while earning his living as a juggler on the streets of Paris. It was an earlier, very different job at WGBH-TV, however, that taught the Brooklyn-born Binder – co-founder and artistic director of the Big Apple Circus, which brings its 30th anniversary tour, "Celebrate!," to Boston's City Hall Plaza beginning Saturday – a lesson that has sustained him over the past three decades.

"I was the floor manager for Julia Child on 'The French Chef' when the kitchen set was actually in the old Cambridge Power & Light building and most of 'GBH was in the basement of the Museum of Science," recalled Binder, 65, by telephone from New Jersey last week. "Julia Child was fantastic. I learned as much from her as any other mentor I've ever had about having a passion for your work."

It was his own passion for the intimate European circus experience that led the Dartmouth College graduate, along with partner Michael Christensen, to form the not-for-profit Big Apple Circus and outreach institution in 1977. Since then, the Big Apple Circus has produced annual touring shows combining classic circus elements like clowning, juggling and acrobatics with the theatricality of original music and choreography, lighting, sets and costumes. That tradition continues this year with "Celebrate!," a brand new show that will introduce new acts from all over the world and welcome back some legendary performers who first made their names in the single ring of the Big Apple.

"We looked for great, beloved acts from the past and invited them," explained Binder, who often serves as ringmaster. "Kris Kremo left us 12 years ago, but we're delighted to have him back for this year. He's from Switzerland and he is one of the best solo jugglers alive today. He is a true legend in the world of jugglers. We have Cong Tian back with us from China after a five-year absence. He does some amazing balancing feats on a slim black-wire. The Kovgar Troupe also returns from Russia with their incredible teeterboard act. They fly up to the very top of the tent."

From the Department of Laughter, Grandma (Barry Lubin) clowns around with Rob Slowik, musical director of the Big Apple Circus Band, in "Celebrate!" the all-new 30th Anniversary show of the Big Apple Circus.

The Kovgar Troupe won't be the only Russians getting in on the act this year, according to Binder. Irina Markova returns with her daredevil dogs and hard-to-catch cast. Another returning regular is Barry Lubin as "Grandma the Clown," who is often at the center of Big Apple hijinks.

"I remember seeing some very good circuses when I was a child. And after I completed my training in circus skills, I was recruited to join Noveau Cirque de Paris where I saw how immediately people connected to the acts. When Michael and I came together to start Big Apple, I just knew I had this tremendous urge to create a circus in the intimate form. We always look for virtuoso performers who can make intimate contact with the audience. Then and now, it works beautifully as a type of community gathering around the joy and wonder that only a circus can provide."

Performances of "Celebrate!" begin Saturday, March 29 and run through May 4 under the Big Top on City Hall Plaza in Boston's Government Center. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-931-2787 or go online at bigapplecircus.org.

CIRCUS OF THE SENSES®

On Thursday, April 3 at 11 a.m., hundreds of children with sensory impairments - including students from Norwell's Grace F. Cole Elementary School; Pembroke's New England Village in Pembroke; Hanson's North River Collaborative; Randolph High School; Abington's South Middle School, and the Learning Center for Deaf Children also in Randolph -will gather beneath the Big Apple Circus's Big Top tent at City Hall Plaza to experience the magic and joy of the circus at Circus of the Senses®. This free performance is accomplished by providing headsets to children with vision impairments to hear a lively, running description of the action in the ring narrated by Paul Binder and Michael Christensen. Spotlighted American Sign Language interpreters narrate the show to the hearing–impaired. Following the performance, a group of sight–impaired children will be invited into the Circus ring for a "touch session." They will be able to feel the sawdust, touch the fabric of the elegant costumes and meet some of the performers — both the two–legged and the four–legged ones.

Weymouth-based casting agent is seeking extras for a romantic comedy called "Bride Wars." But her open casting call – which will be held this coming Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Maria Weston Chapman Middle School in Weymouth – is about more than finding locals to share the screen with Kate Hudson (left) and Anne Hathaway.

Weymouth casting agent seeks hundreds of extras

Are you an attractive yuppie? Do you own fine formal attire? Could you pass for a male exotic dancer? If you answered yes to any of these questions, then Jodi Purdy-Quinlan wants to hear from you.

The Weymouth-based casting agent is seeking extras for a romantic comedy called "Bride Wars." But her open casting call – which will be held this coming Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Maria Weston Chapman Middle School in Weymouth – is about more than finding locals to share the screen with Kate Hudson and Anne Hathaway.

Purdy-Quinlan has been casting extras in the Boston area on a freelance basis for years. Now, due in large part to film-friendly tax incentives that first took effect in 2006, she is a casting associate (and essentially the entire Boston office) for New York-based agency Grant Wilfley Casting Inc.

Purdy-Quinlan's new position reflects the movie industry's increased interest in the Massachusetts scene, she said. That increased interest calls for a deeper talent pool.

Right now, Purdy-Quinlan said she has a database of about 10,000 extras in the Boston area, but that's not enough.

"We're really looking for new talent, people who've never done extra work before," she said. "We want them to be introduced to the industry and become part of the talent pool that will be tapped for future films."

More immediately, Purdy-Quinlan said she is looking to fill 300 non-union roles and 500 union roles for "Bride Wars," for which she said she needs "the beautiful people" to try out.

"This is not a blue-collar, working class movie," she said. "This is a movie about high society men and women with a business professional look."

That doesn't mean only rich people should apply, Purdy-Quinlan said. It does mean you should wear your finest formalwear or at least bring pictures of you in it to the casting call.

Treat's gets an extension

No funds allocated for the project

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For an issue bogged down in complexity and fervent viewpoints, the Treat's Pond discussion on the floor of Town Meeting was similarly hard to follow.

In the end, after several amendments, no sum of money was allocated to the federally supported Army Corps of Engineers Treat's Pond saltmarsh restoration project. Instead, a resolution was made to send to Congressman William Delahunt's office. The resolution, proposed by Selectman Fred Koed, expresses the town's interest in the project and the federal funding support along with it, but with a caveat. The town requests additional time (until fall's Special Town Meeting) to review the project proposal more thoroughly.

The resolution was approved after Town Meeting voters spent two hours discussing the article and taking a total of four votes on proposed amendments. Despite the controversial nature of the issue, Treat's Pond failed to draw large numbers to Town Meeting with 292 voi-

Poetry Slam gets applause

Transcendental verse brings seniors, students together

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Despite the years between them, two distinctly different groups came together this week to share their interests and talents with each other.

As a part of the library's Cohasset Reads Together program, Cohasset seniors, from both the Sunrise Assisted Living Center and the Senior Center, and Deer Hill fourth graders were given common ground in transcendental poetry.

Marjorie "Marjie" Murphy, the library's outreach coordinator, has been working with both age groups leading up to Wednesday's Poetry Slam. She was surprised and delighted at the response to transcendental poetry by both groups.

"I can't get over the eagerness of them learning poetry. They ate it right up," says Murphy, who has been visit-

Election Saturday

Sewer Commission race tops the ballot

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The polls will open promptly at 8a.m. tomorrow, Saturday (April 5), and voters will choose a new crop of representatives to Cohasset town government. Although the majority of candidates are running unopposed, there is one race for a seat on Sewer Commission.

Given there is only one contest, voter turnout could be low. Town Clerk Marion Douglas is hoping to get 20 percent of voters to the polls. "But, it would be nice to get more," said Douglas.

As was learned last year with a last-minute write-in campaign for a School Committee seat, anything could happen on Election Day.

"After last year (a write-in campaign) is on my mind, but I have a broad base of supporters that I hope will not take my election for granted and will get out and vote," said Selectman candidate Karen Quigley.

Incumbent Selectman candidate Fred Koed is making no predictions on the existence or not of a write-in campaign. He did say all unopposed candidates do have an opponent known as "blank votes."

"I urge all citizens to come out and show your support to those that volunteer for town government," Koed stated in an e-mail. "Since there is just one contest, turnout is expected to be low, so every vote counts even more than normal."

The sole race on the ballot is for a three-year seat on the Sewer Commission between Wayne Sawchuk and Jim Dow.

For Sawchuk, the campaign was much

No tolerance for trespassing on tracks

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police Chief James Hussey said even before the Greenbush train came on line police warned there would be a "no tolerance" policy for anyone found walking by the tracks.

"It is critical that people understand the seriousness of this issue – it could result in critical injury or death," Hussey said.

Last Thursday (March 27) police put the policy into action. At 6 p.m., the dispatch center received reports of a man walking on the train tracks in the area of the Sohier Street crossing.

Within minutes, a Cohasset officer saw the man walking inbound on the right-of-way toward the Cohasset Station. Police notified the commuter rail dispatcher to hold the train at the station while the man, later identified as Branden Galpin, 22, of 104 Green St., Rockland, was taken off the tracks and away from danger.

Galpin was arrested and charged with trespassing on the railway, a violation of state law. During inventory at booking, police also found Galpin had marijuana in his possession. He was also charged with possession of a Class D substance.

He was arraigned on the charges Friday (March 28) at Hingham District Court.

Cable repairman

A concerned citizen contacted police last week after a man came to his house claiming to work for the local cable provider. Although he presented an ID, the car he was driving was unmarked.

The caller notified police several hours later and police could not find the man or the car. Chief Hussey said he encourages citizens to contact police with concerns about suspicious activity but to do so as soon after the incident as possible. "That way we can get right down there and check the area," he said.

MV accidents

• A 2008 Chevrolet driven by a Hingham resident was heading south on King Street (Route 3A) near Sandcastles when it stopped to turn left into a curb cut and a 2000 Jeep struck it in the rear. The driver of the Jeep was a Cohasset resident whom police cited for following too closely and failure to use care when stopping. The accident occurred at 4:46 p.m. on Tuesday (March 25).

• A about 11 a.m. on Wednesday (March 26) a Scituate resident, driving a 2005 Toyota, was backing out of a driveway on Beach Street and hit a stonewall. Police said the driver complained about another car passing through on Beach Street that caused the accident. Although initially reported as a hit and run, the cars did not make contact, police said.

• A witness provided police with the license plate number of a 1998 Mercury that was traveling south on S. Main Street when it sideswiped a 2001 Acura that was parked on the south side of the road. The Mercury continued on and the witness told police that the operator may not have realized the cars made contact. The driver of the Mercury was contacted and returned to exchange papers.

The Toyota hit the front passenger side of the Dodge by the wheel. There were three occupants in the Toyota and one in the Dodge. All were checked out at the scene and no one was transported to the hospital. The operator of the Toyota was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic, police said.

• A 1999 Ford operated by a Cohasset resident was backing up from a driveway on Pond Street and backed into a 2003 Toyota that was on Pond headed toward Route 3A. The driver of the Ford was cited for failure to use care when backing up. The mishap occurred at about 1:15 p.m. on Saturday (March 29).

Vandalism

A Sprint employee doing routine maintenance on the cell tower near the train station last Friday (March 28) reported cables were damaged and a copper grounding plate was apparently stolen. Police are investigating.

Graffiti

Police are investigating fresh graffiti on the wall by the tennis courts off Bancroft Road by Milliken Field. The vandal used white spray paint to leave his or her mark, police said. A caller reported the graffiti last Friday morning and followed up with police the next day.

Varnish

A woman called the emergency dispatch center after her landlord apparently used varnish on a downstairs apartment and the fumes forced her to have to move out for the night. Chief Hussey said she was able to spend the night with a friend. He said the landlord was notified.

Larceny

A truck rim, scrap aluminum and scrap metal, and a brake drum are among the items believed stolen from a car repair business near the Scituate line. The theft was reported on Saturday. The business has turned over some evidence and police are reviewing surveillance tapes, Chief Hussey said.

Dog bites dog

Police responded to a 9-1-1 call on Sunday after a dog apparently bit a neighbor's dog on Beechwood Street. In this case "everyone knows everyone else," Chief Hussey said. The dog that was bitten was on a leash when the other dog bit it. The owner of the offending dog agreed to cover any veterinary costs, Hussey said.

Razor blade

Police think a razor blade found by a concerned resident while playing with her kids at the Beechwood Ball Park last week was litter. There was no evidence that there was an attempt to cut down the basketball nets, police said.

School board violates Open Meeting Law

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Norfolk County District Attorney's Office has determined the Cohasset School Committee violated the Open Meeting Law by improperly citing the reason for an executive session held on Jan. 10.

On Wednesday night, School Committee chairman Rick Flynn publicly acknowledged the violation.

Howie Altholtz of 4 Cedarledge Lane filed the Open Meeting Law complaint on March 3. He alleged the committee violated the Open Meeting Law by going into an executive session to discuss two topics, the second of which he did not think was valid.

Under the Open Meeting Law, all meetings of governmental bodies are open to the public and anyone is allowed to attend, with the exception of executive sessions. Executive sessions may be held in private for a limited number of reasons, including matters pertaining to personnel, litigation, and contract negotiations. The purpose for the executive session must be stated and every board member must vote individually in order to enter into executive session. The board must state whether it will reconvene the open session at the end of the executive session.

According to the Jan. 10 executive session minutes, the School Committee stated as its purpose for going into executive session "to discuss strategy with respect to litigation."

During the executive session, two topics were discussed. The first was in regard to the Superior Court judgment on the Lewis family's special education case and what, if any, steps should be taken by the committee.

The second discussion was in regard to pending litigation against the Town of Middleboro, Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh's former employer. A former Middleboro student and his parents name Walsh, along with other school officials and the town of Middleboro, as defendants in a suit. The suit alleges the town and its officials failed to warn parents and students about a former teacher's alleged inappropriate conduct and contact with students in Middleboro and at a prior position at a parochial school. The failure, the suit claims, caused serious physical and emotional injury to their family and increased the likelihood of danger to the student. The student was sexually assaulted shortly after the teacher was fired from the Middleboro school system.

The executive session took place two days after the Patriot Ledger ran a front-page story detailing Walsh's involvement in the lawsuit.

In her ruling, Assistant District Attorney Trisha Lee found the stated purpose of the executive session for the first part was valid because it discussed ongoing litigation involving the School Committee.

"The second part of the January 10th executive session did not involve ongoing litigation or anticipated litigation in response to a proposed action by the Committee. Thus, the Committee's stated reasons for the second part of the executive session, litigation, was not the actual reason for the discussion."

Although the district attorney's ruling indicates the discussion about Dr. Walsh "might have been a proper topic for an executive session, the Committee's stated purpose failed to properly clarify this purpose."

One of the provisions of executive session is to discuss the reputation and character of an employee, but whether that would have been appropriate was not determined in the district attorney's ruling.

School Committee chairman Flynn acknowledged during the Wednesday night meeting the committee had violated the Open Meeting Law.

"We try very wholeheartedly to stick to the provisions of the Open Meeting Law," said Flynn. A letter from the school's counsel to the district attorney acknowledges that the committee violated the law and states the committee agrees that "in the future it will fully and strictly comply with all provisions of the Open Meeting Law."

"Since there is a whole office devoted to Open Meeting Law violations, this isn't the first time it's happened and probably won't be the last," said Flynn.

School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said the violation serves a "good reminder" to the committee of Open Meeting Law.

When reached for comment, Altholtz said he filed the complaint after receiving a copy of the Jan. 10 executive session minutes. He received those specific minutes after requesting from Flynn a copy of the first meeting where the Middleboro lawsuit involving Walsh was disclosed or discussed.

"This all began when parents simply wanted information about the rash of sudden, mysterious and secret teacher terminations (in Cohasset). That relates directly to children's safety in the schools," said Altholtz. He believed Walsh's case should have been discussed in public session, given Walsh's involvement in the Middleboro case was already public knowledge.

"(The School Committee) responds to widespread community concerns about secret teacher terminations and undisclosed negligence lawsuits by holding a secret meeting that was declared illegal by the District Attorney's office. I think actions speak for themselves," said Altholtz in a phone interview.

25,000 Books Being Sent Overseas to Local Troops

By Bob Ticehurst

Got Books, a local organization which accepts and reuses donations of books, has a mission: to send a minimum of 25,000 books overseas to local troops in 2008. The company collects donations of books, CDs, DVDs, and videos through a free home pick-up service, as well as through their 215 local drop-off containers. As donations come in, each item is sorted to determine its most appropriate purpose, and for many items that purpose may now be sending them overseas to a military member through their 'Books for Troops' program.

The mission of this program is to provide local servicemen and women with engaging and high quality books to read while stationed overseas. During the sorting process, books are hand-picked by Got Books employees, with the aim that each will be appropriate and enjoyable to its recipient. Packages of about 100 books will be sent to each service member, accompanied by a letter from Got Books wishing luck and saying thanks for their service. Got Books handles and pays for all labor and shipping costs.

Your book donations make this and many other programs possible. Donating books allows teachers to get free books for their classrooms, schools, libraries and other groups to get the items they need, and nonprofit groups to raise money through book sales and fundraising.

Do you know someone who is serving in the U.S. Armed Forces overseas who would like to receive a package of books? To submit the name and address of a loved one overseas or to donate books, please call 978-396-6019 or visit www.GotBooks.com/troops.

Girls basketball state champs recognized

Town Meeting welcomed and honored the State Champion Cohasset High School girls' basketball team for its exciting and successful season. Cohasset High Athletic Director Ron Ford called the season "an incredible run."

Cohasset coach John LeVangie said he was honored to have coached such a great basketball team and to have been a part of the great community spirit surrounding the team.

"I'd also like to thank the town for providing such a beautiful school and gym to play in."

— Kayla Farren

"No town or city has the support we had," said LeVangie, who introduced each member of the team to Town Meeting. Kayla Farren thanked the school administration for providing 11 buses to transport fans to the TD Banknorth Garden for the state championship game.

"I'd also like to thank the town for providing such a beautiful school and gym to play in," said Kayla. "This has been an amazing experience I'll never forget."

Congratulations

about education. The fact there was a race for the Sewer Commission seat offered the opportunity for discussion on many of the issues facing the commission, he said.

"Prior to the race I think very few people knew what the Sewer Department and the Sewer Commission did," said Sawchuk. "We're getting out information about the issues involving sewer and the possible solutions."

Although this is Dow's first try for public office, he said his experience as a supervisor for the Hingham Sewer Department made him familiar with most of the topics, issues and concerns that have been asked of him during the campaign.

"Running for office has certainly shed some light on people's ideas, wishes and expectations. As a customer oriented person, I enjoyed the (campaign) trail and learning from area residents," said Dow in an e-mail.

Both Sewer Commission candidates hope their race will bring citizens to the polls.

"There seems to be enough sewer use customers that are knowledgeable about the system and its operation...to make it a respectable turnout," said Dow.

"Since there is just one contest, turnout is expected to be low, so every vote counts even more than normal."

— Selectman Fred Koed, candidate for reelection

"I hope with just this one race people will come out to vote, it only takes a minute to vote, and it shows support for the unopposed candidates as well," said Sawchuk.

At the deadline for candidate nomination papers, an open two-year seat on the Recreation Commission was left without a balloted candidate. However, Abigail Alves of 52 Stockbridge St. has announced she plans to run for the seat as a write-in candidate.

Alves, 45, was involved in the recreation department many years ago serving as both a summer program counselor in high school and the playground director during her college years. With two grade school age daughters, Alves said she'd like to become involved again.

"I'd like to bring more opportunity for programs for older kids — middle school age especially," said Alves. She will be at the polls Saturday to answer any questions voters may have.

The other unopposed candidates who were not mentioned above: Daniel Evans (Town Moderator); Marion Douglas (Town Clerk); Alfred Slanetz (School Committee); Sheila Evans, Rodney Hobson, Mary Lou Lawrence (Board of Library Trustees, 3 seats); Mary Granville (Board of Assessors); Robin Lawrence (Board of Health); Charles Samuelson (Planning Board, 5-year seat); Clark Brewer (Planning Board, 3-year seat); Roseanne McMorris (Recreation Commission, 5-year seat); and Glenn Pratt (Water Commission).

Polls will be open from 8a.m. to 6p.m. at the Town Hall Auditorium.

Duxbury resident looking to be one of three Obama delegates in the 10th district

By Andria Farrell
ANFARREL@CNC.COM

Duxbury resident, and Class of 2000 Duxbury High School graduate Marissa Doran is hoping to be one of three delegates from the Massachusetts 10th Congressional District to head to Denver Colorado to cast ballots for Barack Obama.

Doran needs to bring at least 250 people from Plymouth County, Quincy, Weymouth, Cohasset, Cape Cod and the Islands to the caucus being held this Saturday, April 5, at 1 p.m. at Plymouth South High School.

Doran said the delegate section is particularly important this year because of the contested primary, and it is important the Obama campaign send people to Denver who won't be swayed to change their vote.

"This is a great opportunity," she said. "We want to make sure committed Obama people get a chance to go to the convention. It has been a ceremonial honor prior, but this year the primary is contested, so it takes on a very different meaning."

"History is a useful way to look at the world. History asks you to look at the information and figure it out for yourself."
—Marissa Doran

Eight months ago Doran returned from a two year study in England, where she was a Rhodes Scholar reading for graduate degrees in History and African Studies at Oxford. Since returning from England she has been serving on the Steering Committee for Obama for America and as director of strategy for ActBlue, the nation's largest source of funds for Democrats. ActBlue produces a set of online tools that allow Democrats to raise money for the candidates of their choice, and it's revolutionized the world of grassroots politics. Because of that work, the campaign encouraged her to run for one of the seats from the Massachusetts 10th she said.

"I think he (Obama) is the right candidate for right now," Doran said. "He is conscious of being a better citizen and global issues; that is the chief reason I am behind him."

Doran is a graduate of Williams College where her work on green buildings and children's theatre led her to be named a Truman scholar. She grew up on a small farm in Duxbury, and was deeply involved in music and AFS, the international exchange program. Bitten by the history bug while studying history at Duxbury High School, Doran continued to be passionate about the subject through her college studies.

"History is a useful way to look at the world," she said. "History asks you to look at the information and figure it out for yourself."

The 10th Congressional District DNC Delegate Caucus for Senator Barack Obama is being held this Saturday, April 5, at Plymouth South High School, 490 Long Pond Road, Plymouth, at 1 p.m. sharp. Plan to arrive at 12:45, as caucuses start on time.

Lecture by Peter Alden

"Invasive Aliens in Your Backyard," a talk by Peter Alden, author and naturalist, will take place from 7:30 to 9 p.m., on April 17, at the Lightkeepers' Residence, Cohasset Harbor.

The Gulf Association and Cohasset Garden Club will co-sponsor this lecture by Alden, a naturalist, lecturer, ecotourism guide and author of 15 books on North American and African wildlife, including the "National Audubon Society's Regional Field Guide Series." He is considered to be an authority on birds and larger mammals of the world and is often consulted by the media and ecotourism industry for his expertise. He is also an entertaining and sought-after lecturer on topics that include world wildlife, the Polar regions, invasive plants and biodiversity of the northeast. He originated Massachusetts Biodiversity Days with Dr. Edward O. Wilson and managed this event statewide for four years in the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs.

Alden will lead a walk to observe local birds and botanicals, from 4 to 5:30 p.m., on April 17, beginning at Hunter's Pond.

To register for the evening lecture or the nature walk, send an email to acgranville@mobilearn.net.

New date for Republican Spring Dinner

Cohasset Republican members and friends are invited to the annual Spring Dinner, which will take place at 6:30 p.m., on Wednesday, May 7, at Second Congregational Church, next to Town Hall. Earlier, there was a different date that caused many conflicts.

Elected officials will be invited to give their perspective on experiences in office and the status of the town.

"Congratulations on your selection as a 2008 Dean's Scholar! The faculty and deans of the College of Arts and Sciences hope to extend their personal congratulations with a dinner in your honor on Tuesday, April 1, at 6 p.m. Once again, congratulations on your extraordinary achievements. You and your fellow scholars represent the most select and distinguished group of students at Boston College, I look forward to meeting you on April 1st. Patrick J. Maney, Dean." Sally Meehan with two of Will McDonough's children, Cara McDonough and Sean McDonough, at the Sports Museum.

Meehan wins writing contest!

Sally Meehan, a 12th-grader at Cohasset High School, was chosen as a winner of the 2008 Will McDonough Writing Contest presented by The Sports Museum. The contest, which was sponsored by the Boston Globe and Bank of America, was open to students in grades four through 12, and received more than 1,800 entries. A winner was selected from each grade.

Meehan's essay, "Victory Through Determination," will be displayed in The Sports Museum's Will McDonough exhibit. Meehan and other contest winners will also attended an award ceremony and Celtics game at the TD Banknorth Garden April 2.

"We're thrilled about the widespread participation in the contest," said Michelle Gormley, education director of The Sports Museum. "Everyone did such a great job, it was really difficult for the judges to choose."

The contest was designed to encourage the development of language and writing skills while incorporating the topic of sports and such concepts as leadership, teamwork, respect and perseverance. The winning essays were chosen by editors and writers from the Boston Globe. Suggested essay ideas included "good sports/bad sports,", "what makes a team great" and "character counts." The students were judged on how well they organized and expressed their ideas and how they addressed the topic.

Will McDonough, a Boston Globe columnist of 44 years, was the Globe's only sports writer to be nominated for the Pulitzer Prize. He passed away in January 2003. McDonough was a mentor to young writers and for this reason, The Sports Museum and his colleagues from the Globe dedicated this contest in his memory.

Located at the TD Banknorth Garden, the Sports Museum preserves and showcases the rich sports heritage of New England through a collection of artifacts, multimedia, works of art and interactive exhibits. The Sports Museum is a 501(C)(3) nonprofit educational organization dedicated to using sports to teach the values of leadership, respect and cooperation to youth while honoring citizens and athletes of New England.

(Above) Emcee Rich Ofsthun and School Committee member Lucia Flibotte host last year's PSO Telethon. The event has raised more than $20,000 for the schools over the past three years. Live from Cohasset! PSO Telethon in fifth year

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Lights, camera, action!

The cameras will start rolling promptly at 7p.m. next Thursday (April 10) to begin the fifth annual PSO Telethon. A fundraiser that has grown both in popularity and size, the PSO Telethon has raised over $20,000 for the schools in each of the last three years.

Residents can tune in on Comcast channel 22 to see the talented kids (and some adults) that live among them. Students spanning nearly all grade levels will showcase individual and group talents for the viewing audience —dance, song and comedy will all be a part of the live telecast.

As far as fundraisers go, the PSO telethon committee says their event is unusual, "I don't know of any other schools that televise a fundraising event," says Claudia McKeon, chair of the PSO Telethon Committee. "It's pretty unique that residents can tune in to see their friend, neighbor, sister or grandchild on TV."

To bring the PSO Telethon to fruition is a team effort by a group of PSO parents, but has been made successful through support from the community, says McKeon. For example, local businesses donate raffle prizes, parents offer up items for the online auctions, local companies sponsor the event, residents call in donations and the talented kids get up on stage to perform.

"The whole event has a nice community feel to it," says McKeon.

Over the past five years, the PSO Telethon has had some growing pains. The first year they went on air without sound or television feed and the whole operations had to be moved from the high school auditorium to the library.

"Over the past five years there have been a lot of glitches, some were funny, some were stressful. But, we did overcome," said McKeon. The PSO Telethon committee is hoping the fifth year will yield a seamless production.

"People in Cohasset have been very patient and very generous," says Nancy Froio, who oversees the talent portion of the telethon.

"It's always a challenge to make it fun," says Rich Oftshun, co-emcee of the PSO telethon. But, other PSO telethon committee members say Ofsthun's quick (and quirky) sense of humor works perfectly for the nearly three-hour live show.

Ofsthun credits co-emcee and current School Committee member, Lucia Flibotte, with keeping the telethon focused on its purpose — raising money for PSO and the Cohasset schools

The idea for a PSO Telethon was born out of a past fundraising effort by the PSO where parents would call other parents and ask them to contribute to the PSO. Five years ago, the PSO decided to turn the idea on its head. Instead of cold calling, the telethon makes contributions voluntary and involved the kids.

"In the first year, we surpassed the phone drive," says McKeon.

The PSO, or Parent Schools Organization, is a parent volunteer driven group devoted to providing support to Cohasset schools through fundraising, organizing and donating time

The money raised by the telethon goes directly back into classrooms at all three school buildings. Teachers can apply for grants to enhance the classroom experience through innovative programs or supplies. Last year, the PSO funded the middle-high school adoption of the Anti-Defamation League's peer leadership program and along with the Cohasset Education Foundation the technology lab at the middle-high school. Throughout the school year, the PSO sponsors curriculum enrichment programs in the Deer Hill and Osgood schools.

Knowing the donations are going to a worthy cause isn't the only reward one could get by donating — a raffle is held when the phone lines close shortly after 9p.m. Raffle prizes are awarded in different categories, for donations of $25, $50 and $100. A $100 donation will enter your name to win a romantic getaway to the Boston Harbor Hotel or a double kayak and other prizes.

In conjunction with the live telethon and raffle, there is an online auction with over 30 items to bid on. A vacation to a Costa Rican villa, an autographed Tim Wakefield baseball, Deer Hill Principal for a Day, and an iPod Touch are just a few of the items. Bidding opened this morning (Friday) at 9a.m. and will conclude next Friday, April 11 at 9p.m.

ing with the seniors and the kids over the last month.

"It's interesting to see what comes out an individual and see what people are thinking about during different stages of life," says Murphy. "It's nice to be able to spark their interest and let them know they can be creative in words as well as other things. They have the ability to be an artist with words."

While the Cohasset Reads Together program has centered on two books — "Walden" by Henry David Thoreau and "A Walk in the Woods" by Bill Bryson, the library put together a separate program for the seniors and students to make the themes and ideas presented in the books more accessible.

The goals of the community reading program were to foster a love of reading and a sense of community for all ages, to provide a forum for public discourse about environmental issues, and to strengthen the library's role as the cultural, educational and social center of the Cohasset community.

"Although our targeted audience was all-inclusive, collaborating with the Cohasset Schools and with the elderly clients of our outreach program for the homebound were special priorities," says Library Director Jackie Rafferty.

The decision to use transcendental poetry to reach both segments of the population was multifaceted, says Rafferty.

"Recognizing that value of poetry as a powerful tool of human expression and communication, our objective was to foster an appreciation and understanding of poetry, and to introduce the concept of transcendentalism through the verse of such noted transcendentalists as Henry David Thoreau, William Ellery Channing and Ralph Waldo Emerson," says Rafferty.

Murphy, with the help of reference librarian Gayle Walsh, put together a program on transcendental poetry. After soaking up the information, the participants were invited to write their own poems using their knowledge of transcendental poetry.

"The Poetry Slam is the logical culmination for this exciting program, offering the children and seniors the opportunity to come together and share and celebrate their original poetry," says Rafferty.

On Wednesday, 40 seniors and about 20 fourth graders attended the event held at the Our World Discovery Center. Individuals were invited to step up to the microphone and share their creative works with the group.

In addition to sharing poetry, the seniors and children shared pizza provided by Cohasset House of Pizza.

As a culminating activity, Murphy couldn't be more satisfied with the results of the Poetry Slam.

"It's something the senior and the kids enjoyed doing together," says Murphy. "The whole experience has been really rewarding."

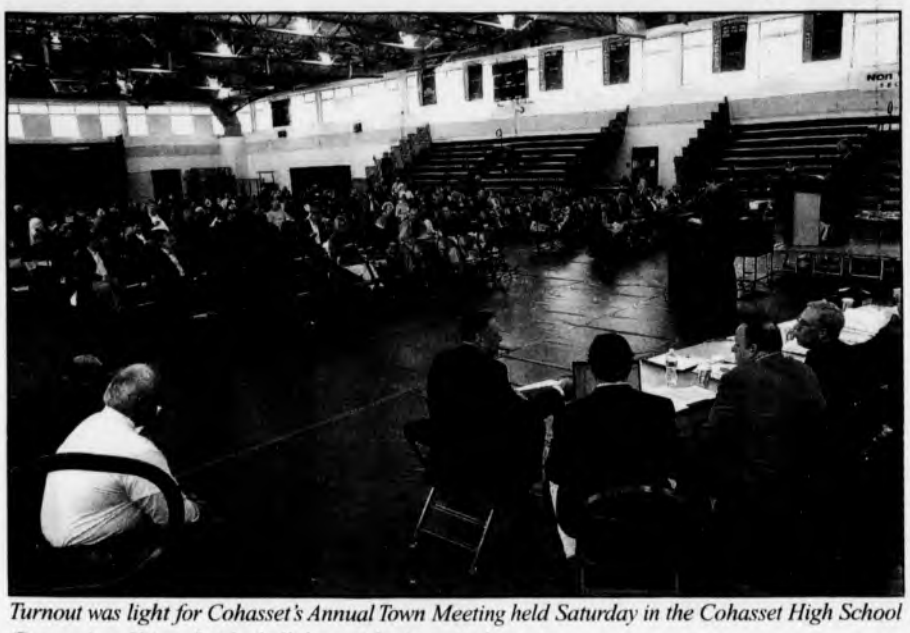
Town Meeting

Budget breeze; override likely next year

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM



The fiscal 2009 budget was presented as a balanced budget without an override and the voters had no problems with it. Following Town Manager Bill Griffin's presentation of the budget, there were no questions or comments from the floor of Town Meeting. Then, the operating budget passed with a unanimous vote.

Although it was a balanced budget for the second year in a row, Selectmen Chairman Gary Vanderweil cautioned it would be difficult to do it again next year, "although it is still early, we should be mentally preparing ourselves for an override next year."

Advisory Committee chairman Sam Wakeman echoed Vanderweil's sentiments.

"For the last two years we have had no override requests. This may sound good but it is definitely negatively impacting our core operating budgets," said Wakeman. "We are slowly moving forward to our goals. This is being achieved through the hard work and belt tightening of all town departments."

A tax levy of $26,502,911 is projected for fiscal 2009, an increase of just over four percent above the current year. Of special note is that this budget is the second consecutive year with a no override budget. The percent increase for an average tax bill (based on a property value of $825,000) will be 2.26 percent, or a $198 increase. The operating budget will be $36,374,463, a 2.79 percent increase over fiscal 2008. The school department budget is recommended at $14,316,397, an increase of 4.6 percent, or $629,997 over the current year.

Turnout was light for Cohasset's Annual Town Meeting held Saturday in the Cohasset High School Gymnasium. Voters finished all the articles in a single session.

Clean sweep for Community Preservation projects

In a break from past Town Meeting, the Community Preservation article was done in one fell swoop — 10 sub-articles were approved in one motion on Saturday. In past years, each project was taken up one by one, each with a separate discussion and vote.

After a short explanation of each proposed project from Community Preservation Committee chairman Stuart Ivimey, there was only one question from the floor.

A total of $778,679 spread over eight projects and two housekeeping items was approved unanimously. The approved projects include: Town Hall restoration project (exterior work, $300,000); the installation of six raingardens in the James Brook watershed ($88,500); the Housing Partnership's request for perc tests on town-owned property off Smith Place and Pleasant Lane ($20,000); restoration and preservation work at the Historical Society ($51,700); purchase of land in the Brass Kettle watershed ($175,000); restoration of town archives ($50,000); construction of the culvert under Border Street, between the Gulf River and harbor ($35,000); installation of a fire sprinkler system at the American Legion George H. Mealy Post 118 ($20,000); and debt service for a open space acquisition ($38,479).

Assuming a 50 percent match from the state, the town will have just over $200,000 in their accounts (approximately $176,000 in the community housing sub-account) going into the next fiscal year.

The Planning Board withdrew its application for what could have been a controversial CPC project involving a private gift from Margin Street resident, Peter Roy, to study the waterfront business district.

Stabilization funds approved

Town Meeting supported the creation of two new stabilization funds on Saturday. Under recent state legislation, municipalities may now create special purpose stabilization funds. The establishment of a capital stabilization fund and a post-retirement health insurance liability stabilization fund will now give both issues a dedicated funding source.

The capital stabilization fund was supported by the Board of Selectmen, the Advisory Committee and the Capital Budget Committee. Selectman Paul Carlson described it as a fund to enable a stable level of funding over time to capital purchase and maintenance. The stabilization fund will decrease the town's reliance on free cash to make capital investments. With the affirmative Town Meeting vote, a total of $250,000 will be transferred to the new fund by the close of fiscal 2008.

The post-retirement stabilization fund creates a funding mechanism for health insurance expenses for future retired town employees. A total of $100,000 will be transferred to the fund following the Town Meeting vote.

A vote of Town Meeting is needed to transfer funds in or out of the stabilization fund and can only be used for another purpose if Town Meeting approves.

Both votes to create the stabilization funds were unanimous.

Town officials honored

Town Meeting voted to honor town officials with proclamations for their dedication and service to the Town and its citizens. All commendations were adopted unanimously by Town Meeting.

Retiring Recreation Director Jack Worley was honored with a commendation for his over 30 years of dedicated service to the town.

"He has always served with a smile on his face and a good word for everyone," said Selectman Fred Koed. Worley said a few words following the reading of the commendation, lamenting how time has passed so quickly and thanking the town, "it's been a pleasure."

Current Selectmen Chairman Gary Vanderweil will complete his three-year term this week was given a proclamation for both his work as Selectman and his 18-year stint on the Sewer Commission.

Retiring Public Health Nurse Judy Fitzsimmons was recognized for service in that role for over 20 years. She served 15 years under the auspices of the Social Service League of Cohasset and seven as a town employee.

Ray Kasperowicz, who is leaving the Sewer Commission after nine years of service, was honored for his service. Kasperowicz also served a three-year stint on the Advisory Committee and another three-year stint on the Personnel Committee.

Lastly, James Gilman was commended for his six years of service on the Advisory Committee, the maximum allowed.

Voting Saturday

Your vote counts on Saturday.

Just ask candidates for the Sewer Commission, Wayne Sawchuk and Jim Dow.

We can assure you they would appreciate your vote.

Although the Sewer Commission is the only race in this year's Town Election – your vote is still important.

At the very least, Saturday provides an opportunity to exercise your right to vote in our democracy. It is a right that too many of us take for granted.

Saturday, Mr. Dow and Mr. Sawchuk could win or lose by a single vote.

So if you are wondering if your vote really makes a difference, take a look at these local true stories about what happened when that one person stayed home on Election Day.

• In the late 1980s, Steve Ivas was elected to the water board in Norwell by a margin of a single vote over Al Gunderway.

• In 1990, John Culhane defeated John Burt by exactly one vote in a race for the Holbrook planning board.

• In June, 1997, Sandwich defeated a $1.7 million Proposition 2 1/2 override by one vote. There was a recount, and the override passed by a single vote.

• In Braintree in 1991 there was a tie for tax collector between Vincent Joyce and James Sullivan. A recount gave Mr. Joyce the job by three votes.

• In 1839, Marcus Morton was elected governor of Massachusetts by one vote out of 102,966 cast.

• In 1910, Charles Bennett Smith defeated de Alva Stanwood Alexander by a single vote in a race for Congress in New York.

• The Afro-Shirazi Party won a majority in the Zanzibar legislature by a single vote in 1961. That one-vote margin was supplied by the delegate from the Chake-Chake District, who won his seat by a single vote.

The following is our personal favorite,

Once upon a time, a man named Randy Luthi and another fellow named Larry Call ran for the Wyoming Legislature from Jackson Hole.

They each got 1,941 votes.

There was a recount.

Again, they each got 1,941 votes.

The tie was finally resolved when a ping-pong ball bearing the name Luthi was drawn from a 10-gallon hat belonging to Gov. Mike Sullivan!

If you are among Cohasset's 5,103 registered voters – we hope you will exercise your right to vote on Saturday.

The polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Town Hall.

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Alternative Energy Committee, April 8 & May 13, 7:30 p.m.

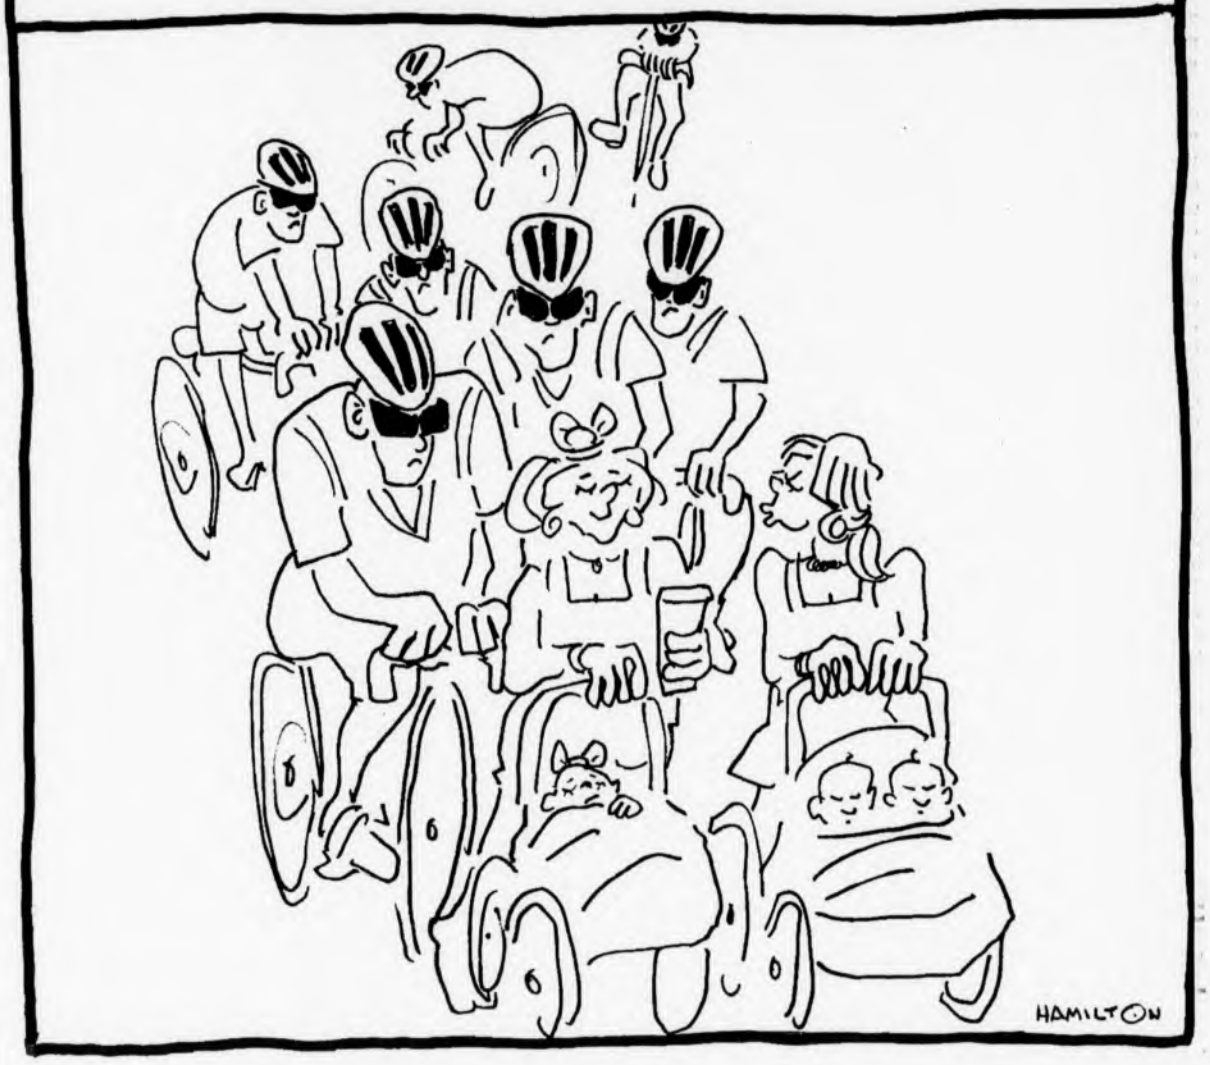
Design a logo for Cohasset

In order to create a stronger identity/image for the Town of Cohasset, the EDC needs your good ideas and artistic talents to fulfill its objective of better marketing the town we are all so proud of.



All are invited to participate in a friendly and fun competition: professionals or amateurs, grownups or kids. The winner will receive his/her logo on tee shirts, the public recognition of the community, not to mention "the artist's immortality."

The mission is to design a graphic identity for Cohasset that encapsulates and expresses best the beauty or the unique character of the town. You are free to use scenes, monuments, symbols, letters, or whatever, so long as it evokes Cohasset and no other town. The dominant color that needs to be used is the blue/green shade of PMS 3275*.

The deadline to submit your designed logo to the EDC, care of Alain Pinel, EDC, c/o Town Clerk's Office, Town Hall is April 11. A special Logo Selection Panel will be created (composed of one member of the South Shore Art Center, one graphic specialist and one member of the EDC), to choose the best design.

The winning logo will be trademarked and featured on Cohasset approved marketing and clothing items to be sold through local vendors. It will be on display this summer at the South Shore Art Center's Art Festival.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Obama should reconsider run

TO THE EDITOR:

I think that Barack Obama should reconsider his decision to run for president.

Obama is 47 years old with two daughters – Malia, 9, and Natasha, 7, who live in Chicago (a much nicer city to grow up in than DC) with their mom, Michelle, a Princeton/Harvard-trained lawyer who is handsomely employed there. The kids enjoy a normal home life because Obama can easily get home on weekends and be there full-time when Congress is not in session.

Obama became a U.S. Senator in January 2005 and would only be 59 at the end of his second term; it would be great experience and he could really use it.

Besides, this should be Hillary's shot; she has worked hard for decades and deserves to get the nod.

By the end of his second term the kids would be in college and Michelle would be ready for Washington – which she isn't now; then Obama would be a shoo-in candidate for president; so what's the rush?

On the other hand, if he persists, I don't think I would vote for him because, among other things, it would be an indication of poor judgment and that's not the kind of person we want as a president.

Non-binding resolution

TO THE EDITOR:

Town Meeting was finished with dispatch.

Kudos to the moderator!

On the issue of Treats Pond, Article 22, several amendments were voted down by the assembly. Selectman Koed proposed a non-binding resolution to have a study of drainage and flooding problems in the town. It will be reported by Town Meeting in the fall. Cong. Delahunt purportedly will hold the money for Treats Pond till then.

It should be noted that the main Article 22 was not properly disposed of by a vote up or down at Town Meeting.

Noise pollution and leaf blowers

COMMENTARY

MARYLOU LAWRENCE

Why rake when we can blow?

Though disappointed in the Advisory Committee's vote on the citizens' petition regarding leaf blowers, I was heartened by Mrs. Tebbetts' explanation of that vote, in particular her encouragement to Cohasset's citizens to continue the discourse among each other and, most importantly, with our landscapers and lawn services. Perhaps then, with a more informed citizenry, we can revisit the topic next year.

Scientific studies on noise reveal high levels (over 55 decibels) aggravate both physiological and psychological problems — unwanted sound interferes with children's learning, increases stress and anxiety, and in cities, high noise levels correlate with high crime rates (US Center for Disease Control and others). While I don't think I'm at risk for rabid rage because a leaf blower is blasting nearby, I do know its sound makes it impossible for me to think or entertain kind thoughts, so don't ask me to make a decision when the landscapers are active in my neighborhood.

Most of us would agree we abhor the light pollution that hides the stars, but the global community's dependence on manufactured light prevails over our misgivings — in other words, it's too late for us to undo progress. However, as I listened to a number of individuals speak to the leaf blower issue at town meeting, I thought, to pollute our air with noxious fumes from cars is unacceptable; to pollute our oceans with toxic waste is unacceptable; to pollute our landscape with trash is unacceptable; then why do we acquiesce to the pollution of our soundscape? If we all lived on 10,000-acre farmland, it wouldn't matter, but most of us in Cohasset can hear children's laughter in our neighbor's yard. As one scientist stated in a study linking noise exposure to health problems, "We don't say to people, 'You have to learn to live with sewerage in your water.' So why should we tolerate sewerage coming into our ears?" (Washington Post, June 5, 2007).

I guess the question comes down to why rake when we can blow? Why use physical energy when we can manufacture it? Imagine the toll noise levels take on the young men and women who operate the equipment, many of whom do not wear protective ear gear. And that's all they do, sometimes for ten, twelve hours a day — walk around and blow leaves. Why not simply tell our landscapers that we don't want equipment used on our property that exceeds a reasonable decibel level (whatever level that might be)? Yes, it will cost us a few dollars more, at least in the beginning. But in the long run it will be healthier for our landscapers and for us — it's really a win-win arrangement.

Imagine the toll noise levels take on the young men and women who operate the equipment...

Incidentally, my husband owns a leaf blower. We continually discuss its usage.

N. Main Street crossing looked at

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush – Last week we mentioned briefly that we had had a meeting on March 26th with the MBTA regarding open items on the Town's punch list. Since this had occurred just before our press deadline last week we didn't have the time to go into any detail about what transpired at that meeting.

The lead topic for the meeting was the operation of the North Main Street railroad crossing and its impact on the response of our emergency response vehicles. Fire Chief Robert Silvia explained in detail what his department's issues are with the crossing and its impact on response times, particularly to West Corner, which is the vicinity of Jerusalem Road and Hull Street (Route 228). The MBTA engineers responsible for the design of the grade crossing control system agreed that they would evaluate the operational performance data from the crossings. Based on this data, they will review their control designs to see what tweaking can be done to further minimize the gate-down time. We are hopeful, that the emergency response times to the West Corner area can be improved somewhat.

We have mentioned that the MBTA will be readjusting their schedules shortly. We learned a bit more about what they will be doing. They will not be adding or deleting any trains from the schedule. They will be making minor alterations to the schedule to allow for smoother transit of all of the commuter lines that share the single common trackage between Braintree and Boston. So look for small schedule adjustments in the neighborhood of a few minutes.

Awaiting the Sewer Project, an interesting juxtaposition.

The MBTA has also mentioned that their contractor CBB is in the process of bringing back their construction force to gear up to handle our punch list items and the work to be completed in other towns. Expect to see workers around town in mid-April. The MBTA expects to have most of the remaining work completed by the end of August, this year.

Little Harbor Project – This week we watched the construction as it progressed on Jerusalem Road Drive from Jerusalem Road. The photo shows Bill Needle a Cohasset resident and a Resident Engineer employed by Coughlin Environmental Services, LLC, the engineering organization for the Town. The Resident Engineer is the person who oversees the construction work as it progresses to make sure that the construction meets the plans and specifications and that the work that is billed for by the contractor has actually been completed. In the photo you can see Bill jotting down progress notes in his field logbook. The site engineers also are the work site go-to person for day-to-day interface with the construction area residents. Recently, Bill has generally worked on the areas around Jerusalem Road, while his counterpart, Kevin McRae has recently worked in the areas around Atlantic Avenue.

We also, happened by the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Jerusalem Road Drive and captured the accompanying photo that we felt was an interesting juxtaposition.

Way to go, Chelsea!

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The never-ending presidential campaign of 2008 took a turn for the best the other day, and it took a mere girl who is walking the campaign trail, as the pundits like to say, for the first time to do it.

Chelsea Clinton, who may become the first First Daughter of two presidents, was campaigning for mom at Butler University in Indianapolis when a student reporter for The Butler Collegian asked a question about her dad's frolic with Monica in the Oval Office.

"I do not think that is any of your business," the former and maybe future First Daughter said.

If we ran football games like we conduct election campaigns, the winners would be the teams with the fewest penalties.

Way to go, Chelsea!

I don't know about you, but to me it was the most refreshing answer to a political question since George McGovern told an inquisitor where he could go and the anatomically improbable act he could perform on himself when he got there.

Chelsea's forthright answer was such that the student reporter was invited to bask in the glow of his newfound notoriety on CBS's "Early Show." Can anyone doubt that the kid has a brilliant future as a political reporter in the 21st century?

That's the direction our news coverage of presidential campaigns appears to be going.

It's not so much the candidate's plans for the endless war in Iraq or the approaching recession or out of control health care costs or global warming as much as who he or she slept with in college or said what 20 years ago or shook hands with last week.

If we ran football games like we conduct election campaigns, the winners would be the teams with the fewest penalties.

A few weeks ago, or maybe it was years, the way this campaign is going, the issue du jour was Hillary's cleavage.

Before I retired from the playing field, I considered myself a pretty good authority on cleavage but never in my wildest dreams did I think of cleavage as a qualification for the presidency. If we did then Dolly Parton would be serving her fourth term right now.

A whole cottage industry in the blogosphere considers Barack Obama a Muslim because his middle name is the Arabic "Hussein" while, on the other hand, he is assailed for belonging to a Christian church whose pastor delivers less than patriotic and racially charged sermons.

I guess I missed the connection but it must be there because they're tricky people, these candidates, and you can't take them at face value.

And, after each attack of trivia, we have to poll the voters to see exactly how much damage we did, which has the effect of turning the whole campaign into a baseball game.

Hillary's cleavage came along about the third or fourth inning and gave Barack a lead but Barack's middle name was brought up in the sixth inning and put Hillary in front. We are now in the midst of the seventh inning stretch.

Spring cleaning

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

Last weekend my wife decided that the upstairs hallway needed repainting, which is funny, because I painted this very hallway two years ago.

I had an idyllic childhood that I remember fondly. I feel a little apologetic saying that, because many people weren't as fortunate. I know because I dated all of them. At one point I began to worry I might have a fetish for women with baggage. After all I did enjoy those old Samsonite commercials with the gorillas. Eventually I realized the problem wasn't me, but the extremely low odds of meeting someone uncomplicated and happy in modern society. That was a great relief, because it meant I could neck with my favorite Brenthaven duffel bag out in the open again. But it also taught me how lucky I was to be so incredibly well adjusted.

Of course there are downsides to growing up in a quiet suburb with tolerant, nurturing parents. One is that I entered adulthood with near-toxic levels of self esteem, and when you combine youthful overconfidence with all the street smarts of a kitten on the freeway, you've got a recipe for stupidity. Stupidity leads to pain. Pain leads to suffering. And suffering is supposed to lead to a successful writing career, but unfortunately in my case it just led to more stupidity.

Another problem is that because my childhood was such a nice experience I tend to be nostalgic and overly sentimental about both people and things. Combine sentimentality with incurable cheapness and you've got yourself a pack rat. I hang on to everything from 1987 Toyotas to 1982 Hanes undershirts with a vice-like grip.

My wife Athena (not her real name) is the natural predator of pack rats everywhere. She loves springtime because any season that gives her an excuse to throw stuff out is good with her. When she awoke last Friday to find a large dumpster in a neighbor's driveway she nearly swooned. Two days later I heard a cry of excitement downstairs—a second dumpster had been delivered to another neighbor. It's like Christmas in April over here, and I must admit her maniacal glee is rather infectious.

I decided to try my hand at spring cleaning. When I'm driving to BJ's to buy 150 D-size batteries and a 3 gallon bucket of shampoo, I often think of an amusing word, sentence, or sometimes even a whole paragraph that might be the germ of a column. I scribble the essence of the idea onto the nearest piece of paper as I run red lights and sideswipe pedestrians, hoping to flesh it out when I get home. Then I listen to Top 40 radio and forget all about it. My glove compartment is full of dog-eared grocery lists and junk mail, on the backs of which are incomprehensible phrases like, "Uncle Pete Moss," and "Bedtime story for a proctologist." Those I count as successes, because normally I can't even read my writing.

Anyway I need to pitch a few of these things or my wife Farrah (not her real name) is threatening to put me in a dumpster. I can't stand to see anything go to waste, though, so over the next three months whenever I get stuck trying to finish a column I'll simply stop typing, pull out the next grocery list and tack some random half-baked musings into

Last weekend my wife decided that the upstairs hallway needed repainting, which is funny, because I painted this very hallway two years ago. The paint isn't chipping or defective in any way, yet somehow new paint is required. And this time it has to be white.

Now, in simpler times when our grandparents wanted to paint a wall white, they went out and bought white paint. They were busy fighting world wars, raising six kids apiece and immigrating; they had no time to fool around. In contrast my wife and I had the following conversation:

"How about Atrium White?"

"That's got some yellow in it."

"Okay, Dove White?"

"We used that on the trim in the downstairs bathroom."

"Oh, right right. Have we ever done Decorator White?"

"No, but that's too white."

"You read my mind. The Marshalls did their kitchen in Navajo White. I thought that was pretty nice."

"The Marshalls are idiots. We don't want their colors."

"I've got it: Bone White."

"Let's go with Cloud White."

"Never heard of it. Is that like Winter White?"

And so on. This is how you measure a civilization's prosperity and recognize its tipping point. If there are over two hundred available shades of white paint, someone has too much time on his hands. We know from our history books that when the ability to distinguish Pale Straw from Lancaster Whitewash is revered in a society, natural forces push that bloated, complacent nation into some form of armed conflict. Try this test yourself at the next dinner party: if more than half the conversation involves redecorating, and everyone present—men, women and children—are all participating with equal expertise and enthusiasm, then consider yourself witness to the apogee of American economic power.

'Healing Field' is planned for Memorial Day

The effort should result in hundreds of American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets. The island faces Veterans Memorial Park where the annual Memorial Day observances are held.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces. (Those who purchase flags will be able to pick them up after 10 days).

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healing-field.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post and at both branches of Pilgrim Cooperative Bank. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

Town Meeting

No funds allocated for Treat's project

Essentially, the resolution will keep the project in play, with the federally earmarked funds totaling about $1.1 million, until the ongoing town-wide flood control master plan is complete. The Treat's Pond project will be reviewed again at the fall Special Town Meeting.

Selectmen, who unanimously supported the article in its original form, view the project as both a saltmarsh restoration and flood control mitigation. The waterfront section of Atlantic Avenue where Treat's Pond is located, near Whitehead Road, gets inundated with water during major rainstorms.

"We view it as an opportunity to solve one of the town's flooding problems by leveraging federal funds," said Selectmen Chairman Gary Vanderweil. "The project has the potential for a net environmental gain for the town at a discounted price."

In his opening remarks, Vanderweil admitted the project wasn't perfect.

"None of the routes are good, but they are the only ones that exist," Vanderweil said frankly. Extending or enlarging a pipe on Sandy Cove would not restore the pond, according to the Army Corps. A pipe through Whale Meadow off Whitehead Road with an outfall to the outer harbor has land-taking issues. The inner harbor outlet could pollute the harbor further.

"There are negative environmental effects in all three options. Discharging stormwater and everything in it into an open body of water isn't desirable," said Vanderweil, adding that's the reason the Selectmen propose an independent engineering and environmental assessment as an appropriate starting point.

On the other hand, the Advisory Committee and the Capital Budget Committee came down hard against the article. Advisory Committee member Roger Hill said other flood prone areas, such as James Brook/Jacobs Meadow, need to be addressed first and the project would put a strain the town's financial resources or force it to take on more debt. The Capital Budget Committee called for more vetting and prioritization before money was spent.

Before any discussion on the main motion, which requested Town Meeting to appropriate $300,000 for the project, could take place an amendment to the motion was brought forth. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who has and continued to recuse himself as a selectman from the Treat's Pond issue, proposed an amendment as a private citizen. (Dormitzer lives on Atlantic Avenue).

The amended motion asked Town Meeting to appropriate a much smaller sum, $45,000, from free cash to fund an independent engineering and environmental review of the Army Corps restoration project.

"In an effort to make sure the town is informed and the project is fully vetted" Dormitzer gave as his reasoning for proposing the amendment. "We need to establish the project is worth doing at all."

When questioned by a citizen on what would happen if Town Meeting voted down the amendment or the original motion, Dormitzer said, "no question $1.1 million will be lost to this town."

Although initial response to Dormitzer's amendment was positive, Dormitzer seemed to lose support when he told Town Meeting the study would only look at the two Army Corps supported options — with either an outfall to the inner or outer harbor. An extension or enlargement of the current pipe located at Sandy Cove would not be reviewed.

"The Army Corps controls the use of the $1.1 million and will not allow the money to go toward a option they do not support," explained Dormitzer. The Army Corps found the Sandy Cove outlet would not bring about the saltmarsh restoration essential to the project, he said.

Russ Bonetti of Parker Avenue indicated without exploring any new information, devoting money to the study did not seem worth the money.

Cohasset resident Jeff Pratt catches up on the news while attending Cohasset's Annual Town Meeting Saturday morning.

Central in many of the arguments brought forth was the balance between the saltmarsh restoration (the primary purpose of the project, according to Vanderweil) and alleviating the growing flooding problems in the area. Some citizens expressed a project that assured flood control mitigation would be a better option.

"The federal earmark requires 35 percent of project cost to come from the town. Right now, we really don't have an idea of the final cost of the project will be and it doesn't primarily address flooding," said Steve Gaumer, chairman of the Capital Budget Committee.

Karen Quigley of 27 Clayspring Road said in her dealings with the Army Corps in trying to find out information about the project, the engineers have been "fastidious" about saying the project is not a flood control mitigation project.

"The best David Larsen (project lead for Army Corps) can say is there may be an opportunity to address the flooding," said Quigley.

Some saw the $45,000 allocation for a study as an insurance policy on the project, while others questioned its redundancy.

As the conversation heated up, Peter Brown of 38 Atlantic Ave. (a residence near Treat's Pond) came to the microphone with another amendment to the article. Brown proposed a three-person Selectmen-appointed committee be assigned to create a scope for the $45,000 engineering and environmental study.

"It would allow people to have confidence the town isn't re-studying the issue," said Brown.

However, the amendment was not well received by the floor.

"We're looking for $45,000 to review what the Army Corps already told us, then we'll come back and agree or disagree (with the project). It seems like this isn't going to put us in a different spot six month from now. We either want to do this or we don't want to do it," said Rick Flynn of 30 Summer St.

Shortly after, Brown's amendment failed by majority vote and discussion reverted to Dormitzer's amendment.

Given the length of debate already spent on Dormitzer's amendment, Town Meeting seemed willing to proceed to a vote, but Jack Buckley of 272 South Main St. asked if the amendment would convey to Delahunt the town was interested in the project.

Dormitzer called on former New York Congressman Amo Houghton and one of the project's proponents to answer the question. Houghton is not a registered voter in the town and was given permission from the town moderator to speak.

Houghton has been involved in the Treat's Pond project from its inception, he and Delahunt worked together to get the original congressional appropriation for Treat's Pond before Houghton retired in 2005. His wife owns property near Treat's Pond and the property is routinely flooded.

Although published reports in the Boston Globe and Boston Herald indicate residents have questioned Houghton's role in the project suggesting a conflict of interest, no one spoke to that issue on the floor of Town Meeting.

Houghton said in order to ensure Cohasset the benefit of the $1.1 million congressional appropriation, a clear message of support had to be sent to Delahunt.

"Congressmen Delahunt has got to have a signal the town wants to move forward with the project. Approval of the amendment or original motion would do that. He just can't be wallowing, there are so many pressures and other deserving projects," said Houghton.

When the motion proceeded to a vote, the amendment failed to garner a two-thirds majority. Discussion opened up on the original article motion asking for a $300,000 allocation for the project.

At this point, Koed stood up to recommend a resolution be considered in lieu of funding.

Although some voters called for indefinite postponement of the article and others wanted to postpone a final decision on Treat's Pond to discuss what they saw as a related issue of the stormwater bylaw, Town Moderator Dan Evans said Koed's resolution was being drafted.

The resolution states the town recognizes both the serious nature of the environmental health of Treat's Pond and flooding issues in its surrounding area.

"The Town of Cohasset wishes to pursue solutions to these problems and does not wish to foreclose the possibility of federal funds to support possible solution," the resolution reads. "Cohasset, however, needs to further study the issues and proposals that have been made to solve them, owing to the relatively little time they have been public."

The resolution cites the town-wide flood control plan and requests additional time until fall Special Town Meeting to address the issue of Treat's Pond.

The resolution was adopted by Town Meeting.

Building a housing trust

Housing Partnership's proposal gets majority vote

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Throughout the morning hours, Town Meeting moved swiftly and decisively on myriad issues, voting on 21 articles in just under two hours. The Housing Partnership Committee's article proposing the creation of an affordable housing trust generated questions and comments from the floor, but ultimately was passed by a majority vote.

Tom Callahan, co-chair of the Housing Partnership, gave a brief overview of the housing trust and what it will enable the town to do.

"The housing trust was developed in a response to 40-B to work and be proactive to prevent a large complex that could be a town and/or neighborhood altering project," said Callahan. "The trust is a tool for us to support (the town) in actively seeking projects and not be tied to the cycle of Town Meeting."

The Affordable Housing Trust is modeled after a similar one passed in Hingham last year. It creates a dedicated body that has the ability to respond more quickly to conditions in the housing market and take advantage of housing opportunities, said Callahan.

According to the bylaw, the funds in the trust will be derived from developers, gifts, grants, donations contributions or other cash payment to the trust for the purpose of providing low- to moderate-income housing. The town treasurer will be the custodian of the trust's funds.

Citizens had questions about the composition of the Housing Trust — seven members to be appointed by the Board of Selectmen (one will be a selectman) that will have staggered two-year terms.

Sam Pease of 3 Sankey Road seemed concerned with the powers of the affordable housing trust, "will the trust have the ability to develop land without a (developer) partner?"

Callahan said while technically the bylaw allows the trust to pursue affordable housing development opportunities, the charge of both the Housing Partnership and the Housing Trust is not to put the town in the position of developer.

"We plan to partner with a private developer to do all the work, take on all the risk and get the property on the town tax rolls," said Callahan, offering the current partnership project at 821 Jerusalem Road.

Town Meeting

Fair winds for bylaw

Zoning guidelines set for commercial size wind turbines

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It was fair winds and smooth sailing for the wind turbine bylaw, which passed with unanimous support of Town Meeting.

Several questions were raised about possible locations for the commercial-sized wind turbines, but overall the possibility of implementing wind as an alternative energy for the town was favorably met.

"The bylaw does not guarantee placement of wind turbine, but it does give it a framework," said Alternative Energy Committee chairman Andrew Willard. The Alternative Energy Committee, a Selectmen appointed board, has been working on the bylaw for a couple years.

The bylaw establishes town-wide zoning regulations for commercial size wind turbines — turbines greater than 500kilowatts, or about the size Hull Wind I located near Hull High School. The projects will be required to go through a special permit process overseen by the Planning Board. The bylaw creates uniform setback, noise and siting requirements.

"From a practical standpoint, wind turbines are only applicable to large parcels," said Selectmen Chairman Gary Vanderweil. Willard enumerated just four parcels large enough and open enough to accommodate a wind turbine under the setback requirements of the bylaw: behind the Middle-High School, at the transfer station, behind Hingham Lumber (Graham Waste) and the Avalon property off Route 3A.

"Wind turbine placement offers tremendous opportunity for the town to save energy costs," said Willard. Especially if erected near the Middle-High School all the energy generated would go directly into the school potentially saving the town thousands in energy costs each year.

"There are considerable financial benefits from wind turbine," said Advisory Committee member Chartis Tebbetts and although concerns had been raised over noise and visual effects, "the committee feels there will be adequately addresses in the (permitting) process."

Alternative Energy Committee Chairman Andrew Willard speaks at the Annual Town Meeting Saturday morning. The new bylaw creates uniform setback, noise and siting requirements for wind turbines.

One resident asked if the bylaw took offshore wind turbines into consideration given Hull is actively pursuing the an offshore grouping of turbines. Willard said the bylaw only regulates land turbines.

Smaller residential size wind turbines are not regulated through this bylaw, but in order to erect one a property owner would have to get approval from the zoning board of appeals.

Willard said the earliest the town would bring forth a wind turbine project would be 2009, either on the high school or transfer station property. A meteorological experimental test, or MET tower, is collecting wind data on Turkey Hill through June. All the data points to Cohasset having "excellent wind" for a turbine, said Willard.

Bill Flynn of 41 Atlantic Ave. asked under the bylaw how many wind turbines were possible. Willard explained given the setback and large open area required under the bylaw, Cohasset could at most see two town-owned wind turbines and two to four commercially owned turbines on private property.

Mark Haas of 63 Bancroft Road asked if any consideration had been taken in determining the effect of wind turbines on property values. As a resident in close proximity to the possible high school turbine location, he was concerned his property value would be lowered as a result of a turbine.

"The bylaw makes no statement about property values," said Willard. "Studies out of Europe indicated no effects on property values from wind turbines."

A separate zoning amendment, also passed unanimously, created wind energy conversion facilities, or wind turbines, as an allowed use in all districts subject to a special permit.

Stormwater bylaw passes muster

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"The bylaw is only concerned with adding to the runoff."
— Marty Nee, Stormwater Management Committee

Following close on the heels of the lengthy discussion on Treat's Pond, the stormwater management bylaw seemed a natural follower. Increased development uphill from Treat's Pond/Atlantic Avenue has contributed to the current flooding problems and according to citizens the Treat's Pond residences are not alone.

The stormwater management bylaw received a majority vote from the floor of Town Meeting, but not without an hour-long discussion mostly concerning the practical implications of the bylaw.

Along with a power point slideshow, Stormwater Management Committee chairman Marty Nee presented the bylaw to Town Meeting. The stormwater bylaw creates a permitting process for any increase in impervious surface greater than 500 square feet.

"The bylaw does not limit development, it only takes into consideration stormwater runoff," said Nee, adding the bylaw asks the property owner to ensure post-construction runoff be equal to or less than what exists pre-construction. "The bylaw is only concerned with adding to the runoff."

Nee described how the bylaw creates two levels of regulation. An administrative review will be required for any construction that will result in an increase of impervious surface area between 500 and 5,000 square feet of land. The lower end (500 square feet) would be about the size of a two-car garage. A more comprehensive permitting process would be required for development over 5,000 square feet

Some saw the bylaw as highly restrictive and possibly opening the town up to substantial litigation and appeal. Tucker Glavin of the Advisory Committee suggested the bylaw would open up the town to more litigation and subsequently more legal costs, especially with the low threshold that triggers the bylaw. Glavin asked Town Counsel Paul DeRensis his opinion on the possibility of increased legal costs.

Speaking in general terms, DeRensis said anytime there is a permitting system an applicant has the right to appeal. Any party denied a permit could appeal to Superior Court for a decision.

"I expect where substantial home or commercial value is at stake there would be ensuing appeals and litigation. How many, how often, it depends," said De Rensis.

Conservation Committee chairman David Farrag, whose board will be overseeing the stormwater permitting process, reported legal fees associated with the Conservation Commission were a very small percentage of the town's legal budget.

"We use Town Counsel expeditiously, only when we've needed to," said Farrag.

Roger Hill of the Advisory Committee questioned the low threshold in the bylaw, explaining changing a driveway from gravel to impervious asphalt would need an engineer's stamped approval.

However, the majority of the comments from the floor were in support of the bylaw. Many residents offered their personal experience with neighbor-to-neighbor flooding issues caused by new development.

"All it takes is a garage," said Cathy Witkos of 69 Elm Street and an abutter of the flood-prone Jacob's Meadow.

Selectman Paul Carlson, speaking as a private citizen, said on his street alone (Old Coach Road) there five to six houses that have undergone changes and increased water flow on other neighbors' property, "stormwater doesn't know the difference."

Stuart Ivimey of 7 Sankey Road and a member of the Planning Board said the stormwater bylaw wasn't perfect, in that it could not solve all the town's water problems, "but it is a start…Let's stop talking about it and do something."

Town Meeting agreed. The stormwater management bylaw passed with a majority vote.

Smoking prohibited at Legion Hall

Smoking will no longer be allowed at the American Legion Hall. Although a Town Meeting article proposing an amendment to the town's smoking was indefinitely postponed, Town Counsel found the Legion Hall already fell under the state's smoke-free workplace law.

Following the March 17 Board of Selectmen's meeting, the Board of Health requested Town Counsel to re-review the issue. Health Inspector Tara Tradd said the determination of Town Counsel was current state law prohibits smoking in a public building or in an enclosed indoor space of a membership association during the time the space is open to the public; occupied by a non-member who is not an invited guest of a member or an employee of the association; or rented from the association for a fee or other compensation agreement.

Following Town Counsel's review, the Board of Health recommended the article be indefinitely postponed because the amendment would be redundant.

"The state law's intent is to protect workers in enclosed workplaces from secondhand smoke exposure," wrote Tradd in a letter to the American Legion Post. The enforcing agency is the Department of Public Health and the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission; however, the Board of Health can respond to complaints received and conduct periodic inspections.

MEET THE CANDIDATES

SEWER COMMISSION

Jim Dow

Jim Dow

- NAME: Jim Dow
- AGE: 41
- ADDRESS: 502 North Main St, Cohasset
- FAMILY: My wife Dama and I have been married for 12 years; we have an 11 year old daughter, Christina
- EDUCATION: Hull High School
- OCCUPATION: Supervisor, Hingham Sewer Department (since 1987)
- CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: American Cancer Society Relay for Life, Team Captain; Massachusetts Striped Bass Association, Digital Media Coordinator; Massachusetts Beach Buggy Association; United Mobile Sportfishermen Inc.; Herring Run Clean Up volunteer
- QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: I admire focus and determination.
- WHAT YOU CAN LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF: In my line of work, I have been the "butt" of many potty jokes.
- WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? The quality of the receiving waters, local brooks and the harbor due to sewer overflows. They worry about the risk to public health for residents, their pets, and the ecosystem caused by these events. Voters are also anxious about the Little Harbor sewer project coming in on time and budget.
- BIGGEST CHALLENGE FACING OFFICE YOU SEEK: I believe the biggest challenge is making the sewer treatment plant operate more efficiently and productively. Conducting an extensive investigation to determine the entry point of as many sources of inflow and infiltration (I&I) into the system will be a key component. Eliminating the excess non-wastewater flow to the treatment plant will not only enhance plant capacity, but it will also extend the life of the facility.

  Another challenge will be to ensure that the current sewer extensions are completed on-time and on-budget. They must also be completed so as to cause as little disruption to the residents.
- HOW CAN YOU MAKE A DIFFERENCE: I have worked for the Hingham Sewer Department for 21-years, the past 17 years as the Supervisor. I manage the daily operations of the department and report to three elected officials. I design and implement programs to make the department function safely and productively while adhering to a budget which I help to draft annually. I have extensive "hands-on" knowledge of sewer systems including street lines, pump stations, and grinder pumps like the ones being installed throughout the Town now. I can bring creativity and an extensive operational knowledge to Cohasset to facilitate the current sewer expansion and plant capacity.

- OCCUPATION: Currently: President/Co-founder (with son, Aaron) – ColoSpace, Inc. A managed hosting and server management company operating six data centers throughout New England. Previously: Owned two Construction and Environmental services companies.
- CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Civic – Past President/and current member Cohasset Rotary Club Active Church committee member, Cohasset Land Foundation founding member, Cohasset Lightkeepers founding member

  Town Boards and committees served - Cohasset Planning Board, Veterans' Memorial Committee, Cohasset Advisory Board, Capital Budget Committee, Milliken – Lillard Field Committee
- QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: Honesty, dependability, and fairness
- WHAT YOU CAN LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF: Taking on so many projects and doing so many different things, and wondering how and why I do it all, and laugh when it all works out OK.
- WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? Drainage issues, plant capacity, rising costs, operational problems, construction issues, and taxes
- BIGGEST CHALLENGE FACING OFFICE YOU SEEK: Solving the voters biggest concerns listed previously, and many more that will come up over the next three years.
- HOW CAN YOU MAKE A DIFFERENCE: By doing the same things I have done all my life – determining the problems, seeking professional assistance, doing my own research, and then meeting with those involved with both the problem and the solution. Fix the problem and try and prevent it from happening again.

SELECTMAN

Fred Koed

Fred Koed

- NAME: Frederick R. Koed
- AGE: 56
- ADDRESS: 10 Hill Street.
- FAMILY: Married to Lisa for 26 years, two daughters Ashley 25 and Mariel 21.
- EDUCATION: BA, UMass Boston, Masters of Science in Public Affairs, McCormack Institute, UMass-Boston.
- OCCUPATION: CIO (Chief Information Officer), Office for Refugees and Immigrants, Executive Office of Health and Human Services, Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
- CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Advisory Committee 4.5 years, 2 as chairman; Housing Authority 5 years, appointed by the governor; Water Commission, 3 years, 2.5 years as chairman; Selectman (current), 9 years, 2 years as chairman; Norfolk County Advisory Board, 4 years; Norfolk County Selectmen's Association, 9 years.
- QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: The ability to laugh at themselves and admit they are wrong.
- WHAT YOU CAN LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF: At how much my dog has influence over me when she wants me to do something for her.
- WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? Voters are concerned with making sure their voices are heard by those entrusted with public office. They want to know that their money is being spent in an efficient manner. They expect integrity from their public officials in actions and words. They want to hear more discussions on the issues.
- BIGGEST CHALLENGE FACING OFFICE YOU SEEK: Currently the biggest challenge will be building a town wide consensus around the drainage and flooding issues that have come to the forefront. I suggest the selectmen have several pubic hearings focused on public input and an examination of the new town wide study due in the next four weeks. Once we have a general idea of the extent of the situation, we need to discuss criteria to prioritize the solutions. While all this is happening we need to make sure town government is participating and determine what if any structural governmental changes might help to address this issue.
- HOW CAN YOU MAKE A DIFFERENCE: I believe my 20 plus years experience on numerous town boards has given me an understanding on how to move complicated issues and projects through the system. For instance when I was on the water commission, I worked hard to move the emergency $2.5 million water project blasting down Forest Ave., creating a new loop from the end of Jerusalem Rd at Black Rock to North Main Street at King Street. This gave Forest Ave. for the first time fire protection along its length. So I have experience and patience to work with controversial issues and complex public policy.

Karen Quigley

Karen Quigley

- NAME: Karen Quigley
- AGE: 59-3/4
- ADDRESS: 27 Clay Spring Road
- FAMILY: Tom Wolf (Rocky, Buddy and Samantha)
- EDUCATION: Northeastern University, English-Journalism major
- OCCUPATION: Entrepreneurial home-based advertising, graphic and website design shop, Advertising by design (22 years).
- CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Board member Cohasset Conservation Trust, Friends of the Barnes Wildlife Sanctuary, charter member Friends of Holly Hill Farm, Open Space Committee, Water Resource Protection Committee, Stormwater Committee, chair Harbor Health Committee
- QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: Integrity.
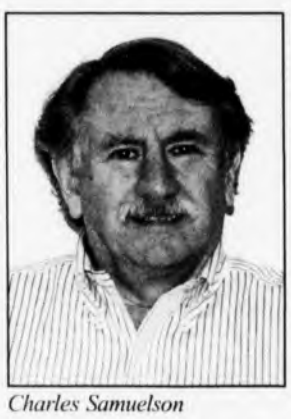
- WHAT YOU CAN LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF: The opportunities are too many and often to list!
- WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? Depending on their stage in life, financial security and level of involvement in town issues, the focus of individual concern varies. Whether it's rising taxes, affordability, quality education, stormwater flooding, infrastructure, development or the environment, everybody is concerned about something and is looking to the selectmen for leadership.
- BIGGEST CHALLENGE FACING OFFICE YOU SEEK: There is no lack of specific challenges facing the Selectmen. However, the community is looking to the selectmen for leadership and, in my estimation, the Board must become less reactive and refocus their efforts on setting the policy and direction of town government, and to opening channels of communication and fostering cooperation within town hall.
- HOW CAN YOU MAKE A DIFFERENCE: What I bring to the table is common sense, a big-picture perspective, a proactive approach, and the willingness and fortitude to make the tough decisions. I do my homework, seek input, talk to people, listen to their concerns/issues, and build coalitions. I challenge the status quo. As a private citizen I spoke out and made a difference. As a committee member I've made a difference. As a selectmen I will continue to make a difference.



PLANNING BOARD

Clark Brewer

Clark Brewer

- NAME: Clark Harlow Brewer
- AGE: 44
- ADDRESS: 262 North Main St., the first house on Dolan Lane
- FAMILY: wife, Dana
- EDUCATION: Bachelor in Architecture, Carnegie Mellon University.
- OCCUPATION: Registered Architect
- CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Historic District Commission (central business district signage police) Vice Chairman, Quincy 1990-1996;Growth and Development Committee (master plan committee) Vice Chairman, Cohasset 2000-2004; Cohasset Housing Partnership (affordable housing committee), Co chairman, 2006-present.
- QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: Kindness.
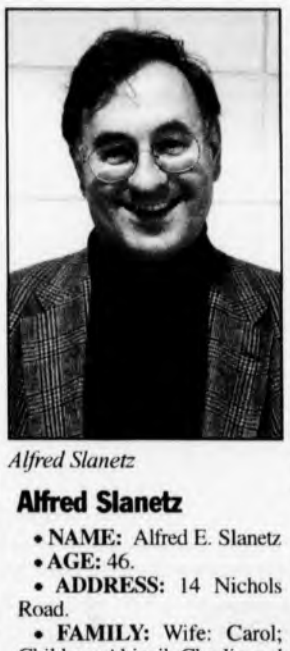
- WHAT YOU CAN LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF: I am way too serious most of the time ... suddenly realizing I really am middle age and running for a public office.
- WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? One sentiment was, "fix the Town." There is a lot that is great about Cohasset. For some it is expensive and difficult to live here. I think that we all lose when individuals who have contributed greatly to the fabric of the community, can't afford to stay here.
- BIGGEST CHALLENGE FACING OFFICE YOU SEEK: The planning board, zoning board of appeals and conservation commission are permitting bodies that can have competing agendas. I want to find ways to simplify the permitting process so that expectations are clear and better solutions to problems are found early and that individuals are treated fairly. I believe that individual effort and investment in Cohasset should be appreciated and encouraged in ways that are meaningful and useful for the long haul, strengthening the economic foundation of the Town. It is clear that at times, resistance to change, of any kind, is self-limiting.
- HOW CAN YOU MAKE A DIFFERENCE: Serving on the planning board is an opportunity to work both proactively and reactively to preserve the great things about Cohasset and improve what doesn't work well. I will inform and educate from my core experience and training as an architect. I will encourage practical design solutions that work well, look great and fit well into a neighborhood. It is important to take a long-term perspective of 10 to 100 years, to temper what we are doing right now. I believe that a focus on sustainability, taking stock of our resources will strengthen our community.



Charles Samuelson

Charles Samuelson

- NAME: Charles Samuelson
- AGE: 60
- ADDRESS: 6 Westgate Lane.
- FAMILY: Married – wife, Linda; stepdaughters Jennifer and Megan.
- EDUCATION: BS Math/Physics, Oregon State University 1970.
- OCCUPATION: Engineering Manager, large multinational consumer electronics company.
- CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: None.
- QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: Honesty, work ethic, attention to detail, sense of humor, disagreeing without being disagreeable.
- WHAT YOU CAN LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF: Failure to recognize the obvious, my sailing adventures and experiences.
- WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? Affordable housing, storm water management and flooding, planning for harbor use, large developments (multi-family and/or condominium), and village development, vitality and prosperity.
- BIGGEST CHALLENGE FACING OFFICE YOU SEEK: If elected, I will be filling the position vacated by a 25-year member of the Planning Board. That represents a tremendous amount of knowledge and experience that will be difficult to replace. The town is facing challenges on multiple fronts including growth and development, financial stability, vitality of the business/village districts, affordable housing, and environmental stability/improvement. There are no easy or obviously correct answers to these issues. Each issue typically has several valid arguments on different sides. Carefully defining the issues and reaching a tenable, consensus opinion will certainly be challenging.
- HOW CAN YOU MAKE A DIFFERENCE: I hope to draw on my background in engineering, the process of "managing" large projects with diverse goals and requirements, and dealing with a wide range of people. I believe in top-down planning with bottom-up implementation. Proposals are often put forth to resolve specific problems that, if taken by themselves, are very reasonable and desirable. Many times when an issue is viewed in its entire context a narrow regulation may not contribute positively in the long run. I hope to help concisely identify and define issues, stimulate debate, stimulated discussions regarding side-effects that my not be obvious or intended, identify new, creative and/or unique solutions, work with other town, state and federal agencies, listen to all points-of-view, reach conclusions expeditiously, and represent the all constituents of town fairly.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Alfred Slanetz

Alfred Slanetz

- NAME: Alfred E. Slanetz
- AGE: 46.
- ADDRESS: 14 Nichols Road.
- FAMILY: Wife: Carol; Children: Abigail, Charlie and Michael.
- EDUCATION: B.A. Hamilton College, M.S. Brown University, Ph.D. Yale University.
- OCCUPATION: Biotechnology.
- CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: 3 Years on Cohasset School Committee.
- QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: Intelligence.
- WHAT YOU CAN LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF: Doing too many things at once.
- WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? The quality of education in Cohasset.
- BIGGEST CHALLENGE FACING OFFICE YOU SEEK: How to improve the quality of education in Cohasset within a reasonable budget and in spite of the numerous unfunded state mandates and the Town's significant debt payments. Reminding the school that an excellent education goes far beyond MCAS and the state curriculum framework.
- HOW CAN YOU MAKE A DIFFERENCE: In my first term, we instituted measurable strategic goals, which would place Cohasset Schools in the top 10 in the state within 5 years. Our goal is a school system where every child is learning to their aptitude in reading writing and math and is prepared to excel in the global and scientific world in which they will live. We moved forward on the plan making some of the goals but not others. We instituted an accounting system, which accurately reflects expenditures and established cost savings in support areas to increase expenditure in the classroom. Due to a number of factors, we were able to implement educational improvements in the absence of an override. However, in the developing fiscal climate an override is likely to be required to fully fund next year's operating budget. I fundamentally believe that investing in the schools to achieve top ten status is a prudent expenditure of taxpayer money benefiting our children, our real estate values and our tax rate. Quality schools are the foundation of a quality Town. I look forward to continuing to serve you and making Cohasset Schools the best they can be.

HEALTH NOTES

On to our ailing heath-care system

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Now that the Town Meeting is over, the Board of Health would like to thank the many citizens who wisely enacted the Stormwater Management plan the on which we have been working so hard for five years — demonstrating that most people in town are interested in the health of our citizens and have an attitude of caring for neighbors over their own private concerns. Would that such an attitude were in more general favor everywhere. Unfortunately the Meeting also revealed that there were those whose personal interests are paramount regardless of the consequences to neighbors and others in town, a reflection of a more general condition in our modern society.

In a recent article by Dr. Bernard Lown, renowned cardiologist who founded the Lown Clinic in Brookline, reports: "Health care in the United States is in profound disarray. Even with medical costs nearly twice that of any other industrialized nation, it ranks an embarrassing 37th in health outcomes among 191 countries. American life expectancy is that of impoverished Cuba, yet the United States spends more than $2 trillion annually for medical care. Primary care physicians, the so-called 'gatekeepers,' are an endangered species. Patients are compelled to visit emergency departments or self-selected specialists to sort out what ails them. Growing numbers of Americans search the Internet, or seek advice from alternative medical practitioners and neighbors to gain clarity about their health."

Dr. Lown continues: "The reasons for this transformation are not difficult to find. Medicine, which used to be a public service, has been transformed into a for-profit venture. Physicians are no longer healers, but 'health care providers,' the sick are no longer patients, but 'health consumers.' Health care is now a business. In fact, it is by far the largest business in our country. The commercialization of medicine is the major factor for distancing of doctors from patients. It accounts for the lack of preventive services and for the potential demise of primary care physicians. Many define the crisis in economic terms," but actually it is a degradation of the human values that bond a society based on ethical principles involving the rights of individuals. – as demonstrated in our own Town Meeting.

If we as a nation are to progress in the face of the challenges of a growing population, a shrinking and changing planet and the pressures of today's information explosion; if, indeed we are to retain our physical and emotional health, we must find a way to apply values like mutual concern, forbearance and calm consideration to neighbors and acquaintances as well as all of those we encounter.

But the Lown lament also speaks of a new insight into our patterns of behavior. They have found that "psychosocial problems which bedevil all human beings" when recognized and treated with the accepted physical remedies such as lowering blood cholesterol, sugar and body weight resulted in measurably better outcomes. Accordingly they intend to explore some newer concepts such as the use of computerized electroencephalograms for the assessment of mood.

Indeed, even with its drawbacks, medical science is on an exciting new threshold involving a developing understanding of how the brain operates and affects us as we mature and age. Health Notes is about to begin a series of reports related to ways it is possible to, through mental exercises, slow the effects of aging on the human brain. We are planning articles to explain the relationship between the brain and overall health. They will include how the brain is affected by experience and some new discoveries about how the brain reacts to a person's environment. Such topics are sometimes covered by a new term: brain plasticity.

One of the more egregious practices affecting individual health is that of advertising. The prevalence of erroneous and misleading food and medication ads are doubtless adding to our poor performance in health outcomes. It's a wise person who does not depend on advertisements for decisions about what to eat and what pills to take. Alas, the new developments in psychiatry, mentioned above are even now being exploited in advertisements.

And so, now that Town Meeting is over, we look forward to exploring what's new in health care management and how you can benefit.

'The Ancient but Venerable Cookie-Jar Trap'

TO THE EDITOR:

The problematic device comes to the present from the Vedic culture of ancient India. They used to make a strong vase with a slender narrowed opening at the top. The opening was made by careful and clever design. They would bake a very sweet and very hard cookie just slim enough to fit into the mouth of the vase, and having slid one in, the vase was put out front of the house or temple. The problematic monkeys that loiter and harass devotees around the temples would smell the sweetness and reach in for the cookie. The catch is they couldn't get their hand out while they tried to retain a grip on the sweet but hard-cooked dough.

The real trouble and ingenuity of the device was that the monkeys, too narrow minded to figure it out, were still there in the morning, unable to let go of the cookie. There they sat, trapped with their hand in the cookie jar, and ready to be transported back to the jungle from whence they came. Ahh, the poor politicians, retired and sitting, who can't seem to get their hands free to look for the right next thing to do.

Special evening appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

On Friday evening, March 28, the Recreation Commission held a retirement party for me at the Atlantica Restaurant. Having never been one to find difficulty expressing my gratitude, I am at this time, lacking the necessary words to adequately express my appreciation to the members of the Commission, and all those who attended and supported this very special evening.

I have always considered it an honor and privilege to serve the residents of Cohasset in their pursuit of leisure activities. Perhaps to a fault, I have kept the needs and best interests of this wonderful community as my top priority. This, of course, was only possible with the support of my family, past and present recreation commissioners and hundreds of colleagues who have assisted me along the way. It is difficult for one to imagine that 32 years have passed by since I assumed my duties, however as the saying goes; "Time flies when you're having fun."

It has always been my contention that Cohasset is the very fine and wonderful community it is, not because of our geographical location, but rather because of the individuals who reside here. It has become "home" to me, not because of the number of hours I spend here each week but because of each and every one of you that live here and have been instrumental in our function.

My future plans include Cohasset along with spending time with my wife and family. Cohasset will always be home to me and I want to thank each and every one of you for your support, interest and help over the years.

I remain your faithful servant and friend.

Cohasset Sports Partnership to hold kick-off event

The newly formed Cohasset Sports Partnership is holding a free informational gathering at Atlantica on April 5 at 8pm. CSP is a private, non-profit organization dedicated to enhancing the athletic facilities and programs offered to students and residents of Cohasset. CSP is an affiliate of The Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund.

The focus of the CSP is to develop resources beyond those traditionally used to support local public athletic programs and apply those resources to projects that might not otherwise exist without outside funding.

The first project CSP is supporting is the renovation of the track and field at Alumni Field. This town wide resource is currently in need of reparation. Poor drainage and field conditions have resulted in postponing, canceling or moving numerous events. Typically only games are allowed to be played on the field so the teams are required to practice on smaller and inferior facilities, causing other programs to reduce or eliminate practice schedules due to the lack of field availability. The School Department has identified the need to install a turf field and new track at the Clark Chatterton Athletic Complex. The CSP is starting a capital campaign "got turf?" to support the town's effort to build the new track and field.

Everyone is invited to attend the free April 5 event to see your neighbors and friends after this long winter and find out more about this worthwhile project. The event starts at 8pm with cocktails and desserts followed by a 1/2-hour presentation at 9:30 and then dancing until midnight.

If you can attend the event please RSVP to ellenmaher63@comcast.net or call 781-383-9513.

Hill dominant in Opening Day loss

Skippers even score with 6-5 win Wednesday

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

If it's any consolation to Brian Hill, he won't be matched up with a pitcher of Blaine O'Brien's magnitude in the near future.

Hill, the Cohasset High senior hurler, pitched outstanding during Tuesday's 1-0, Opening Day loss to Scituate.

A wild pitch in the top of the fifth that scored Scituate's Marcus Joyce was the difference in the game.

"That's two great pitchers," said Cohasset head coach Al Gallotta. "Hill threw a great game, O'Brien threw a great game, that was a classic baseball game. I sort of knew it, and Kevin did too, that one run might win the game and it turned out to be the case."

O'Brien finished with 16 strikeouts and one walk. He allowed two hits in seven innings and struck out the first eight batters he faced. The six-foot, seven-inch, Georgia-bound hurler used an array of fastballs and sliders to keep the Skippers off-balance for much of the game.

"That's Blaine," said Scituate coach Kevin Greer. "I don't expect much more than that, that's what he does, he goes out and throws hard."

Despite poor weather conditions, including 40 mile per hour wind gusts and a muddy field, both teams played errorless baseball.

"That was one of the better baseball games I have coached in a long time," Greer said.

Gallotta was pleased with his team's crisp performance in the soggy opener.

"We will win a lot of games if we play sharp defense like that and get pitching like that from Hill," Gallotta said.

Hill struck out 10 batters and allowed four hits over seven innings. Two hits were by Nick Lombardo and two came off the bat of Rob Carlezon.

Cohasset will rely on a bevy of talented and determined seniors this season, all with a ton of experience.

Lombardo took charge of the Sailors offense from the leadoff spot hitting a single and stealing a base in the third inning and smacking a crucial double in the fifth.

After Hill got the first two outs in the fifth he walked Joyce. Lombardo followed up with a double, giving Scituate a pair of runners in scoring position with two outs.

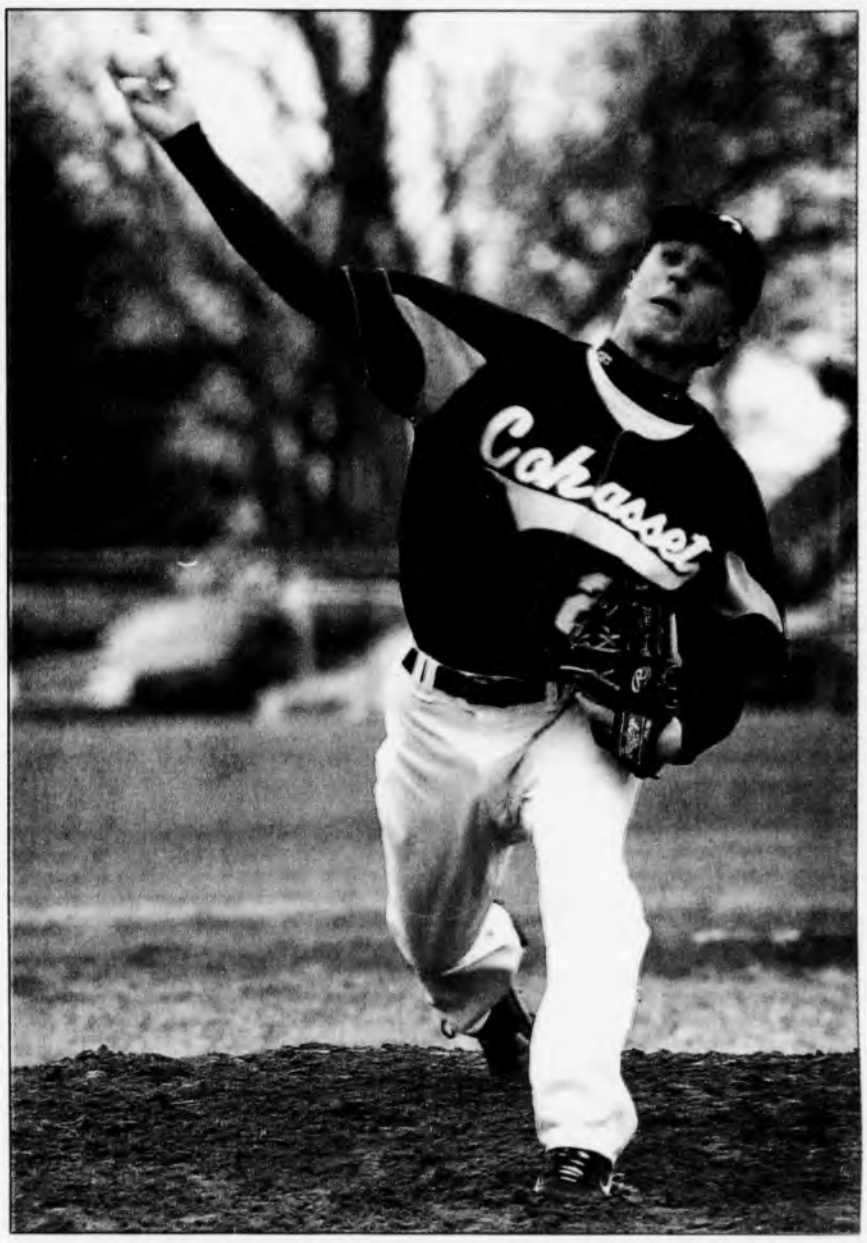
Hill then threw a wild pitch that scored Joyce, before ending the inning with a strikeout.

"They never did (get to Hill) and the unfortunate thing is the wild pitch," Gallotta said. "It's a little muddy in the batters box and my catcher felt that maybe he would have been able to get it if it hadn't hit a bad spot there. The conditions were a little tough but the kids played well all in all."

Both teams were set to face off Wednesday in Scituate passed Mariner deadline.

Greer doesn't expect the Sailors to struggle at the plate this year. He chalked up Tuesday to good pitching.

"It's nice to see a guy like that early (in the season) that throws a cutter and a slider," Greer said. "We fell behind a little bit in counts so we have to start swinging the bats earlier."



Cohasset 6, Scituate 5

Sam DeGiacomo went 6 and 2/3 innings and allowed only four hits, helping the Skippers (1-1) get their first win of the season.

Pat Doonan had a double and the winning RBI single, and Brendan Doonan had two hits. Dave Snowdale closed out the victory and had an RBI single in the third.

Cohasset will rely on a bevy of talented and determined seniors this season, all with a ton of experience.

"It's a senior laden team," Gallotta said. "Eight seniors started today (Tuesday). Six have been here for three years, Hill, Snowdale, Doonan, Goetz, DeGiacomo and Pinkus. Muir and Rose would have been with me for three years if it wasn't for the fact that guys at their position needed to play."

Skippers slay Dragons in opener

Experienced and deep team set to make waves this spring

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High girls tennis team started off the season with a 4-1 win over Duxbury, Wednesday. The Skippers are one of the areas most powerful teams and proved that point in the opener.

Meg Anderson (Sr.) returned in the number one singles role and won 6-2, 6-0. The Bates bound star went 19-2 last year at number one and looks to have similar success this season.

"Meg has taken her game to another level," said Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan. "This is her best sport and she really worked hard over the winter."

Sally Meehan (Sr.) who normally plays second singles was out for an awards banquet in Boston (see page 20). Meehan will play field hockey and tennis next season at Colby College. She went 19-1 last season at second singles.

Maddy Altholtz (So.) stepped in and played second singles against Duxbury. Altholtz went 19-0 as a freshman at third singles and will be one of the better underclassmen in the area this season.

Duxbury's one and two singles players are very even according to Meehan, so Altholtz' 6-2, 6-4 win was all the more impressive.

"She is a little rock," Meehan said. "Over the winter she played a ton of tennis."

Jenny Magrudder (So.) filled in at third singles. The sophomore broke into the lineup around May of last year playing doubles.

She trailed 5-2 in the first set against Duxbury but came back and won in a tiebreaker. She lost the next two matches 6-4, 6-4, after the Skippers already

Hassan joins former local standouts including Cohasset's Straughn at Campanelli Stadium in ACC showdown

Former BC High letter winner turned ACC Player of the Week Alex Hassan will join a number of local college baseball players in a regionally televised ACC baseball game between Boston College and Duke at Campanelli Stadium, Saturday, April 5th.

A four-year letter winner at Boston College High School, the Boston-native Hassan is having a breakout season for the Blue Devils. The sophomore outfielder was recently the first Blue Devil since 2005 to be named ACC Player of the Week and is first on the team with a .400 batting average. Hassan, who can also pitch, has only allowed one earned run in 11 innings of relief with four saves.

Nate Freiman of Wellesley has also contributed to Duke's offense this season. The junior infielder is second on the team with a .571 slugging percentage in 14 games.

Raycom Sports will broadcast the game live beginning with the first pitch at 1pm.

Several Eagles also grew up locally, including two who hail from Milton. Sophomore outfielder John Spatola, a graduate of Roxbury Latin, is hitting .333 in 11 games this season. Meanwhile freshman outfielder Marc Perdios, a Catholic Memorial graduate, is third on the team with 17 runs scored. Sophomore outfielder Sam Shaughnessy of Newton and freshman infielder Mickey Wiswall of Stoneham will also represent the Eagles in Saturday's contest.

BC's starting rotation includes junior RHP James MacDonald of Danvers. Other local pitchers include junior RHP Teddie Straughn (Cohasset) and sophomore RHP Chris Kowalski (Boston). Rounding out the bullpen is a trio of local freshmen: LHP Nate Bayuk (Foxboro), RHP John Leonard (Hanover), and RHP Kyle Prohovich (Weston).

Tickets are $5 general admission. For tickets by phone, call the Brockton Rox at (508) 559-7000 or online at: www.brocktonrox.com. Raycom Sports will broadcast the game live beginning with the first pitch at 1pm.

The Brockton Rox host the Nashua Pride in its 2008 home opener on Saturday, May 24th. Season tickets, Mini-plans, and group outings are now on sale by calling the Rox front office at (508) 559-7000, or online at: www.brocktonrox.com.

"She can really compete," Meehan said. "When I knew Sally was going to be out she (Magrudder) stuck in my mind because she is such a good competitor."

Maggie McGoldrick (jr.) and Jean Thomae (Jr.) had a great match at first doubles. Last season the Dragons owned the Skippers in doubles play, but the girls made a statement Wednesday winning both points.

McGoldrick and Thomae trailed early in the first set but won 7-6. Duxbury turned it on in the second set and won 6-2.

"They flat out out-played us in the second set," Meehan said. "We met at the mound and re-adjusted. We weren't going to hit through them so we started lobbing and adjusting the pace."

Last season the Dragons owned the Skippers in doubles play, but the girls made a statement Wednesday winning both points.

It worked perfect, as the girls won 6-0 to grab a key match point.

"That showed me they could adjust," Meehan said. "It shows they can play more than one speed—I was psyched for them, it was a big point."

Laura Allen (Jr.) and Danielle Sookiasian (Fr.) won 6-4, 6-4 at second doubles. Cohasset is deep with 28 girls on junior varsity and varsity and Meehan wasn't sure what was going to happen at second doubles heading into the season. Early on at practice, she could see that the veteran Allen, and the speedster Sookiasian, had great chemistry—a key element in doubles tennis.

"They just really connected well," she said.

Cohasset's Sally Meehan wins writing contest

Boston, MA – Sally Meehan, a 12th grader at Cohasset High School was chosen as a winner of the 2008 Will McDonough Writing Contest presented by The Sports Museum. The contest, which was sponsored by the Boston Globe and Bank of America, was open to students in grades 4-12 and received over 1,800 entries. A winner was selected from each grade.

Meehan's essay, "Victory Through Determination" will be displayed in The Sports Museum's Will McDonough exhibit. Meehan and other contest winners will also be attending an award ceremony and Celtics game at the TD Banknorth Garden on April 2nd.

"We're thrilled about the widespread participation in the contest," said Michelle Gormley, Education Director of The Sports Museum. "Everyone did such a great job, it was really difficult for the judges to choose."

The contest was designed to encourage the development of language and writing skills while incorporating the topic of sports and such concepts as leadership, teamwork, respect and perseverance.

The contest was designed to encourage the development of language and writing skills while incorporating the topic of sports and such concepts as leadership, teamwork, respect and perseverance. The winning essays were chosen by editors and writers from the Boston Globe. Suggested essay ideas included "good sports/bad sports", "what makes a team great" and "character counts." The students were judged on how well they organized and expressed their ideas and how they addressed the topic.

Will McDonough, a Boston Globe columnist of 44 years, was the Globe's only sports-writer to be nominated for the Pulitzer Prize. He passed away in January 2003. McDonough was a mentor to young writers and for this reason, The Sports Museum and his colleagues from the Globe dedicated this contest in his memory.

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

Hey everyone!

Yet another month has gone by, hopefully taking with it the snow, sleet, and rain. It is time to dust off the beach towels and floral prints because one can safely say, enough already! Yes, so far April has fooled everyone into believing that the sunshine has finally arrived.

With the new Spring sports season in full motion, CHS and the town of Cohasset may find some new stars on the fields and courts exhibited by the vast array of athletic talents. Tuesday marked the home opener for the varsity basketball team where CHS senior Brian Hill took the mound against Scituate's Blaine O'Brian. Each pitched the entire game as major league scouts from professional teams like the Mets, Angels, and Red Sox watched.

Unfortunately, the boys in blue were unable to hold up against Scituate, losing 1-0. Happily the boy's varsity lacrosse team faced off with Catholic Memorial in their debut game of the season, winning 13-9! Later in the week, the girls' varsity lacrosse and tennis teams also donned their game faces in their starting competitions. No doubt this final session of school-run athletics will provide multiple thrills and entertainment for any avid CHS fan!

In other news, another one the Skippers brightest stars was published in the thrice annual, Teen Ink Magazine. Senior Cliff Musto graced the pages of the mag after writing what was clearly an awesome essay. Congratulations Cliff!

Now, it is time for the week's main events:

- Monday, March 31st: The last day of the month but the first day of a new school week!
- Tuesday, April 1st: Hello April. Cohasset High hosted an array of sporting events including Lacrosse and Baseball.
- Wednesday, April 2nd: There was no love as the tennis team stepped onto the court to play their first game against Duxbury. Also, the female lax (lacrosse) team stepped onto the enemy field for their premiere match.
- Thursday, April 3rd: A day marked by further sporting events.
- Friday, April 4th: The Senior SEMSBA Music Festival!

Well, that's it for me this week. Have a safe and fun weekend!

Christine Kent is a senior at CHS. Her column appears weekly in the Mariner..

Take the kids on a cruise

Fran Golden
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

When families go on a vacation, the kids want to have fun. You as a parent want your kids happily entertained - to like the experience and maybe learn something. And you want to enjoy yourself, too, and hopefully find a little time to relax.

Cruise lines, recognizing all this, have set out to become the perfect family-friendly vacation product.

Ships themselves are increasingly being designed as family playgrounds, with plenty of kid-appealing features.

All the major lines now have kids' programs during the day and into the evening with age-appropriate and fun activities catering to various ages from toddlers to teens.

Kids are no longer an afterthought - in fact the cruise lines realize it's important to make them happy today because they are the cruisers of tomorrow.

Here are my picks of the best cruises for families.

Freedom of the Seas and Liberty of the Seas

New, big and active, these 3,634-passenger Royal Caribbean ships are packed with fun stuff to do from onboard wave surfing to ice skating. Young mall rats will feel at home in the expansive indoor promenade with shops and a Ben & Jerry's. There's a shipboard Johnny Rockets too. The Adventure Ocean program for kids ages 3 to 17, offers a plethora of activities for five distinct age groupings including 'tweens and teens, with counselors leading the action from expansive facilities.

The ships cruise in the eastern and western Caribbean on one-week itineraries.

Carnival Liberty and Carnival Freedom

As the big Kahuna of the industry, the "Fun Ship" line is well established in catering to the younger set. On these new 2,974-passenger ships, kids' clubs are equipped with PlayStation 2 and Xbox consoles, computer games and candy-making machines for the bigger kids and a soft play area and outdoor wading pool for toddlers. Teens get a hip disco complete with DJ. Activities are offered for four age groups (2-5, 6-8, 9-11 and 12-17). Potty training is not required.

Especially for families with older kids, try the 12-day Mediterranean on Carnival Freedom, an excellent opportunity to introduce the kids to Europe. Or do a week in the eastern or western Caribbean on Carnival Liberty.

Disney Magic and Disney Wonder

It's no surprise that these 1,760-passenger ships pull out all the stops for families, with nearly an entire deck dedicated to kids' programming. Activities are offered for ages 3-4, 5-7, 8-9, 10-12 and teens (who get a clubhouse on top of the ship). A nursery cares for babies from three months. More than any other line, nighttime shows on Disney are family-oriented. First-run Disney movies are shown, and contests and other participatory events encourage family togetherness. Costumed character spottings are frequent.

Spend a week in the Mexican Riviera on the Disney Magic, or do a four-night Bahamas cruise on the Disney Wonder (easily combined with a few nights at Disney World).

Caribbean Princess

At the Fun Zone on this pretty 3,100-passenger ship (and sister shops Emerald and Crown), Princess Pelicans (ages 3-7) do arts and crafts, games and scavenger hunts and splash in the kiddie pool. Shockwaves (for ages 8-12) includes PlayStation 2, movies and backstage tours as well as a science program in conjunction with the California Science Center. Teens get Remix, with their own teen center, sports competitions, late-night movies and hot tub parties. Choose Personal Choice Dining and take the kids to the dining room when they are hungry, rather than at a set time.

Norwegian Pearl and Norwegian Gem

These ships have the cool feature of bowling alleys. The 2,400-passenger vessels, along with sister ship Jewel, are bright and hip and also boast Freestyle Dining which means you eat when you want at your choice of a dozen eateries (for $20 the Teppanyaki restaurant is worth the splurge). Kids' facilities include indoor and outdoor play areas and a video arcade. Youth counselors lead activities (for ages 2-5, 6-8, 9-12 and 13-17). The mod teens' club has its own juice bar.

Ooosterdam and Westerdam

Holland America is more adult-oriented, but nonetheless a good choice for those with teens and well-behaved younger kids. On these 1,848-passenger ships (and their sister ships), teens get their own hangout, The Loft, modeled after a New York artist loft with music, video games and a large-screen movie area connected to a secluded, teens-only sun deck. For younger kids, the Club HAL program has a play area for ages 3-7 and arcade/club for those ages 8-12. The Culinary Arts Center on these ships includes cooking classes for kids and teens.

Try these ships in Alaska.

High-end options

Luxury cruise lines are getting an increasing number of family cruisers as well. The Crystal Serenity (www.crystalcruises.com) is fancy all the way, but the 1,080-passenger ship is nonetheless an excellent venue for multigenerational cruises. Junior Activities Directors (more are added based on the number of kids onboard) run Fantasia for ages 3-7 and Waves for ages 8-17 in dedicated kids' space, a rarity on luxury ships. The little kids can play in giant padded cubes and enjoy arts and crafts and toys and games; the bigger kids enjoy pool and disco parties, and PlayStation consoles. Special tours take kids to the galley and backstage in the theater.

Cunard's new 2,014-passenger ocean liner Queen Victoria (www.cunard.com) has real British nannies to look after the little ones in the Play Zone Nursery and Children's Center (for ages 1 to 6). A youth staff keeps older kids (7 to 16) busy with sports and games, and they get their own spot, The Zone, a cheery space well-equipped with PlayStation 3 systems and a jukebox. Those age 16 and up can participate in shipboard offerings including daily fencing lessons. A large outdoor deck area is reserved for families to sun together. You and your kids can enjoy formal afternoon tea together at Children's Tea.

Both ships are doing 12-day Mediterranean cruises this summer.

FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

Education of the artist

Master's students work in all mediums at School of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston

By Kristine Diederich
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Traveling in Boston's Fenway district, you might not notice the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston.

Nestled between world-class museums and universities, and a world champion baseball team's home, it is not concerned with its outward appearance. But inside its doors, revolutionary things are happening.

This is the time of year when graduate students in the master's of fine arts program present their thesis exhibitions, the culmination of their studies. Seven students recently exhibited their work in a show titled "Somewhere Felt" at Space Other Gallery in Boston.

But what does it mean to a practicing artist to have a master's degree?

"It's a different level of commitment," said third-year graduate student Chuck Chaney. "We're all here by choice. It's listening to yourself and not necessarily doing what you 'should' do.

"For me, I came to art school to be an artist. This was a very deep personal (decision)," he said. "I want to drink it in; in a kind of Socrates sort of way, I want to learn. I'm getting educated to get educated. It feeds my soul."

For Faith Johnson, a performance artist, The Museum School offered several things she was looking for.

"I wanted a three-year program. I was interested in performative programs. I don't think there are a lot of programs that have a performance aspect. (The Museum School) has a really strong performance program," said the third-year graduate student. Johnson is a 2000 graduate of Pacific Union College in Angwin, Calif., where she was an art major in painting and mixed media.

"I have an interest in teaching. I wanted to go back to school and have time to focus on my art. I wanted to be in a creative community, with connection to people."

MFA students are enrolled both at The Museum School and Tufts University, and graduate in two or three years with their degrees from Tufts. Two years of the program comprise academic courses, studio art, and additional seminars and colloquia. Many of these students take advantage of an optional third year, when they are able to work more intensely on their thesis exhibitions without taking additional courses.

The program does not require students to declare a major, nor are students required to stay within one form of art or department during their degree work. The Museum School encourages cross-pollination, self-sufficiency and responsibility, according to both Johnson and Chaney.

"I think The Museum School is kind of unique that way from other programs I looked into," said Johnson.

The school encourages students to "think about your idea first, then find the medium most conducive to that," said Chaney. "It is a really unique program."

Other graduate programs, he said, sometimes compartmentalize students, so the painters hang out with the painters and the photographers mix only with the photographers. There is no such division at The Museum School.

Although The Museum School was established in 1876, it has only been since 1956 and 1960 that they have offered undergraduate and graduate degrees, respectively, through their partnership with Tufts. According to David Brown, associate dean of academic affairs/graduate programs, the school developed its interdisciplinary approach in the late '60s.

"There was a real openness, then, to moving between mediums," said Brown. "Because the studio curriculum is open to all students, there aren't any levels. It's open to grad and undergrad students. It's really where their studio practice is evolving that informs a student (what courses they should take). Their evolution as a grad student will lead them ... to be a little more well-rounded."

There are 15 program areas of study at The Museum School exploring almost every possible avenue of art, from drawing, film and animation, and photography, to performance, text and image arts, and sound.

"That was one of the key reasons I was attracted to the school, to be able to move in and out," said Johnson. "I'd been out of undergrad for a while and I didn't think I fit into one category."

Chaney was in the working world for 13 years while also practicing his art before beginning at The Museum School. His work now incorporates photography into performance and installation art.

He attributes his evolution as an artist to his experience at The Museum School.

"Working with the development of a body of work with a consistent, fully formed idea and developing that into a project, my work is stronger now. It's very different from my previous work," he said. "Coming out of the master's program, I have a lot of ideas. I came back to some ideas I'd had. It's nice to get back into the studio and work on material that I'd put on hold."

Vasia Markides, a filmmaker and third-year graduate student, also felt the MFA program helped her evolve as an artist.

"The best part of going to grad school for art is learning how to think differently, thinking between all the layers of an idea. You have to look ... at things in a multi-dimensional level," she said. Markides was a painter but found that medium insufficient to express all of her thoughts and ideas.

"This school was unique, so flexible in its approach to education," she said. "I don't consider myself just a filmmaker. The school really pushes you. It pushes you outside your comfort.

"I'm ready. I think they prepare you, expect you to be self-motivated, to be disciplined," said Markides.

But graduation is often mixed with bittersweet feelings about next steps.

"I'm really excited. I'm going back to work," said Chaney. "I'm also sort of realistic about it. Mostly, I have to keep all of these habits in practice, making sure I do a little bit of work every day, keep going with it, not just thinking about it."

Brown sees a world of growing opportunities for Museum School graduates, and often hears from alumni around the world.

"No longer would one define success as just going to a gallery system and showing at a gallery ... as a painter or whatever," said Brown. "Many, many, many go on to teach at the college level in one form or another. They (become) Fulbright scholars. People have launched really successful careers (as professional artists). There are all sorts of directions.

"That's the kind of thing I see; they're not going to follow a traditional track. They're going to be doing an awful lot more."

Tuition for 2007-2008 is $30,704 per year. In the third year, there is currently no tuition charged, however, a studio rental fee is $1,250 per semester. Visit www.smfa.edu for more information about The School of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston.

'Dream' Kitchen Tour is April 11

South Shore Community Center Kitchen Tour will take place from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Friday, April 11. Cost is $25, $30 after March 31. Tickets can be purchased at South Shore Community Center or by calling 781-383-0088. Payment can be made by cash, check or charge.

The history and beauty of the homes participating in the 2008 South Shore Community Center Kitchen tour celebrate both the old and the new and capture the essence of the seaside community of Cohasset. This year, the South Shore Community Center is proud to have the opportunity to showcase five homes. Four of the homes are scattered along the coastline off of Jerusalem Road and one home is directly on Cohasset's historic town common.

One of the homes participating in the tour is the Barrett home. Originally built in 1885, this home sits on a hill overlooking Straight's Pond. The renovation of this home took place in 2003, with the goal of maintaining the architectural integrity of the home while providing the homeowners with modern day amenities. The kitchen, in particular, demonstrates this delicate balance. Designed by Kitchen Concepts of Norwell, this modern-day version of a classic Victorian kitchen combines period details from glass cabinet knobs and white farmer's sink with white Carerra marble countertops, sub-zero refrigerator and Viking stove. The homeowner is working with Kate Dickerson Designs of Hingham and florist Sue Chessia, both of whom volunteered their time to wow visitors with beautiful table settings, arrangements and accents. Also, the Borrowed Butler and Hola will provide light fare.

Tickets for the tour may be purchased by visiting or calling South Shore Community Center at 781-383-0088.

Coffey Memorial Walk, part of history of race

Some run road races for the athleticism. Some run for the camaraderie. Inevitably, it all comes back to a common bond…the holy grail of events…the road race T-shirt. This one giveaway item was the seed, which grew into the Cohasset Road Race by the Sea Walk, now known as the Fran Coffey Memorial Fun Walk, which takes place this Sunday at 10 a.m. at Sandy Beach. (Visit: www.roadracebythesea.com)

To understand the Walk, one must look at the history of the road race itself. Sharpless Jones, Fran Coffey and Roy Fitzsimmons founded the race in the 1970s. Running was less about "weekend warriors" and more about competition.

A huge rivalry existed between two local Cohasset businesses, The Good Sport and Cohasset Liquors. Each worked hard to recruit big name marathoners like Bill Rodgers and other top performers of the Greater Boston Track Club. The race shirt, produced by Goodwin Graphics for all 32 years of the race, was serious business. It wasn't just an article of clothing…it was a sense of pride. Each business had their own version, each with their own logo. The walk was born when Andy Hailer, a race volunteer, requested one such shirt.

"I was not a member of either team that year. In fact, I was no longer a runner. Peter Logan, road race director, said if I wanted a shirt, I'd have to walk the route to get it," recalls Hailer.

The Hailer of today — now store manager at Curtis Liquors, a race sponsor — is a slender athlete who runs as much as he can and watches his diet. Back then things were markedly different. A walk of 6.2 was not a sure thing.

"I had an accident in which I fell three stories and landed on a picket fence. My running came to a halt. My recovery was slow going. Before I knew it I was about 300 pounds," says Hailer.

Hailer successfully walked the route and received the shirt from his friend Logan after crossing the finish line. The following year was no different: if he wanted a shirt he had to earn it. So Hailer walked again. This time, he was joined by five or six local residents who happened to be out for a Sunday stroll. By year three there were 100 people at the Walk's start line. Everyone who accompanied Andy that year received a hat and were dubbed "Andy's Angels."

As it evolved, the Walk was given an early start of 10 a.m. and moved to the beach. It's a win/win for the Rotary and participants. It's a beautiful route and as with the race itself, all proceeds go to help others.

Recently, the event was renamed in honor of the late Fran Coffey. His wife, Kit, was an original "Andy's Angel" and is still involved. Walk proceeds go to places close to heart of the Coffey family, including the Bishop Ruocco House in Lakeville, as well as "People in Need" at St. Patrick's church in Roxbury. Funds help those who face everyday challenges like paying the rent, registering a car or even funeral costs.

Logan and Hailer have both put years into the walk and run are now behind the scenes, chasing prizes on behalf of long-time race sponsor, Curtis Liquors.

"Life's exciting," says Hailer, "you've got to keep moving on."

"Going to the Wine Cellars for the Night, Châlons, France."

From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society

In the fall of 2005 the Historical Society exhibited its Margaret Hall collection, a stunning series of photographs taken in the aftermath of World War I by Margaret Hall, a Red Cross volunteer. Along with her photographs, we shared entries from the journals she kept while in France tending to wounded soldiers and prisoners of war. The photographs printed here are but two of the many we have in our collection

This summer we will be sending approximately 60 of her photographs and her three journals to France where they will be exhibited in the World War I museum at the Somme. We are all very excited to be sharing our Margaret Hall collection in this way. In the meantime her photographs and journals are here at the Society for any interested visitor to see.

Please stop by and see them. We promise you will be fascinated and very moved.

The Cohasset Historical Society is grateful to those who remember us with donations of Cohasset photographs, textiles and memorabilia. We would like to take this occasion to thank you for your continued generous support.

If you have enjoyed reading our columns and discovering some of what we hold in our archives, please consider supporting the Historical Society. Your tax-deductible donation can be sent to: Cohasset Historical Society, PO Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025. All donations are gratefully appreciated.

If you have something that you would consider donating to our archives please give us a call at 781-383-1434.

From the Archives is a weekly feature provided by Cohasset Historical Society.

MS Walk starts and finishes at Community Center

Family and corporate walk teams and volunteers can register online at MSnewengland.org, call 800-493-9255 or in person the day of the event.

Hundreds of Cohasset and South Shore residents are rallying at the South Shore Community Center, Saturday, April 12, for the MS LifeLines Walk to create a world free of multiple sclerosis. A spring tradition for nearly 20 years, walkers follow a 5-mile accessible path starting at 10 a.m. from the center. Check in is 8:30 a.m. Each walker is encouraged to raise a minimum of $100, but most collect more than $200. Organized by National Multiple Sclerosis Society, Central New England Chapter, more than 200,000 walkers participate nationwide in the MS Walk each year at more than 600 sites, and raise more than $30 million. Family and corporate walk teams and volunteers can register online at MSnewengland.org, call 800-493-9255 or in person the day of the event.

In 2007, nearly 9,000 walkers registered for the walk, and raised more than $2 million. Eighty-five percent of money raised by the chapter provides help for today, and hope for tomorrow to 14,000 individuals and families affected by MS in Massachusetts and New Hampshire through MS education, support, advocacy and research. Of the many corporate sponsors that make the MS Walk possible each year, the most loyal and generous are MS LifeLines, Pro Con Inc., Whole Foods Market, Hanover Insurance Group, WCVB-TV5 and Community Newspaper Company.

Multiple sclerosis interrupts the flow of information from the brain to the body and can stop people from moving forward in their lives. The progress, severity and specific symptoms of MS in any one person cannot yet be predicted, but advances in research and treatment are moving closer to a world free of MS. Most people with MS are diagnosed between the ages of 20 and 50, and more than twice as many women as men have the disease. MS affects more than 400,000 people in the United States, and 2.5 million worldwide. Studies show that early and ongoing treatment with an FDA-approved therapy can reduce future disease activity and improve quality of life for many

South Shore Community Center Kitchen Tour will take place from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Friday, April 11. Cost is $25, $30 after March 31. Tickets can be purchased at South Shore Community Center or by calling 781-383-0088. Payment can be made by cash, check or charge.

The history and beauty of the homes participating in the 2008 South Shore Community Center Kitchen tour celebrate both the old and the new and capture the essence of the seaside community of Cohasset. This year, the South Shore Community Center is proud to have the opportunity to showcase five homes. Four of the homes are scattered along the coastline off of Jerusalem Road and one home is directly on Cohasset's historic town common.

One of the homes participating in the tour is the Barrett home. Originally built in 1885, this home sits on a hill overlooking Straight's Pond. The renovation of this home took place in 2003, with the goal of maintaining the architectural integrity of the home while providing the homeowners with modern day amenities. The kitchen, in particular, demonstrates this delicate balance. Designed by Kitchen Concepts of Norwell, this modern-day version of a classic Victorian kitchen combines period details from glass cabinet knobs and white farmer's sink with white Carerra marble countertops, sub-zero refrigerator and Viking stove. The homeowner is working with Kate Dickerson Designs of Hingham and florist Sue Chessia, both of whom volunteered their time to wow visitors with beautiful table settings, arrangements and accents. Also, the Borrowed Butler and Hola will provide light fare.

Tickets for the tour may be purchased by visiting or calling South Shore Community Center at 781-383-0088.

Some run road races for the athleticism. Some run for the camaraderie. Inevitably, it all comes back to a common bond…the holy grail of events…the road race T-shirt. This one giveaway item was the seed, which grew into the Cohasset Road Race by the Sea Walk, now known as the Fran Coffey Memorial Fun Walk, which takes place this Sunday at 10 a.m. at Sandy Beach. (Visit: www.roadracebythesea.com)

To understand the Walk, one must look at the history of the road race itself. Sharpless Jones, Fran Coffey and Roy Fitzsimmons founded the race in the 1970s. Running was less about "weekend warriors" and more about competition.

A huge rivalry existed between two local Cohasset businesses, The Good Sport and Cohasset Liquors. Each worked hard to recruit big name marathoners like Bill Rodgers and other top performers of the Greater Boston Track Club. The race shirt, produced by Goodwin Graphics for all 32 years of the race, was serious business. It wasn't just an article of clothing…it was a sense of pride. Each business had their own version, each with their own logo. The walk was born when Andy Hailer, a race volunteer, requested one such shirt.

"I was not a member of either team that year. In fact, I was no longer a runner. Peter Logan, road race director, said if I wanted a shirt, I'd have to walk the route to get it," recalls Hailer.

The Hailer of today — now store manager at Curtis Liquors, a race sponsor — is a slender athlete who runs as much as he can and watches his diet. Back then things were markedly different. A walk of 6.2 was not a sure thing.

"I had an accident in which I fell three stories and landed on a picket fence. My running came to a halt. My recovery was slow going. Before I knew it I was about 300 pounds," says Hailer.

Hailer successfully walked the route and received the shirt from his friend Logan after crossing the finish line. The following year was no different: if he wanted a shirt he had to earn it. So Hailer walked again. This time, he was joined by five or six local residents who happened to be out for a Sunday stroll. By year three there were 100 people at the Walk's start line. Everyone who accompanied Andy that year received a hat and were dubbed "Andy's Angels."

As it evolved, the Walk was given an early start of 10 a.m. and moved to the beach. It's a win/win for the Rotary and participants. It's a beautiful route and as with the race itself, all proceeds go to help others.

Recently, the event was renamed in honor of the late Fran Coffey. His wife, Kit, was an original "Andy's Angel" and is still involved. Walk proceeds go to places close to heart of the Coffey family, including the Bishop Ruocco House in Lakeville, as well as "People in Need" at St. Patrick's church in Roxbury. Funds help those who face everyday challenges like paying the rent, registering a car or even funeral costs.

Logan and Hailer have both put years into the walk and run are now behind the scenes, chasing prizes on behalf of long-time race sponsor, Curtis Liquors.

From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society

In the fall of 2005 the Historical Society exhibited its Margaret Hall collection, a stunning series of photographs taken in the aftermath of World War I by Margaret Hall, a Red Cross volunteer. Along with her photographs, we shared entries from the journals she kept while in France tending to wounded soldiers and prisoners of war. The photographs printed here are but two of the many we have in our collection

This summer we will be sending approximately 60 of her photographs and her three journals to France where they will be exhibited in the World War I museum at the Somme. We are all very excited to be sharing our Margaret Hall collection in this way. In the meantime her photographs and journals are here at the Society for any interested visitor to see.

Please stop by and see them. We promise you will be fascinated and very moved.

The Cohasset Historical Society is grateful to those who remember us with donations of Cohasset photographs, textiles and memorabilia. We would like to take this occasion to thank you for your continued generous support.

If you have enjoyed reading our columns and discovering some of what we hold in our archives, please consider supporting the Historical Society. Your tax-deductible donation can be sent to: Cohasset Historical Society, PO Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025. All donations are gratefully appreciated.

Treat's Pond: where we go from here

COMMENTARY

TOM CALLAHAN

Expanding upon the thoughts I expressed at Town Meeting as to where we go from here:

Recognize that the Army Corps project is primarily a salt marsh restoration project. The salt marsh restoration, at $300K for our share, should be considered on its own merits this fall, understanding, as I am convinced, that Sandy Cove is not an option and that to do nothing condemns Treat's Pond to its ongoing slow death. That it also has a flood control benefit is a bonus, and the question then becomes how much of a bonus it is and should it tip the scale in favor of the restoration?

Although I now understand that the town wide flood and storm water study won't be finished until fall, an interim report regarding James Brook and James Meadow was available at Town Meeting, with obvious findings. To me, we know what the problem is there – it's now only a question of solutions and cost and prioritization (assuming we address the town-wide problems in stages). For now, I would re-task the contractor for interim answers to these questions necessary for fall Town Meeting:

Will the flood control aspects of the Army Corps project completely resolve the Atlantic Avenue flooding problem?

If not and we decide to go with that project anyway, what supplemental measures would the town need to take at what estimated cost?

If we decide not to pursue the Army Corps project, what solutions for Atlantic Avenue flooding would the town need to take and at what estimated cost?

Those to me are the only relevant questions at this point regarding Atlantic Avenue. Looking strictly at the flood control aspects of this, we should choose the cheaper course of action, because we eventually have to do something to address Atlantic Avenue's problem. If (C), i.e. doing our own flood control project is the cheapest option, then the Army Corps project is evaluated simply on the merits of $300K for salt marsh restoration, yea or nay. However, if (A) is answered "yes," I suspect the $300K will prove to be the cheapest option for flood control, and so we do it, gaining both benefits of flood control and saving Treat's Pond.

We do not need to spend money to second-guess the Army Corps' engineering or proposed solution for the isolated goal of salt marsh restoration. To continue to suggest Sandy Cove as an option defies science and only adds to the $300K cost. All we need to do with the Army Corps' data is double-check and quantify the bonus flood control benefit by answering question (A) above.

If the Army Corps project is pursued because of a dual benefit of salt marsh restoration and complete resolution of Atlantic Avenue flooding, one would then hope the opposing abutters would act for the greater good. But if necessary, we should be prepared to use eminent domain power, which allows the project to proceed with the only fight being about compensation. Yes, we have gone the eminent domain route before and have paid more than estimated (see Wolf Pit), but I would suggest there is a monumental difference between an unseen pipe under the ground and the loss of possibly developable lots. I would also suspect that in other areas of town, solving storm water problems will also involve pipes, necessary easements and the opposition of personal friends and neighbors. Deciding whether we pursue good for the few or the many, we will either get over that squeamishness or continue the status quo, with possible solutions coming ad hoc, to whichever neighborhood is loudest at the time, at probably more cost.

Cohasset included in no-discharge area

"It makes complete sense to ban discharge of effluent from the waters in which we swim, boat and fish."
— State Sen. Robert Hedlund

Ban on dumping boat sewage would also cover North and South rivers and adjacent waters.

Boats would be prohibited from discharging all sewage – including treated waste – off the coast of the upper South Shore under a proposal the Patrick Administration has submitted to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Secretary of Energy and Environmental Affairs Ian Bowles announced recently.

EEA, through its Office of Coastal Zone Management, recommended that the EPA approve designation of the coastal waters of Scituate, Marshfield and Cohasset as a vessel No Discharge Area. The proposed ban on discharge of all boat sewage would also apply in the North and South rivers and adjacent coastal waters.

If approved by the EPA, this would be the Commonwealth's ninth No Discharge Area. NDAs already protect the coastal waters of Plymouth, Kingston, Duxbury and Harwich; Buzzards Bay; Waquoit Bay in Falmouth; Three Bays/Centerville Harbor in Barnstable; Chatham's Stage Harbor; Wellfleet Harbor; and coastal waters of Nantucket from Muskeget Island to Great Point.

"Our nomination of the coastal waters of the upper South Shore as a No Discharge Area is another example of strong state, regional, and local commitments to improving water quality and protecting valuable coastal resources," Bowles said. "Gov. Patrick's goal is ultimately to make all of the Commonwealth's coastal waters No Discharge Areas, and this is a big step toward that goal."

At 54 square miles, the new NDA would be the third largest in the Commonwealth, encompassing two National Natural Landmarks – North and South Rivers – and covering an area that supports nearly 3,000 commercial and recreational boats. Scituate, Cohasset, Marshfield and towns along the North River – including Norwell, Hanover and Pembroke – sustain a variety of water-related activities including lobster harvesting, fishing and shell-fishing, tourism, boating, sailing and kayaking. The North River is one of only five state-designated Scenic and Recreational Rivers.

"The proposed NDA will provide additional protection to a region that prizes it coastal character and resources. These include significant shell-fishing areas, eelgrass beds, anadromous fish runs and over a dozen coastal recreational beaches," CZM director Leslie-Ann McGee said.

NDAs protect water quality and aquatic life from pathogens, nutrients and chemical products contained in discharged sewage, and also reduce the risk of human illness, making it safer to swim, boat, fish and eat shellfish from protected waters. NDAs can also impede the growth of harmful algae that occurs due to high nutrient levels in sewage discharge.

Under the Clean Water Act, a body of water can be designated an NDA if local, state and federal authorities determine that the area is ecologically and recreationally important enough to merit protection above and beyond that provided by existing state and federal laws. In Massachusetts, EEA's CZM office works closely with communities and the EPA to establish NDAs as part of a comprehensive regional pollution abatement approach that includes wastewater management through local sewering initiatives, storm water mitigation and low-impact development strategies.

Related efforts to authorize NDAs are currently under way for Salem Sound, Cape Cod Bay and Boston Harbor. EEA published a notice on the Salem Sound NDA in the March 26 Environmental Monitor, opening a 21-day public comment period on that proposal.

"This protection will improve Pembroke's water quality, which is not only essential to our health and well-being, but is also a critical piece of our local economy," said Senate President Therese Murray. "Both the residents and visitors to Pembroke will benefit from this designation by being able to utilize waterways that are free from discharge."

State Sen. Robert Creedon said, "We are pleased both state and federal governments are taking joint action to clean up the waterways of the Commonwealth."

"It makes complete sense to ban discharge of effluent from the waters in which we swim, boat and fish," State Sen. Robert Hedlund said.

"Thank you to Scituate and Marshfield town officials, in particular our harbormasters and Waterways Committee officials, for their strong advocacy in seeking to establish a No Discharge Area designation for six coastal communities," state Rep. Frank Hynes said. "As a result of officials' hard work, with technical assistance and coordination by Coastal Zone Management staff, two additional boat sewage pumping facilities will be available for boaters in Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Norwell, Hanover and Pembroke. This new NDA will assist in the protection and enhancement of our coastal waters and will further protect public health, water quality and the marine environment."

"It is of utmost importance that we make every effort to keep our oceans as clean as possible," said state Rep. Garrett J. Bradley. "Designating no discharge areas will help to ensure that the waters can be enjoyed by members of the community for many years to come. I appreciate all the efforts of the Office of Coastal Zone Management to protect our vital natural resources."

"Our Harbor is probably the most cherished vista in Cohasset and plays a vital role in the economic and recreational aspects of the community. In addition to supporting a working lobster fleet, its waters and surroundings are enjoyed by many in the community for swimming and boating." said Karen Quigley, chairwoman of the Cohasset Harbor Health Committee. "The NDA nomination enjoys wide support in the community and is an important part of a larger, overall plan the town is working on to preserve and improve the quality of the Harbor's waters."

Scituate Harbormaster Mark Patterson said, "The NDA designation is an opportunity to protect our waters and to raise awareness about the importance of stewardship. The fact that we are joined in the application by the towns of Marshfield and Cohasset is a testament to the importance of protecting our coastal waters on a regional level."

"The North and South Rivers Watershed Association has been advocating for an NDA for many years," said Samantha Woods, NSRWA executive director. "The water quality improvements that will result from the NDA could potentially help with opening shellfish beds in the South River, a goal of the NSRWA, as well as improve water quality in general."

Green tennis anyone?

For the second year in a row, Cedar Street resident Howie Altholtz has purchased the cans and related material, and will take responsibility for collection and disposal of recycling at the town tennis courts. He encourages players to use the designated containers for plastic ball cans, water bottles, etc, and the DPW garbage container for non-recyclables.

"Last year was a tremendous success," said Altholtz, " with huge amounts of material saved from the trash bins, which is great for the environment and a cost savings for the town." Altholtz hopes that after the value of the program proves itself, the DPW will consider taking it over in future years.

'Lost art' is alive and well

Leather business continues to thrive

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Whether repairing a belt loop or making custom luggage for a rock star, it's all in a day's work for Renaissance Leather owner Patrick O'Callaghan.

Although he and his wife, Barbara, go about their business quietly and without fanfare, their presence in downtown Hingham is deeply felt. Much to the relief of their loyal customers, the couple recently was able to relocate their shop to 105 North St. in Hingham Square when the 40 North St. building they had partially occupied since 1973 was sold.

"After we moved, we had old customers calling us up asking, 'Where are you?'" O'Callaghan said. "They were really freaked out when they thought we were gone."

Hingham resident Jane Hanron is "delighted" that Renaissance Leather will continue to operate downtown. "It would have been terrible to lose them. Their kind of talent isn't found much these days," she said. "The O'Callaghans were wonderful neighbors when the Unique Boutique, a thrift shop run by volunteers for the Hingham Visiting Nurse Association, was next door. They were friendly, pleasant, and very helpful."

When scheduled to work at the Unique Boutique, Hanron would greet Patrick in the morning and ask him what he was making that day. "He was always working on the most interesting projects," Hanron said.

The O'Callaghans work at what might be considered a fading art, and their business is thriving.

Once inside the shop, customers are amazed at the array of unique handcrafted wares, ranging from business card holders, briefcases, and knapsacks to coin purses, make up cases, vests, and sandals – many made to order – using top-grain cowhide. O'Callaghan even made a leather Jeep handle once to replace an inside metal one that had fallen off. The owner liked it better than the original one. O'Callaghan also repairs leather belts and jackets.

"There's nothing like the smell of real leather. Leather is very sensuous when you smell, feel, and look at it."
– Renaissance Leather owner Patrick O'Callaghan.

The latest offerings include handsome black and white tote bags and also what O'Callaghan jokingly calls the "Hershey's Kiss" bag – made of gold leather with black trim.

The new shop – which is set back from the street -- still has an appealing, laid-back 1970s aura combined with an Old World flavor. Strings of beads hang from the window, and antique suitcases covered with backstage passes to Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young, Aerosmith, Billy Joel, and Grateful Dead concerts casually on display bring back memories.

A work in progress, the new shop has space-saving wooden storage lofts crafted by O'Callaghan. "These create an open feeling and allow customers to get a sense of the smell of the leather – what it feels and looks like," he said, whereas in the old shop the leather was stored in the back room.

Genuine leather

The O'Callaghans craft each item – one at a time – from genuine leather.

"There's nothing like the smell of real leather," O'Callaghan said. "Leather is very sensuous when you smell, feel, and look at it."

Where did the name "Renaissance Leather" come from?

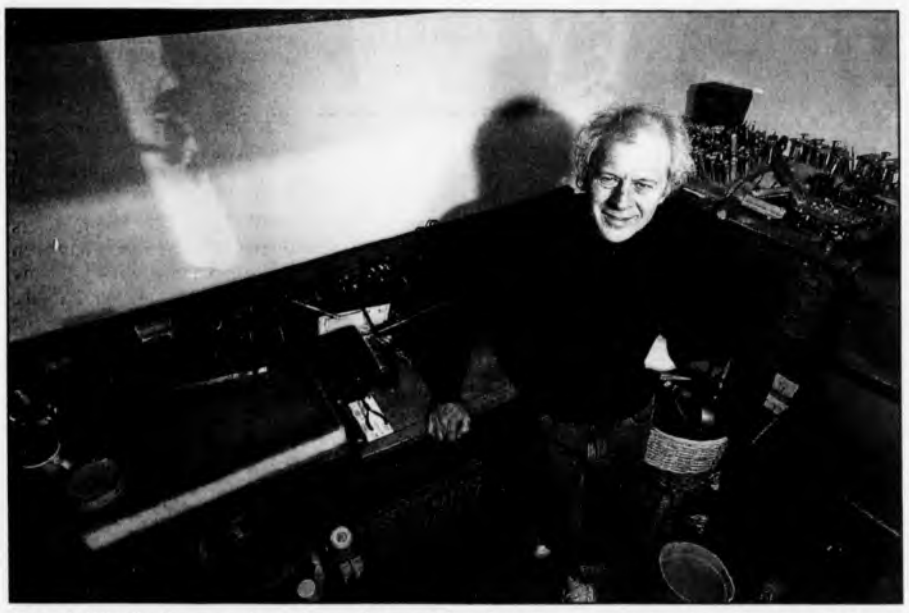
"I think of that period as an age when art and science came together," O'Callaghan said.

O'Callaghan is a self-taught craftsman.

He notes that the long-lasting business grew out of the 1970s philosophy that anything is possible. More than 30 years ago, as he was admiring a friend's sheepskin coat, it occurred to him that he could make one for himself. He was right. "I just assume I can do everything," he said modestly.

From there, O'Callaghan tried his hand at belts. Then friends began asking him to make items for them, and he did.

Now, thousands and thousands of projects later, ask O'Callaghan to make almost anything and he can do it. He has several photo albums of photos of most of his work – everything from doctor's bags and re-covered leather couches and chairs to chaps inlaid with dragon and flower designs and a saddle bag decorated with some 1,000 rhinestones for a woman who owns a white motorcycle. A leather trash bucket crafted by O'Callaghan sits in one of the offices at the StateHouse. O'Callaghan also makes sandals and belts for the Glastonbury Monastery monks.



Other projects include a guitar strap and front for a German Hank Williams impersonator, a hat band and luggage for country-western singer Charlie Daniels, and a guitar strap for rock and roll star Bob Seeger.

O'Callaghan also made a reproduction Elvis Presley belt at a customer's request and a gun holster for a man planning a hike in Alaska who feared he might encounter grisly bears.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Patrick O'Callaghan has been working with leather in his store Renaissance Leather since 1973. The store recently relocated to 105 North St. that at the top of the driveway to the right of the Hingham Post Office.

Patrick O'Callaghan stands in front of his work bench at Renaissance Leather. His clientele has included Neil Young, U2, Steven Tyler, and REM.

Creative approach

O'Callaghan likes to "play around" in the shop. "That's where I get my ideas," he said. "I'm not driven by how much money I'll get but by what entertains me."

An example of this is the plastic container he covered with pink leather on a whim — "just for fun," he said with a smile.

One day several years ago he answered the phone and Neil Young was on the other end, asking O'Callaghan to work on his leather motorcycle bag and chaps. At first he thought it was a prank call, but when Young mentioned a leather bag O'Callaghan had made for a friend of Young's, he realized the call was for real.

The multi-talented O'Callaghan (he also fixes computers, builds websites, works on old BMWs, and does cabinetry work) still uses an 80-year-old foot-operated treadle Singer sewing machine. "It's not how fast it goes that counts but how slow it goes to get things right," he said, pointing to a place in the pouch he was sewing that needed a pucker.

As he shared his thoughts about this fast-dying art, O'Callaghan finished off a Civil War "Rebel" hat he was custom-making for a fellow "who just wanted one."

When asked what purpose it would serve, he responded with a slight grin, "No particular reason that I know of. We don't ask questions!"

Also in the works was an order of 300 drawstring pouches from a New Hampshire company that manufactures fishing reels. The pouches are used to ship and store the reels. He recently made four padded leather columns with brass nails for use between bookshelves in a local show home.

O'Callaghan's manner may be low-key, but he is amazingly productive.

"I'll show you something I made this morning," he said, holding out a black leather portfolio and checkbook cover.

O'Callaghan's philosophy is that "if you're talking about what you did yesterday, then you haven't done anything today!"

Unique items and services offered include maps of the world he carves and letters, a Celtic drum case, a rifle sheath, boards for monopoly and chess, and antiques restoration, including repairing a suit of armor that was held together with leather straps.

The leather comes from a number of sources, including Ipswich, Mass., New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, California, and even West Germany.

O'Callaghan has also restored a seat on a bicycle made in the 1800s and the red seats in a 1961 Jaguar. Among his most challenging projects was rebuilding the front and rear leather seats and door panels of a 1957 Mercedes.

Elf shoes

Among his most unusual work are the leather goggles he made for a terrier who liked to sit on the back of his owner's motorcycle and the elf shoes, red leather tunic, and green leather hat he crafted for the father of a Nantucket shop owner who plays that role every year at Christmastime.

His wife makes all the leather wallets, belts, roses, birds and desk boxes. "Barbara also does all the book work and organizing," O'Callaghan said. "She was responsible for our recent move. If it wasn't for my wife's organizational skills, this place would be total madness!"

Much of their business comes by word of mouth -- and in earlier years, from hanging around backstage at rock concerts -- because the O'Callaghans don't advertise. "All roads lead here," he said.

A Quincy woman recently sent him a photo of Jimi Hendrix at Woodstock wearing a fringed tan leather vest and asked him to make her a copy. "This will take days to make, and then I will show her how to do the bead work," O'Callaghan said. "That way it will be a little less expensive and she'll have a connection with it. I like to get people involved."

Many customers return year after year, while others who move away often come back years later when they're in the area. "This is unique stuff," O'Callaghan said without a trace of self-aggrandizement. "I like to help customers design the items that they order. Everyone's a designer. They just don't know it."

Customers feel free to browse or to just stop by and shoot the breeze. "This is definitely a place where you can take your tie off," O'Callaghan said. "You have the freedom here to just be yourself."

More information about the shop and the O'Callaghans' custom leather products, including photographs, is available by visiting Renaissance Leather in person or online at www.queenleather.com.

The website is so-named because Barbara's nickname is "Queenie." Another reason for the name is that following a fire in the old North Street shop during the 1980s, the O'Callaghans noticed an undated contract for some saddle work-- stuck in one of the walls -- from the Queen of England.

Besides, explained Callaghan, "A lot of people have trouble spelling 'Renaissance,' whereas 'queen' is easy to spell!"

Fillmore Cannon

Advertising art director in the Manhattan

Born in Fayetteville, Tenn., he was the son of a country doctor. Mr. Cannon pursued his talent and interests in the arts and studied at Auburn University School of Architecture and the Harris School of Advertising. He lived in Chicago, New York City, Maine and Cohasset. He attended Riverside Military Academy in Gainesville, Ga., which served him well when he received a commission within less than a year, protecting the Panama Canal in the Anti-Artillery unit. After being transferred to the 275th Infantry, also known as the Trailblazers, of the 70th Division, he participated in the European theatre and was well remembered as the 1st Lieutenant who spared a company of men from complete doom during the critical Battle of the Bulge during the German encounter offense. His division was responsible for liberating the town of Lixing and his division was eventually made part of General George Patton's 3rd Army during the German conflict.

In his civilian career, Mr. Cannon being an excellent draftsman, excelled as an art director in the Manhattan advertising world. He was instrumental in organizing the Seagram's Design 375 and later handled freelance accounts for Revlon, Bic and other major brands of banks and phone companies. He specialized in the point of purchase display field where his "Marker Magic" rendered preliminary comps and his knowledge of lighting and motion displays were revered in the industry.

In his retirement, Mr. Cannon enjoyed portrait painting and had studied extensively at the Art's Student League with Robert Brackman and John Howard Sanden, winning the Leagues' Concourse Award. He continued his artwork after moving to Boston's South Shore and had been a member of the South Shore Art Center, The North River Art Society, and the Scituate Art Assoc. An obligation to help others is subject of talk

Glastonbury Abbey's will present a program titled "Am I My Neighbor's Keeper – If My Neighbor Lives Half a World Away?" at 7:15 p.m., on Thursday, April 17. The lecture is part of the Inter-Religious Lecture Series, "Listening to Other Voices: Prophets of Compassion: Who Cares?"

Do individuals have an obligation to help others? Ruth Messinger thinks yes – even if they are half a world away. She has made it her life's work. After serving in public service in New York City for 20 years, now as president of the American Jewish World Service, she directs support to 300 grassroots social change projects throughout the world. She has worked tirelessly to end the genocide in Dafur, Sudan. She will tell people what is needed, where and how people can transform the lives of others and gain something for themselves in the process. Recipient of the Jewish Council of Public Affairs Award in 2006, Messinger also received an honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters from Hebrew Union College in tribute to her life's work.

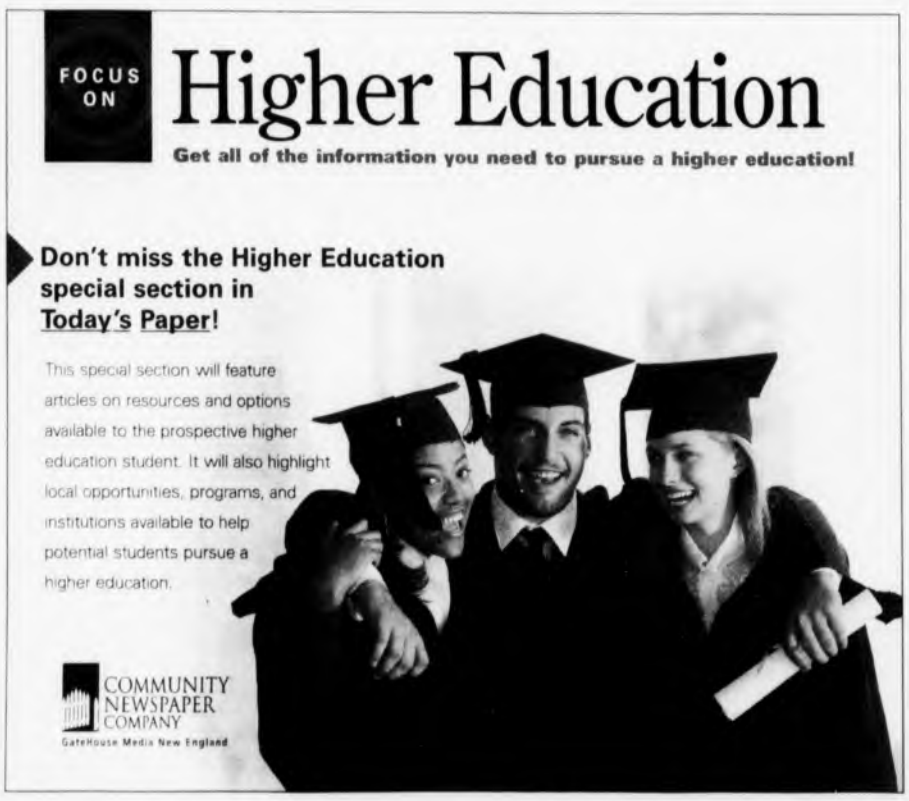
Interfaith Seder celebrates 'A Nation of Immigrants'

The Twelfth annual South Shore Interfaith Seder will be celebrated Sunday, April 13, at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in Hingham. This year it will focus on the theme that people are "A Nation of Immigrants." Children from the Children's Theatre Company in Boston will be singing at the service.

Through music, stories and rituals modeled on the traditional Passover Seder, children and adults from many diverse faiths and communities will join together to celebrate and honor the journeys that many citizens and their ancestors have made in becoming part of this nation. During the ceremony, the story of the Jewish Exodus from slavery in Egypt is retold, and its central message of freedom becomes relevant to all people and faith communities in today's world.



The ritual includes prayers of gratitude and appeals for compassion to care for all people, of all different faiths, races and backgrounds. In the Interfaith Seder's version of the Haggadah, or book that guides the Seder ritual, the Leader says, "We are all God's children, and if one of us suffers – even our enemy – we are all diminished." A bit later in the ceremony, the community says "that people will cast out the plagues that threaten everyone everywhere they are found, beginning in our own hearts." Thus the Seder calls on everyone to look within their own hearts, to take responsibility for personal thoughts, words and actions that might contribute to the suffering and oppression of others.

Traditionally, Passover, or Pesach, is a week-long celebration of the ancient story of Exodus, the Israelites' liberation from slavery in Egypt. It begins with the annual celebration of the Passover Seder. In the Exodus story, God sent 10 plagues down upon the Egyptians: blood, frogs, vermin, flies, cattle disease, boils, hail, locusts, darkness, and finally, the slaying of the first born. Passover refers to the 10th and final plague, when the Angel of Death spared the lives of the first born among the Israelites, "passing over" their houses and afflicting only the Egyptians. After the 10th plague, Pharaoh decided to free the slaves.

The traditional Seder is essentially a meal with 15 sections or blessings. Each food blessed and eaten during the ceremony is a symbol that helps to involve the participants more fully in remembering the Jews' passage into freedom. For example, Matzah, or a flat, unleavened bread is eaten. It recalls the haste with which the Israelites left Egypt. They had no time to prepare food, or to bring yeast. Maror, or bitter vegetable, is dipped in salt water and eaten to remember the bitterness of the experience of slavery. Salt water represents the tears of suffering the people shed during their ordeal as slaves.

The 12th annual South Shore Interfaith Seder is hosted by hosted by Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in partnership with the Hingham No Place For Hate Committee and the Hingham Hull Religious Leaders Association. It is coordinated by the Hingham No Place Committee in conjunction with the Anti-Defamation League.

For reservations and information about the 12th annual South Shore Interfaith Seder from 3 to 5 p.m., on April 16, at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham, contact HinghamNoPlaceForHate@gmaicom or call the Anti-Defamation League at 617-406-6300.

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

To celebrate opening day, radio station Country 102.5/ WKLB will be on hand for the special festivities.

Grammy Award-winning vocalist and punk style icon Debbie Harry – famed for her two-tone bottle blonde hair – will be front and center when the seminal 1970s American punk rock and new wave band Blondie plays their first ever South Shore Music Circus concert Saturday, June 21. There aren't many firsts left for 83-year-old music legend B.B. King, but he'll check one more off when he makes his debut appearance under the Music Circus tent Friday, Aug. 1. Blondie and King are just two of the acts scheduled for the summer 2008 season at the venerable venue which will also see the Cohasset bows of comedians Brad Garrett (Friday, July 11) and Frank Caliendo (Friday, July 18) and the country music duo "Sugarland," featuring Jennifer Nettles and Kristian Bush, Thursday, Aug. 21. As we go to press, "Sugarland" has just become the first sold-out show of the season.

The South Shore Music Circus box office, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, will open for in-person sales at noon Saturday, April 12. To celebrate opening day, radio station Country 102.5/WKLB will be on hand for the special festivities. Theater review

He's not alone in 'Shining City'

The compelling single-act drama by Conor McPherson is in Boston

By R. Scott Reedy

John (John Judd) is a man haunted by the ghost of his dead wife, in the Huntington Theatre Company's production of Shining City, written by Conor McPherson and directed by Robert Falls. The production runs until Sunday, April 6, at the Huntington's B.U. Theatre.

All the action in "Shining City" – the compelling single-act drama by Conor McPherson ("The Seafarer," "The Weir") now being staged in Boston by the Huntington Theatre – takes place in the home/office of a fledging psychotherapist who can't seem to get away from his own demons long enough even to exhale. A former Catholic priest, Ian (Jay Whittaker) now finds himself living and working in the same rented space. He may be free of the collar and the calling that once dominated his life, but a tenuous relationship with a woman who has just given birth to his child and an awkward dalliance with a male hustler make clear that his life's rocky sea changes aren't likely to smooth out any time soon.

He isn't the only one trying to deal with overwhelming life change. One of his clients, perhaps his only one, is a businessman, John (John Judd), who has come to Ian for grief counseling after losing his wife in a terrible automobile accident and being haunted by memories of her. John is not just grief-stricken; he is also guilt-ridden, because of another woman who entered his life shortly before his wife so abruptly left it. He has moved away from the house he shared with his late wife, but her ghost continues to follow him – still clad in the red coat he had given her to ease his conscience while contemplating the extramarital affair.

John believes that while his wife may have left this earth she is far from done with him. In a masterfully written monologue by McPherson that is powerfully acted at the Boston University Theatre by Judd, John lays it all out. He and his wife were childless and often felt left out in social situations where they were the only barren couple. Judd engenders sympathy, empathy and perhaps even some resentment with his tale of his text-message-fueled entanglement with the other woman that led him to distance himself even further from his wife. Planted in the middle of his therapist's leather-tufted couch – at the center of the lived-in wood-paneled set by Santo Loquasto that is bathed in Christopher Akerlind's perfect, mood-setting lighting – Judd's John is not just wallowing, but almost drowning in sadness and regret.

McPherson has written his male leads as men at distinct and distinctly different crossroads. Both are struggling to move forward amidst circumstances often outside their control and beyond their complete understanding. Professionally, Ian offers compassionate counsel to his client, but personally he takes a very different tack with the mother of his child when he decides he is done with her. His girlfriend, Neasa (Nicole Weisner), helped finance his psychotherapy studies and is eager to build a future with Ian, but he is just as determined to end the relationship and distance himself from her.

Goodman artistic director Robert Falls – who also helmed the play's 2006 Tony Award-nominated Broadway production, which starred Oliver Platt, Brian F. O'Byrne, and Martha Plimpton – directed this co-production of the Huntington and Chicago's Goodman. Theatre Falls is wonderfully adept at allowing gentle humor to leaven the deepest melancholy before it can become all-consuming. His affectingly nuanced work is complemented beautifully here by the fine acting of Judd, Whittaker, Wiesner, and also Keith Gallagher who makes Laurence, the brawling and bruised gay-for-pay street tough, surprisingly soulful.

The Huntington Theatre Company will present "Shining City" at the Boston University Theatre, 264 Huntington Avenue, Boston, through April 6. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-266-0800 or go online at huntingtontheatre.org.

Strength. Courage. Love.

On the day of the Cohasset Triathlon, Karen Lyons will turn to those powers within herself to complete the race.

With her blond hair tucked under a swimming cap, she will wait on the sands of Sandy Beach for the starting signal to begin the race her husband, Joe Lyons, wasn't able to complete.

In last year's inaugural triathlon, Joe suffered a fatal heart attack during the swim portion of the race. He was 38.

A year later, Karen, has set herself on a path to do what no one — but herself — would have ever asked her to do: to finish what he started.

For Joe Lyons, the Cohasset Triathlon was more than just an athletic event; it was a way to raise money for a cause very important to him — the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF). All the net proceeds from the Cohasset Triathlon are donated to the cause. Joe and Karen's son, Sam, has lived with Type 1 juvenile diabetes since he was two years old.

Karen, a Newton resident, says Joe was a champion for the cause and

Sawchuk wins Sewer Commission race

Wayne Sawchuk, candidate for Sewer Commission, stands by a wall of campaign signs along Highland Avenue during Saturday's annual Town Election.

Only 40 votes separated candidates

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The 2008 Town Election isn't likely to go down in the history books for any particular reason. Unlike the heated and controversial elections of past years, the polls were slow, but steady, and just one contested race topped the ballot.

Nevertheless, a little more than 17 percent of registered voters (or 873) showed up to cast their vote on the Sewer Commission race and show support for the many unopposed candidates on the ballot. Town Clerk Marion Douglas said there were spurts during the day. Groups of parents with soccer uniformed kids in tow would come after a game and dinner time, shortly before the polls closed at 6p.m., there was a little more action for the poll workers.

"Most of the day it was pretty slow," says Douglas.

The sole balloted race in the election for a three-year Sewer Commission seat ended with a close count, but a familiar face in town politics Wayne Sawchuk edged out political newcomer Jim Dow by 40 votes (442-402).

"It just goes to show you that every vote counts," says Sawchuk of the close vote. "I thought we both ran terrific campaigns," adding he hopes Dow will consider running again for the position again.

Sawchuk said he was sworn in to his new role on Saturday night and by Monday morning his inbox was already full of e-mails from residents regarding sewer issues.

POLICE BEAT

Car accidents lead the log this week

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 59-year-old Cohasset man is facing drunk driving charges after he veered off North Main Street onto the tracks at about 9 p.m. Saturday (April 5).

A motorist called 9-1-1 after seeing the man who was driving a 2002 Toyota swerving along Route 228 and nearly hitting the caller's car head-on, Chief James Hussey said.

The witness called 9-1-1, reversed direction and followed the Toyota that took a right onto East Street and continued along to N. Main Street where it veered onto the tracks.

Officers at the scene could smell alcohol on the man's breath. Further investigation at the scene resulted in the man being charged with OUI (alcohol), negligent operation, and marked lanes violation. The MBTA was notified to stop any trains until the car was towed.

Chief Hussey said the accident, in his view, was not due to the fog lines at the crossing, which were redrawn following several mishaps on the tracks and are now working quite well. "The lines make the crossing very clear," he said.

Police are summonsing a 17-year-old Scituate teen to court on charges of driving on a suspended license. Police found out the girl did not have a valid license after reports that the truck she was driving was allegedly involved in a parking lot accident at Cohasset Plaza on Monday afternoon (March 31). The operator of a 2007 Chrysler called police after she found out that someone had apparently hit her car while she was in the bank and had driven away.

The alleged victim saw an older model truck drive away, followed it and spoke to the driver who provided her name but no other information. The woman provided police with the plate number. Police ran a computer check that revealed the teen's license was suspended for non-payment of a speeding ticket. Police are still determining whether the teen will be charged with leaving the scene after causing property damage.

On Tuesday (April 1) at about 1:20 p.m. a Melrose woman lost control of her Dodge Caravan after trying to avoid a squirrel on Border Street and hit a utility pole. The air bags deployed and the car had to be towed. The woman had been visiting someone in Scituate, police said.

Marijuana arrest

Police arrested at 24-year-old Ripley Road resident and charged him with possession of a Class D substance (marijuana) at about 3:40 a.m. on Sunday (April 6) on Ripley Road. Police had responded to a complaint about under-age drinking and searched the area, observing this particular individual, police said. Police spoke to him and could smell alcohol. He had a plastic container under his arm that contained marijuana, police said.

Jewelry theft

Police are investigating the theft of more than $3,000 in jewelry from a rented apartment on Grace Drive. The woman who lived in the apartment passed away recently and her daughter discovered that gold earrings, gold chains, and a pearl necklace, among other items, were missing. Police have some leads and the incident remains under investigation.

Pocketbook stolen

A woman called police after she discovered her pocketbook had been taken from her unlocked car at Shaw's Plaza on Monday (March 31). The call came in at 4:45 p.m.

"This is a familiar story," Chief Hussey said. The incident occurred about 3:40 p.m. The victim told police she took her wallet into a store and returned to her car 15 minutes later and discovered that her blue- and brown-colored pocketbook was gone. She went back into the store to see if she had left it there but could not find it. Her pocketbook contained keys, sunglasses and some cash. Officers searched the area to no avail. The next day some boys found the pocketbook near Jerusalem Road and Bow Street and turned it in, police said.

ATM card

The alleged victim of a theft of an ATM card told police last week that she was not going to press charges against a co-worker who took the card and withdrew about $260 from her account. The co-worker was confronted and has made restitution but destroyed the ATM card, police said. The victim has cancelled the card and has decided not to pursue the matter in court. Their employer has terminated the co-worker. Police said they would assist the victim with a court case if she so desired.

Telephone scam

An alert senior citizen told police about a scam in which the caller — a man with a foreign accent — told her he had all her information including social security number, and wanted her bank account information in order to send her a medical card in the mail. The caller, who lives on Bayberry Lane, wanted the incident logged.

Chief Hussey said no one should give out any personal information over the phone.

Barrels taken

The owner of a company that manufactures and leases orange traffic barrels informed police last week that several of his barrels were being used on S. Main Street without authority. He retrieved the barrels and did not want to pursue criminal action but wanted the incident logged.

Backpack

The larceny of a backpack at Cohasset Middle-High School last week has turned out to be a prank, police said. School administrators reviewed surveillance tapes and talked with the students involved and parents. "It was not a true larceny," Chief Hussey said. "Students had hidden the backpack and later

School board makes policy on naming rights

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

According to Flynn, the Cohasset Sports Partnership is beginning its private fundraising campaign to build a turf field for the Cohasset Middle-High School's Alumni Field and is exploring all avenues to get donations.

What's in a name?

Parents-to-be spend hours thinking of what to name their child. New businesses struggle to come up with a name that will sum up what they will do.

As stewards for the schools, the School Committee must similarly be cognizant of what a name means for the town and its history.

In that spirit, they have set forth a policy about the future naming (or re-naming) of school buildings and facilities to make sure a name is something that will be both lasting and meaningful.

The policy states the name should encourage unification of all the stakeholders of the community and have equal relevance to all. The name should come with educational significance or inspiration.

While the School Committee holds the sole responsibility for naming school buildings or facilities, the policy allows the Superintendent of Schools to establish an ad hoc committee to bring forth name recommendations for consideration by the committee. The ad hoc committee will be responsible for providing sufficient background information and rationale for the proposed name.

The policy sets out the naming or renaming of existing structures or physical spaces will occur infrequently.

"Historical preservation and respect for our traditions are a key component in honoring our past," the policy states.

The need for a policy was born out a recent discussion School Committee chairman Rick Flynn and Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh had with Cohasset Sports Partnership president George McGoldrick. According to Flynn, the Cohasset Sports Partnership is beginning its private fundraising campaign to build a turf field for the Cohasset Middle-High School's Alumni Field and is exploring all avenues to get donations. One of the possibilities was to offer big contributors some naming rights.

The discussion was the precipitance to form a School Committee policy on the naming of school buildings or facilities to prevent any problems down the line.

"We don't want to send (the Cohasset Sports Partnership) on a fool's errand," said Flynn.

The policy establishes clear guidelines for naming rights to prevent a "sticky situation" from developing down the line, Flynn said. He cited the controversy over the naming of the Little League fields on North Main St. in 2002.

In addition to this policy, a School Committee sub-committee is currently reviewing all the policy and standards of the schools with a policy consultant.

"What we're trying to do with all policy is to not review it for this year or next year, but to do the work that will help guide people for years to come," said School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy. It was with the help of the policy specialist that this naming of school buildings or facilities was drafted. The consultant provided the committee with several other town's naming policies to provide a starting point for the policy.

"This really takes the best of all the policies," said MacCarthy.

The School Committee opted not to have a second reading of the draft, because Flynn said the Sports Partnership was looking for an answer as soon as possible. The policy was approved with a unanimous vote.

Selectmen re-organize; Carr named chairman

The first order of business on the Board of Selectmen's agenda was to nominate and appoint a new chairman and vice chairman. The reorganization was formally opened for nominations under the instructions of Town Manager Bill Griffin.

Ralph Dormitzer nominated Ted Carr for Chairman, Paul Carlson seconded the motion and Carr was unanimously appointed Chairman. This is Carr's third year of his three-year term; he served as vice chairman previously.

Next, Dormitzer nominated Paul Carlson for Vice Chairman; the committee approved the motion 5-0.

Following in the footsteps of Gary Vanderweil, who served as chairman last year and who was noted for his efficient meetings, members of the board joked Carr would have to work hard to keep the meetings as streamlined in the year ahead.

'Got Turf' signs go up around town

Not covered under town bylaws

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Even Building Inspector Bob Egan, who is the town's zoning enforcement officer, was confused about the signs.

Was there a new landscaping service in town? He wondered.

"This is a new wrinkle. I've never seen anything like this."

— Bob Egan, building inspector

A "got turf" sign installed at the edge of the Town Common. The signs were put up in time for the road race to raise awareness about Cohasset Sports Partnership's efforts to raise money for a synthetic turf field at the high school.

Bright green, "Got Turf?," signs popped up all over Cohasset last week. They prompted at least one complaint to the police.

At 8:35 a.m. on Sunday (April 6) an anonymous caller stated: "There are 'Got Turf' signs all over town." The caller did not believe they should be posted in public places, the log stated.

There was a Got Turf sign at the corner of the town common, another under the sign at the Music Circus, another by JJ's and another on Route 3A by Cohasset Collision – just to name a few.

The signs are part of an awareness effort launched by Cohasset Sports Partnership, a private organization whose mission is to improve and maintain Cohasset's athletic facilities and programs and is affiliated with the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund. The CSP plans to help build a synthetic turf field at the high school.

While there are no provisions in the zoning bylaws for this type of sign, Egan explained that temporary signs for events – such as the South Shore Arts Festival or Cohasset Road Race by the Sea – are allowed to go up two weeks before the event.

"This is a new wrinkle," Egan said in a telephone interview. "I've never seen anything like this."

Egan explained that signs might have set a precedent – setting the stage for any group raising money for anything to dot the town with signs.

He planned to contact George McGoldrick, president of the sports partnership, about taking the signs down after two weeks "in the interest of fairness."

McGoldrick said in a phone interview the signs would be coming down next weekend.

"I talked to Bob and he explained there were no provisions for this," he said. McGoldrick explained CSP did nothing wrong by putting the signs up but would follow the two weeks suggested by Egan.

He said CSP put them up to coincide with the road race in hopes they would raise awareness. The group put up about 20 signs, he said. The Cohasset Road Race by the Sea draws hundreds of runners and thousands of spectators every year.

"We wanted to let people know we have started our campaign for the field," McGoldrick said.

McGoldrick said Scituate, Weymouth and Quincy have synthetic turf fields. A turf field can cost about $1 million. The CSP hopes to raise money privately to support the field project. He noted that the entire community uses the high school field.

Bond refinance translates to savings

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Finance Director Mike Buckley reported Monday the town would be saving more that $200,000 by refinancing a town bond that dates back to 1998.

The 19-year bond issue primarily funded the construction of the Osgood School and a few smaller projects (harbor dredging, water system improvements and portions of the sewer expansion projects and a portion of the DPW garage).

Each year, Buckley consults with the town's financial consultant on whether or not to refinance. Right now, the town is roughly halfway into paying back the bond. This year, a much lower interest rate was available. While in the past the bond's interest rate fluctuated from four percent to 4.7 percent, an interest rate of 3.06 percent was available this year, said Buckley.

In total, the refinancing will save the town $240,000 and 91 percent of the savings ($218,702) will directly reduce the tax rate over the next 10 years. The remainder of the savings will be used to either reduce the general fund or water fund debt service appropriations, Buckley stated in a memo.

...the refinancing will save the town $240,000 and 91 percent of the savings ($218,702) will directly reduce the tax rate over the next 10 years.

Buckley had more good news: the state School Building Authority, which agreed to pay 60 percent of the Osgood School cost, will pay the remainder of money owed in one lump sum of nearly $4 million. While the town will still continue to pay their portion of the bond over the next 10 years, the outstanding debt on the bond will be reduced from $7.3 million to a little over $3 million.

The reduction in long term debt will improve the town's financial rating and help the next time the town needs to borrow, said Buckley.

Neighbors still at odds over Cat Dam

Schedule issue will go before ConComm

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Commission will review the schedule, possibly adjust it, and issue a permit with an order of conditions.

The neighborhood issue of "Cat Dam"— a 50-year-old mechanism that limits the tidal flow of water in inner Little Harbor — was again in hot debate on Monday night. Like previous meetings on the matter, which has two vocal neighborhood factions, the room was packed with a standing room only crowd.

Before the Board of Selectmen was a new flushing schedule for the tide gate, a schedule that proposed increased flushing particularly during the spring months when some residents say algae blooms have been prevalent.

Cat Dam is owned by the town but historically has been maintained and operated by the abutters. For that reason, the Board of Selectmen seem to have been willing to work with the neighbors instead of assuming operational control of the structure. The issue is unique in town in that no other tide gate in town still resides in neighborhood control.

The neighbors come at the Cat Dam issue from two distinct sides; accordingly, the Selectmen requested a four-person committee be formed with two representatives from each side to develop an appropriate operational schedule for Cat Dam then report back to the Selectmen.

However, at Monday's meeting a group of residents petitioned for a new committee, more representative of the abutters, to be formed. They felt the committee was not democratically established.

In the meantime, unknown to the Selectmen, the new proposed schedule began to be implemented in the beginning of April, altering it from its previous form.

While the neighbors are the ones primarily concerned with the dam (if attendance at meetings is any indication), inner Little Harbor is a town resource that belongs to all residents.

In that spirit, it was Conservation Commission member Sarah Charron who spoke first at the meeting. Charron acknowledged the area residents for their interest in a natural resource, but she said "at the end of the day we (the Conservation Commission) have jurisdiction over inner Little Harbor."

Any water body or wetland resource — and its 100-foot buffer zone — falls under the jurisdiction of the Conservation Commission and is protected under state and town wetland protection laws. Any change that alters the water resource in any form — water depth, salinity, flow patterns — has to come before the Conservation Commission for approval.

"If there are changes to a wetland, we definitely want to review it," said Charron, adding the process allows for transparency, abutter notification and expertise.

The changing of the Cat Dam opening and closing schedule obligated the Conservation Commission to get involved, said Charron. The town will need to file an after the fact notice of intent with the Conservation Commission, she said. The Commission will then review the schedule, possibly adjust it, and issue a permit with an order of conditions.

The previous schedule, which reportedly has been in operation for 30 years, was grandfathered under the wetlands protection law.

Selectman Karen Quigley agreed with Charron, "I have trouble with a group of citizens making decisions on any town resource…Foremost, I think this is an environmental issue and I think we need to find a resolution to the satisfaction of the abutters, but also the best environmental solution."

The issue of a petition for a more representative neighborhood committee to keep tabs on Cat Dam constituted the majority of discussion for the remainder of the meeting.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the original motion requesting the establishment of the committee should have included that the findings of the committee be subject to agreement by the majority of abutters.

"A large number of people did not feel represented and a larger group does not agree with the original (committee)," said Dormitzer. "I want to see a majority come to agreement."

The neighborhood sides, simply stated, have some residents wanting increased flushing in the harbor, while others wanted to leave the current flushing schedule more or less the same.

"People felt their voices were muted and not given appropriate representation," said Richard Cate of 40B Nichols Road and a member of the Cat Dam committee.

Yet, Richard O'Connell of 249 Jerusalem Road, another member of Cat Dam committee, spoke of the mutual education and compromising nature of the committee.

A proposal was made to form a new representative committee, with one representative from each of the three main geographical areas — Nichols Road, Jerusalem Road and Little Harbor Road), but others wanted the issue placed in an appropriate town body.

"We need to take it out of neighborhood control and look at it as a town issue," said Margie Brown of 275 Jerusalem Road.

In a majority vote, the Selectmen approved the schedule and requested Town Manager Bill Griffin to give a notice of intent to the Conservation Commission. Dormitzer was the only dissenting vote.

On Wednesday, Griffin said he was meeting with Conservation Commission agent Paul Shea this week to better understand the process. The issue will be before Conservation Commission at their meeting next Thursday (April 17) to discuss how to move forward with any changes in the Cat Dam gate operation plan.

No determination the representational issue was made. Selectman Fred Koed encouraged all residents to submit their own proposal for appropriate neighborhood representation going forward.

"The Board wants to consider all new ideas," said Koed. Cat Dam will be discussed again at their April 28 meeting.

BRIEFLY

Energy efficiency

Public works trucks will be more fuel efficient and some town-owned buildings will be harnessing the daylight thanks to a recently awarded $17,050 state grant.

Through the efforts of the Alternative Energy Committee and its consultants, the town has been awarded a state department of environmental affairs to do two projects, Town Manager Bill Griffin reported at the Monday Selectmen's meeting.

First, 14 public works vehicles will be installed with "tornado fuel savers" to increase fuel efficiency.

Second, 15 "daylight pipes" will be installed at the DPW garage and one will be installed at the Harbormaster's building. The installation of these daylight pipes will increase the use of natural sunlight and decrease dependence on electric lighting during daylight hours. Light sensors will also be installed to regulate the use of electrical light.

Griffin said a key element of the grant award is monitoring fuel and electric use both before and after the installation of the devices to determine to what degree the technology is effective.

G. Fredrick Guzasky will be in recital at 3 p.m. on Sunday, May 11 at St. Stephen's.

Organist Guzasky in concert at St. Stephen's

St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset will be presenting organist G. Fredrick Guzasky in a recital at 3 p.m. on Sunday, May 11.

Dr. Guzasky is an Affiliated Artist at MIT in Cambridge, a professor at Bridgewater State College, and maintains a large studio of organ and piano students. The performance will feature music of Bach, Langlais, Brahms, and Rheinberger, as well as some of Guzasky's own improvisations – all played on the church's Aeolian-Skinner organ.

As a recitalist, he has performed in New England and the Midwest, as well as Russia, Latvia, and England, receiving the Boston University Outstanding Performance Award and the EMACT Award in conducting. Highlights of more recent seasons include tours of Russia and Latvia, with engagements at the Cathedral of Riga, the Kapella Concert Hall in St. Petersburg, Russia, as well as teaching master classes at the St. Petersburg Conservatory. Other venues have included performances at St. Paul's Cathedral, Holy Trinity Church in New York, and the Frank Lloyd Wright Home and Studio.

As a composer, he has to his credit several Masses, numerous choral anthems, including a series based on Russian Orthodox texts, and a number of instrumental works. Dr. Guzasky is also author of the "Gregorian Chant Handbook," and is known as a chant clinician in the Boston area. He is also director of the Slava Chorale, a Boston based group of professional singers that perform Russian and Greek music.

Dr. Guzasky's recordings include "Comes Autumn Time," a CD of organ favorites, and "g. fredrick guzasky – LIVE," and this spring will usher in the publication of his performing guide, "Gradus Ad Parnassum for the Organist."

The church is located at 16 Highland Avenue in Cohasset, is handicap accessible, and plenty of parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For information, call 781-383-1083.

Keeping a pulse on Cohasset's health

Fitzsimmons bids adieu after 22 years

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset Health Agent, Joe Godzik, has his blood pressure taken one last time by Public Health Nurse Judy Fitzsimmons.

PHOTOS/LAURA SINCLAIR

Cohasset's Public Health Nurse, Judy Fitzsimmons, is retiring after 22 years. She says developing relationships with so many residents has been the most rewarding part of her job.

Cohasset may just be a healthier place – thanks to the dedication, compassion and knowledge of retiring public health nurse Judy Fitzsimmons.

From checking in on elderly residents to performing regular blood pressure checks to distributing immunizations to local doctors to keeping track of communicable diseases, With a warm, friendly smile, Fitzsimmons has kept her pulse on the health of Cohasset for 22 years.

"A public health nurse watches out for the general health of the townspeople of all ages," says Fitzsimmons of her position and that's exactly what she has done over the last two decades.

Hired in 1986 as a contract employee with the Social Service League of Cohasset, Fitzsimmons worked out of an office in St. Stephen's Church for 15 years. In 2001, the town took over the position of public health nurse and Fitzsimmons moved to Town Hall.

Over the years, her position has grown both in visibility and responsibility.

"When I moved to Town Hall, I began to see a lot more people. I think I'm a lot more accessible here," says Fitzsimmons. The public heath nurse's office is located in the line of sight of every person entering the front door of the new part of Town Hall.

She's become a regular part of some residents' lives, many who come in once a week to get their blood pressure checked. At times, she has sent several straight from her office to the emergency room due to high blood pressure. Fitzsimmons can change dressings for residents if they have recently undergone surgery. She has saved many trips to the doctor for these routine items, provided at no charge to residents.

But, for others, she has pushed them to go see a doctor. Many times residents will come to her looking for a diagnosis or a remedy, always ending with the question, "do you think I should go to the doctor?" Fitzsimmons says she almost always says "yes."

"Usually people know they should go, but just need that little nudge and I'm happy to give it," says Fitzsimmons.

Developing relationships with residents has been the most rewarding part of her job. Fitzsimmons says she has seen some people on a regular basis for over twenty years.

"In this job, you feel like you've really helped people and made a difference in their life," says Fitzsimmons. "I've loved being able to help and serve people."

The regular office hours that have been invaluable for many residents will continue on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings from 8:30 to 11:30a.m.

The public health nurse is responsible for receiving and distributing vaccines to Cohasset doctors, both pediatricians and general practice. She follows up on all reports from doctors and hospitals about communicable diseases found in Cohasset (gastrointestinal, strep, pneumonia, lyme disease, hepatitis etc.), while maintaining the confidentiality of the patient. During her tenure, she initiated Medicare reimbursement for influenza and other vaccine administration making Cohasset one of the first towns in the Commonwealth to receive such reimbursement.

In addition to those duties, Fitzsimmons has been involved in many town-wide projects. Following Sept. 11, Fitzsimmons became heavily involved in creating an extensive emergency plan for the town. There is a plan in the event of a pandemic flu.

"Whatever emergency comes up, there's a plan for it now," says Fitzsimmons. Establishing these extensive response and action plans has been one of the challenges of her job, she says, because of their complexity and need for thoroughness.

One issue she found did not get easier no matter what experience she gathered throughout the years was convincing elderly people it was time for them to be somewhere else.

"Many times people will stay in a place long after it is safe for them," says Fitzsimmons. In some cases, it has taken her months to convince a person to leave their home and independent living.

Caring for elders is a demographic she has paid special attention to over the years. For some elderly residents, she makes monthly home visits, or is called when a neighbor is concerned about a senior's health. She hosts monthly "keep well" clinics at the Harborview apartments at 60 Elm Street and the Senior Center, a program that will continue on.

Being in a people-oriented business, it comes as no surprise she names her clients and co-workers as what she will miss most about her job.

"Working at Town Hall has been a delight," says Fitzsimmons. "It's been enjoyable the whole 22 years, I can't even call it to a job."

Similarly, Fitzsimmons will be missed at Town Hall. Tara Tradd, health inspector, says she has always looked up to Fitzsimmons.

"She is just the sweetest, most caring, kind individual," says Tradd. "I have enjoyed working with Judy on the many different projects like Emergency Preparedness and helping with the Annual Health Fairs."

The Board of Health, who Fitzsimmons has worked hand in hand with over the years, will feel the loss of Fitzsimmons.

"She is at once a spirited and caring leader with an ability to organize and follow through on her plans," says longtime Board of Health member Steve Bobo. Her leadership in the developing of the emergency preparedness activities stands out in his mind.

"In this job, you feel like you've really helped people and made a difference in their life. I've loved being able to help and serve people."

— Judy Fitzsimmons, retiring public health nurse

"She's unique in that her management skills fit in so well with her ability to care for and sympathize with visitors and patients in a truly gentle and caring way. We'll all miss her kindness, competence, her leadership and ability to organize," Bobo says.

Although her last official day was Wed., April 2, residents may still see Fitzsimmons' familiar face as they enter Town Hall. She will be the new public health nurse's back up in the case of vacations or sick days. Mary Goodwin, who has served as assistant public health nurse and often filled in for Fitzsimmons, started as the public health nurse this week.

With her newfound leisure time she is looking forward to spending more time with her family, gardening and traveling. She will be making a long-awaited trip to Brazil in the fall; to the town she spent three years in while serving in the Peace Corps from 1964 to 1967.

"I've always wanted to go back, but I've never had the chance until now," says Fitzsimmons with a smile.

What if Books Were Less Expensive?

By Michelle Bushee

Do you often find yourself shocked at the sticker price for a new bestseller or stunned by your sales total at the book store checkout? Would you read more often if books were less costly?

There may be hope. A more economical, and more earth friendly, alternative is more prevalent than ever: buying used books. Used books are not only more reasonably priced, but they also keep waste to a minimum.

A great resource for the purchase of used books is local organization Got Books. Every week they host their Charity Book Sale, selling all items for just one dollar. They also sell CDs, DVDs, videos, audio books, and other items at the sale, which takes place every Friday and Saturday from 9:00AM to 4:00PM at their warehouse on 35 Concord Street in North Reading.

Half of all sale profits benefit one of their nonprofit book sale partners. Every sale in the month of April benefits Local Heroes, a group which prepares and ships care packages to local troops stationed overseas.

There are over 50,000 items to choose from which are restocked weekly to ensure a fresh selection for shoppers. Books are supplied by donations from the community and are collected through a free pick-up service and at their more than 220 drop-off locations. For more information on the sale or to donate books call 978-664-3536 or visit www.GotBooks.com.

Local artists and Sotheby's team up for MS

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

All money raised as part of the MS Walk benefits ongoing research into the disease and local people who suffer from it.

This Saturday, hundreds will take to the sidewalks of Cohasset to raise money and awareness for Multiple Sclerosis (MS) in the annual MS Lifelines Walk.

As a complement to the walk, Home Center Sotheby International Realty and four local artists have collaborated on an art show to benefit the MS Walk.

The artists will be donating 30 percent of their proceeds to the MS Walk for all work sold between last week's opening and Saturday, the day of the Cohasset MS Walk.

"As artists, this is an opportunity to use our work as more than something aesthetic and make it more community minded," says artist JoAnne Chittick. All money raised as part of the MS Walk benefits ongoing research into the disease and local people who suffer from it.

The Home Center Sotheby's Realty office recently moved in to a new space at the corner of Depot Court and South Main Street. Once the office was settled, Millie Mitman, manager of the Cohasset office, thought the crisp, freshly painted walls would make for an ideal opportunity to support local art.

"It's a great location with great visibility," says Mitman. "I thought art would make it a little more lively."

Hanging local art seemed fitting to Mitman, considering Sotheby's long history as an art auction house. "There's a natural connection between Sotheby's and art," says Mitman.

In addition, Mitman, who was familiar with a few local artists, knew of the difficulty artists have in finding a place to hang and show their art.

Mitman recruited four Cohasset artists to get the Sotheby's art gallery off the ground: Chittick, Ann Musto, Lisa Marder and Diana Rousseau.

The artists say the Sotheby's opportunity is a unique one. "(Local artists) don't have many beautiful spaces where they allow for the display of artwork," says Musto. In addition, Sotheby's is not charging a commission if one of the pieces sells.

An opening for the gallery was held last Friday night with scores of people attending during the course of the night.

Many of the paintings have bold colors and peaceful New England scenes. MS Walk participants may recognize some of the scenes in the paintings from their walk. The walk takes participants along Cohasset's most scenic roads, offering views of Cohasset Harbor, Sandy Beach and Jerusalem Road.

The artists will be at the Sotheby's art gallery on Saturday to answer questions and to talk about their work; purchased artwork can be taken right off the wall and taken home as a souvenir of the day.

"When a purchase is made, it will benefit the MS Walk, the artist and the buyer who will have a beautiful piece of art for their home. It's really a win-win-win," says artist Lisa Marder.

If Marder had to choose her favorite piece in the gallery, she couldn't. "Each one represents a place that I have a particular attachment to, it's hard to pick a favorite," she says.

Chittick's bright and sunny "Sun Worshippers" painting is a highlight of the gallery. Painted in a Humarock garden full of blooming sunflowers, Chittick says the painting reminds her of summer.

Hundreds of Cohasset and South Shore residents are rallying at the South Shore Community Center, Saturday, April 12, for the MS LifeLines Walk to create a world free of multiple sclerosis. A spring tradition for nearly 20 years, walkers follow a 5-mile accessible path starting at 10 a.m. from the center. Check in is 8:30 a.m. Each walker is encouraged to raise a minimum of $100, but most collect more than $200. Organized by National Multiple Sclerosis Society, Central New England Chapter, more than 200,000 walkers participate nationwide in the MS Walk each year at more than 600 sites, and raise more than $30 million. Family and corporate walk teams and volunteers can register online at MSnewengland.org, call 800-493-9255 or in person the day of the event.

"Without Walk MS, we wouldn't have the funds for newly diagnosed education and support," said Linda Guiod, executive vice president for Chapter Programs & Services. "Without Walk, we'd be set back 50 years when there were no approved treatments for MS, and there was very little understanding about how MS works."

In 2007, nearly 9,000 walkers registered for the walk, and raised more than $2 million. Eighty-five percent of money raised by the chapter provides help for today, and hope for tomorrow to 14,000 individuals and families affected by MS in Massachusetts and New Hampshire through MS education, support, advocacy and research. Of the many corporate sponsors that make the MS Walk possible each year, the most loyal and generous are MS LifeLines, Pro Con Inc., Whole Foods Market, Hanover Insurance Group, WCVB-TV5 and Community Newspaper Company.

Overall, 17 walks will take place this spring in Massachusetts and New Hampshire during April and May, including: Saturday, April 5, the MS Journey of Hope, an 8-mile walk that starts and finishes at Newton South High School in Newton, and supports patient programs at local affiliated, participating MS clinical care centers. April 12: Cohasset, Dartmouth, Easton, Marblehead, Nashua, N.H., Newburyport, Northampton, Portsmouth, N.H., and Worcester. Sunday, April 13: Boston, Concord and Plymouth. Sunday, April 20: Manchester, N.H. Saturday, May 3: the Berkshires, Tanglewood in Lenox, and Gorham, N.H. Sunday, May 4: Springfield.

Multiple sclerosis interrupts the flow of information from the brain to the body and can stop people from moving forward in their lives. The progress, severity and specific symptoms of MS in any one person cannot yet be predicted, but advances in research and treatment are moving closer to a world free of MS. Most people with MS are diagnosed between the ages of 20 and 50, and more than twice as many women as men have the disease. MS affects more than 400,000 people in the United States, and 2.5 million worldwide. Studies show that early and ongoing treatment with an FDA-approved therapy can reduce future disease activity and improve quality of life for many people with multiple sclerosis.

Talk to a health care professional and contact the National MS Society at MSnewengland.org or call 800-493-9255 to learn about ways to help manage multiple sclerosis and about current research.

FROM ART, PAGE 8

Musto says she painted it just as the spring colors were beginning to show themselves.

The blues and golds in Diana Rousseau's "Autumn Marsh" bring a lot of vitality to the piece, the other artists say.

If unable to stop in during the MS Walk, the art gallery will be on display for about two months and Home Center Sotheby's welcomes people to come in and see the artist's work during office hours. The office is open seven days a week from 10a.m. to 5p.m.

Mitman hopes to continue the collaboration between local artists and the Sotheby's office as a way to highlight the local art community.

Cohasset Sports Partnership launches its got turf? Campaign

'got turf?' signs and T-shirts are all over town as the Cohasset Sports Partnership launches its campaign to raise money for a synthetic turf field at the high school.

Along with election signs and Cohasset Road Race signs, Cohasset residents may have noticed green "got turf?" signs popping up all over town last weekend. This marked the kick-off of the newly formed Cohasset Sports Partnership's got turf? campaign, a fundraising effort to bring a turf field to Cohasset Middle High School. The Cohasset Sports Parntership's mission is to improve and maintain Cohasset's athletic facilities and programs and is affiliated with the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund.

The Cohasset Sports Partnership (CSP) held a kick-off event at Atlantica on Saturday night where 150 interested people gathered to hear CSP President, George McGoldrick, along with CSP Vice President, Bill Cavanaro, unveil the first major project of building a turf field in Cohasset. A new synthetic turf field has been proposed by the School Committee and the CSP is seeking to supplement the funding of the field.

Coaches from most high school varsity teams that play field sports also spoke about the many benefits of turf fields ranging from injury prevention, not having to reschedule games due to rain outs, field longevity, and lower maintenance costs. Also featured as a speaker was Weymouth's long time Athletic Director, Bob Donovan, who oversaw a turf field installation at Weymouth High. He talked about the many benefits it has yielded the town.

Cohasset High Varsity and JV boys and girls lacrosse teams were to hold their annual Spirit Day on Saturday hosting four games. They were all cancelled due to poor field conditions from the previous day's rain. Spirit Day would not have been cancelled with a turf field!

The CSP hopes to raise a portion of the funds for the field through private donations, grants and sponsorships.

To find out more about the Got turf? campaign go to www.CohassetSportsPartnership.org

OPINION

EDITORIAL

What's in a name?

"What's in a name? That which we call a rose
By any other name would smell as sweet."
William Shakespeare (Romeo and Juliet)

What's in a name? A lot.

We think the School Committee is wise to come up with a "naming policy" for school-owned facilities, whether those are school buildings, gymnasiums or playing fields. The policy should go a long way toward preventing potential controversy.

The policy states the name should encourage unification of all the stakeholders of the community and have equal relevance to all. The name should come with educational significance or inspiration.

The new policy has come to the forefront as efforts move ahead to raise money for a synthetic turf for Alumni Field.

School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn explained last week that the Cohasset Sports Partnership is beginning its private fundraising campaign to build a turf field for the Cohasset Middle-High School's Alumni Field and is exploring all avenues to get donations. One of the possibilities was to offer big contributors some naming rights.

While we applaud the CSP's efforts and agree that the time has come for a turf surface at Alumni Field – recent history in Cohasset has proven that naming or renaming facilities in Cohasset can be a controversial endeavor.

Back in 2003, Cohasset resident Ed Goff asked the School Committee to consider renaming the Deer Hill School to the William Ripley School after the long-time superintendent, teacher and coach.

Goff pointed out renaming a school is not unprecedented in town. He noted the former Ripley Road School at the corner of Sohier Street and Ripley Road was renamed the Joseph Osgood School after Joseph Osgood, a superintendent in the late 1800s. That name was carried over to the new Osgood School that opened in September 1998.

The School Committee initially took the matter under advisement but two months later, after soliciting community feedback, the School Committee reached the consensus to leave it alone. The School Committee found that the name Deer Hill had a lot of nostalgia associated with it.

At the time, Flynn described the entire naming matter as "a good exercise." "We learned a lot in the process," he said.

While the proposal to rename Deer Hill stirred little controversy – plans the year before in 2002 to sell naming rights for the new Little League fields off North Main Street created a storm. At the time, some individuals and private businesses had stepped forward offering substantial contributions.

A Cohasset resident donated $25,000 and asked the baseball field be named in honor of his father; a couple contributed $25,000 and asked the softball field be named "Freedom Field" in honor of a friend killed in the World Trade Center on 9/11.

A local business offered $50,000 and asked for the rights to name the three-field complex through community input and possibly a contest.

The controversy spilled over to Selectmen's meetings where a compromise was reached after much debate resulting in allowing the Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association to sell naming rights to the diamonds, not the fields.

The new fields were paid for with a combination of money from the town, Community Preservation Fund, and private fundraising.

We raise the issue now and provide this short walk down memory lane only as a cautionary reminder about naming and renaming facilities.

While intentions are good – opinions are likely to differ. Let's hope the school "naming" policy helps smooth things over.

I heard Quigley, Sawchuk and Alves won, but who's Gotturf?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Open meeting up to public

TO THE EDITOR:

The following letter was sent to the Board of Selectmen with a copy provided to the Mariner for publication.

Board of Selectmen: Ted Carr, Chairman

Dear Ted,

It has come to my attention that a meeting comprised of the Army Corps of Engineers, two members of the Board of Selectmen, and former US Congressman Houghton, was to be held at Town Hall. It is also my understanding that the meeting was not going to be posted, or advertised, and that most disturbingly, the public was not going to be allowed to attend the meeting at all.

It is also my understanding that this meeting is now "under review". How comforting.

The secretive, indeed selective, series of meetings between the Treat's Pond proponents and the ACE is the main reason that this issue became so controversial. Indeed the wording of the amendment to Article 22 addressed the lack of public vetting this project has had to date. To turn around two weeks later and repeat this type of behavior is bizarre at best, but certainly reflects either a lack of awareness, or a abject lack of concern for public comment. Either is unacceptable, particularly when one of the invitees is not even a registered voter in Cohasset.

I would like to suggest that any meeting regarding Treat's Pond be fully posted, and the public be able to attend. The only time the public input into this mess is when the public is asked to pay with their tax dollars.

Let's have open meetings when Treat's Pond is being discussed. Anything less would show great disrespect for the public at large, and only further the controversy surrounding this project.

New respect for process

TO THE EDITOR:

I just wanted to thank all the voters that made the effort to come out and vote in the Cohasset election. There was a lot of talk about a lack of interest because of the number of uncontested races but the turnout ended up being a respectable one.

I want to express my sincere gratitude to all of the people that supported me and my campaign, especially those that came out and held signs for me. The campaign trail was a great experience: I learned a lot, met a lot of great people and have a whole new respect for the entire process.

I also want to congratulate Mr. Sawchuk, he has a lot to offer the town and am sure he will serve the position well.

A thank you from the Board of CEA

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Board of Cohasset Elder Affairs I would like to thank the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs and the many volunteers who worked so diligently to make the second annual Antique Appraisal Day such a successful event. Our thanks also to the 150 who brought articles to be appraised. The chowder, chili and sandwiches were delicious and many folks bought a quart to bring home for supper. Thanks to John Campbell, Catie Campbell, Ken Maitland, Margo Doherty, Dan and Judy Volungis, Mary Kay and Jim Richardson, Karen and Steve Oronte, Jim Kearney, Marjie Murphy, Nancy Anderson, Jeanne Carroll, Carol Barrett, Anna Abbruzzee, Estelle Weedon, Ham Tewskbury, Martha Horsefield and Trudy Salerno, for all of your hard work.

On Wednesday, April 2, a wonderful event took place at the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum as we celebrated the first ever Intergenerational Poetry Slam. This event evolved from the "Cohasset Reads One Book Program" and was a way for the fourth grade class of Mrs. Corkhum, residents of Sunrise Assisted Living and seniors from Cohasset Elder Affairs to get together to share poetry Our deepest thanks to Library Director, Jackie Rafferty, Reference Librarian, Gayle Walsh, and Library Outreach Coordinator, Marjie Murphy for putting the Generations together with a common goal. Thanks also to Julie Lavgelle from the Museum for making this wonderful space available for the event and making sure it was spotless when we arrived. Thanks also to Debbie Ryan of Cohasset Pizza House and the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library for providing all with an abundance of delicious pizza, and lastly to Nancy White and Robin Chan for the wonderful article and pictures in the Friday, April 4, 2008, issue of the Cohasset Mariner.

Wednesday April 2 was a banner day in Cohasset.

Design Review Board needs members

The Design Review Board is looking for a few good men and women to fill out its ranks. Saved by a vote at Town Meeting, the Design Review Board is an advisory group that has been active in the past in assisting and advising the Planning Board in a variety of ways.

To date, only two residents have come forward to lend their expertise to the town committee, Town Manager Bill Griffin said. Although ideally the members of Design Review Board would have some sort of background in design, from architects to real estate agents, all applicants will be considered. The Design Review Board is a Selectmen-appointed committee.

Interested citizens should send a letter of interest to the Town Manager's office at Town Hall.

Heroic work preparing for road race

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Thanks — Kudos to L M Holdings, LLC along with the Cohasset DPW for the extra heroic work they did to prepare the center of Town and the Jerusalem Road/ Atlantic Avenue construction areas for the Cohasset Rotary's annual 10K run. In spite of very poor weather at the tail end of last week they both are to be commended for their superb preparation and clean-up work. Thanks, guys!

Little Harbor Project — This past week we were on Beach Street and saw first-hand some of Cohasset's finest ledge being chipped away so that the sewer pipe could be laid. For those of you that live near our numerous pockets of ledge, you know the effort and constant pounding it takes to fracture the ledge for removal.

Beach Street Culvert — There will be an interesting challenge when the new sewer line is constructed over the small tidal culvert on Beach Street. The walls of the Beach Street causeway over the tidal salt marsh, between 130 and 140 Beach Street appear to be quite old and is constructed of granite blocks. The culvert that carries the tidal flow under the road way is also constructed of granite blocks, with a capstone supported by the walls (see photo).

COURTESY PHOTOS

The posts that are visible in the photo are the galvanized steel supports for the guardrail along the causeway. One of the challenges at this location is that the sewer line should be buried at least four feet. Although the scale of the culvert is hard to see in the photo, there is not four feet between the top of the road surface and the top of the culvert. So what to do? It doesn't make any sense to run the sewer pipe through the culvert. So, if it can't go above the culvert and it can't go through the culvert, there is only one option left open for the engineers to pursue. The new sewer pipe must go below the culvert. To do this, the culvert needs to be removed and replaced after the pipes are laid. But, that's not all folks. The water line on Beach Street will also need to be relocated below the culvert. This now turns what appears to be a rather simple area of construction into a big deal.

As we write this article, the contractor is working to decide how to approach this construction area. It is pretty certain that when this section of Beach Street is under construction that Beach Street will be closed to through traffic. In addition, the contractor will need to find a way to keep this area dry while it is under construction. This means that the tidal flow will need to be contained so that it does not flow into the construction area. At the same time, any rainfall on the inland side of the culvert that could send storm water toward the construction will need to be pumped around the construction to the harbor. As you can see, there is a lot for the contractor to think about in this small section of Beach Street.

The stars of old TV

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

It's hard to realize, but I was able to buy a cold one at Joe Bardetti's bar on Pearl Street, legally this time, before I saw my first television program.

And it's equally hard to realize that the golden age of local TV news is over and I'm still standing. Well, some of the time, anyway.

I can say that with confidence, what with Channel 4's buyout of sportscaster Bob Lobel, entertainment reporter Joyce Kulhawik and newsman Scott Wahle.

Add to that the coming retirement (July 18) of Channel 5 anchor Natalie Jacobson and the rustication to Sunday of Channel 4's Liz Walker and you've witnessed the destruction of the Boston TV news star system.

With all due respect to Jack, Mike and Dick, most of today's anchors, sportscasters and weathermen rarely stick around long enough to win the coveted gold watch.

How many of you remember the original television newsman — Cornelius "Neil" Scanlan, "the Nightly News Teller?" I can't recall the station but it was probably Channel 4.

Or Arch McDonald, Channel 4's first anchorman who went on the job in 1948 and lasted 31 years.

The earliest weatherman that I can recall was Tex Antoine, who delivered the night's forecast wearing an artist's smock and beret. I don't know if he could be called a meteorologist. All he did was predict the weather without Mish Michaels' gadgets.

There was Terry Carter, the first black news anchor on a Boston station in 1965 on Channel 4, who aspired to a higher calling.

He was next heard of in the role of Sergeant Joe Broadhurst on the crime drama "McCloud," and as Colonel Tigh fighting the Cylons on the sci-fi thriller "Battlestar Galactica."

The late Jack Chase was anchoring the news at Channel 4 as early as 1953, joined by Jack Hynes, the former mayor's son, in 1955, Jack Borden in 1959 and Tony Pepper in 1974.

Janet Langhart was co-host of a morning show on Channel 5 and a special features reporter for Channel 7 in 1982-83, until she met and married Bill Cohen, the senator from Maine, later Bill Clinton's secretary of defense.

Bill O'Reilly, who spins the day's news for the Fox Channel now, was a weekend anchor for Channel 7 in 1982-83 and a commentator on Channel 5 in 1986.

Channel 7 scored a first in 1975 when they brought in Barbara Borin, a female sportscaster to shake up locker rooms from Fenway to the Garden. Now everybody has one.

Channel 7 can also lay claim to the quirkiest sportscaster in Zip Rzeppa (I think that's the spelling, anyway), who once made a mistake and smashed an egg on his nose on camera to show that he had egg on his face.

And then there was handsome Jay Scott, whose Boston career was ruined when his boss casually remarked that he discovered him in a Denver, Colorado motel.

The boss meant that he had watched him deliver the news on a television monitor in the motel but, once again, speak never really caught up with misspeak and Jay barely lasted a year on Boston TV.

HEALTH NOTES

Giving your brain a workout

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Ever feel like events are outpacing our ability to cope with them? It's been observed that the most active you'll ever be is when you're a child. As we get older, our facilities start to wear out. Athletes peak out in their thirties and the process of "getting on" occupies us until we leave the rat race. Hopefully, experience allows us to think smarter, but getting older invariably means slowing down. It turns out that the process begins early, at about 20, and cognitive ability, thinking, remembering, reasoning and even listening, seeing and recognizing all begin to slow down; some of us more gracefully than others, until at age 50 to 60 most begin to notice it's not all there any more.

Recently, medical science has been studying how the brain handles the aging process and indeed how the brain reacts to the events, which make up one's experience. Over the last 10 years, neuroscience, the study of the nervous system, has been enormously expanded, from the dynamics of individual nerve cells and their molecular constituents to imaging representations of perceptual and motor tasks in the brain. The result has been a recognition that the brain, the center of guidance for the activity of all sentient life forms, is more complex and adaptable than ever before realized. Neuroscience is at the frontier of investigation of the brain and mind. The study of the brain is becoming the cornerstone in understanding how we perceive and interact with the external world and, in particular, how human experience and human biology influence each other.

And, of course, neuroscientists studying the ability of different elements of the brain to adapt to a person's unique experience, a process called brain plasticity, have applied their knowledge to develop some rather remarkable improvements in brain function for people of every age, even those whose mental ability has degraded as a result of old age, a condition called senile dementia.

...several organizations have developed procedures and exercises, which have led to remarkable improvements in brain function for people of any age.

Now, several organizations have developed procedures and exercises, which have led to remarkable improvements in brain function for people of any age. These companies have made commercial use of recent discoveries in brain plasticity to develop brain exercises that improve memory, speech recognition and concentration. The two organizations which seem to have the best credentials and most advanced tools for consumers are Posit Science, which promotes a program called the Brain Fitness Program as seen recently on public broadcasting stations, and Lumos Labs, producers of brain exercise games called luminosity.

For the most part, these programs are designed to be easy-to-use and to fit into one's lifestyle. Regular use can range from a few minutes a day to as much time as a user prefers. Over a period of about a month, having completed about half of the Posit Science program of 40 sessions, each taking about an hour and a half, I find that one session averages one to one and a half hours. The program, although not difficult, is not done without a decision to make a healthy commitment of time and effort. I found that many of the exercises are fun and interesting, but some are boring and sometimes frustrating. They are, however, easy to interrupt and rejoin; so taking a break is often a help. It turns out that a part of stimulating the brain involves providing it with rewards, which the exercises provide in the form of animations, sound and visual "candy" for good performance and other abstract inducements. The entire exercise is done before a computer and requires little typing but instead, the use of a mouse for giving responses.

For me, the results were breathtaking. Not only has my memory improved, but my ability to organize and understand things like speech in crowded rooms has gotten better. The brain plasticity concept covers a person's adjustment of how to recognize other people's speech patterns and our ability to understand what they are saying. But again, it's not accomplished without considerable commitment and effort; just like a physical workout.

I'm so convinced that the program will do many of us some good that arrangements are being made to provide copies of the program to the Community Center and Elder Affairs as well as the Library.

Stay tuned: more later.

"I've already learned it will not be a three hour a month position and fortunately, I didn't think it would be," says Sawchuk.

It's safe to say people who headed to the polls knew who was getting their vote for Sewer Commission. While all the uncontested races each had well over 100 blank votes, the blank vote tally on Sewer Commission was only 28 and only one voter wrote in a name.

Although the uncontested candidates skated to the finish line, a write-in race did emerge between Abigail Alves of 52 Stockbridge Street and Susan Kent of 3 Mendel Road for a two-year seat on the Recreation Commission. The seat was an open one; no citizen returned nomination papers in time to be placed on the ballot.

Alves, who once served as the playground director at the Cohasset Rec summer program, topped Kent with 161 votes to Kent's 63 votes.

""I'm very excited to get started, sad I won't overlap with (retiring Recreation Director Jack Worley), but I'm looking forward to working with (recently hired Recreation Director Ted Carroll) and the rest of the commission," said Alves in a phone interview.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas, currently in her 16th year of service, earned the most votes of the day with 726 votes. She was the only candidate to garner over 700 votes.

Incumbent School Committee candidate Alfred Slanetz retained his seat for a second term receiving 590 votes.

Because all ballots with write-in votes must be counted separately, by hand, it took nearly an hour to tally the votes for all the contests. A handful of officials were sworn into office that night including Karen Quigley (Selectman), Sawchuk, Charles Samuelson (Planning Board), Clark Brewer (Planning Board), Abigail Alves (Recreation Commission), (Sewer Commission) and Glenn Pratt (Water Commission).

The recently elected Selectmen, fourth-term Selectman Fred Koed and first-term Selectman Quigley took their seats at Monday night's meeting. Koed received 648 votes, with Quigley earning 637.

"It's a little strange to be sitting on this side of the table," mused Quigley, thanking the voters and supporters. "I'm going to work very hard not to forget what it is like to sit on that side of the table," she said motioning to the audience.

Koed covered all his bases by thanking those who voted for him, those who didn't vote for him, and everyone who participated in the election. He quickly moved on to Selectmen business, asking if the Town Meeting resolution on Treat's Pond had been sent to Congressman William Delahunt (it had).

Leaf bylaw gets blown away

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Editor's note: due to space limitations, the Mariner did not run this story last week.

Voters were definitely in a "yes" mood Saturday (March 29), adopting or indefinitely postponing 24 out of 25 articles, but that 25th article just couldn't pass muster with voters.

The final article — a citizen's petition — proposed a limitation on the hours and days leaf blowers could be used in town. It was the only article of the day that did not garner approval from the voters.

The use of leaf blowers can be dealt with outside of establishing a town bylaw, or so it seems from the vote of Town Meeting. Going into Town Meeting, the citizen's petition did not have backing from the Board of Selectmen or Advisory Committee.

Selectman Paul Carlson said the board found the bylaw to be burdensome on homeowners and lawn service companies. The bylaw would have limited the use of leaf blowers to Tuesday through Saturday, 9a.m. to 5p.m.

Despite the lack of support, Carlson urged citizens to be aware of the disturbance leaf blowers cause, "I do hope neighbors will be considerate of others when using these machines."

Advisory Committee member Chartis Tebbetts commended the main proponent, Marcus Ramsden of 262 Jerusalem Road, and the petitioners for wanting to preserve the sound-scape of Cohasset. However, she and the committee felt there were enforcement problems and a strong education program would be a more appropriate first step.

Ramsden, as the primary proponent, explained the leaf blower bylaw was a way to limit encroachments on the sounds of the outdoors.

"Our community sound-scape should be something we cherish and protect," said Ramsden, similar to protecting the town's landscape.

Jack Butler of 66 Margin St. spoke in favor of the article, reporting on a recent afternoon he recorded sound readings in his neighborhood as high at 90 decibels while several lawn blowers were nearby. However, Butler was the only citizen to speak in favor of the bylaw.

Paul Barry of 20 Hobart Lane said the bylaw would take away from hardworking landscapers, "this bylaw is unnecessary."

The petition was defeated by majority vote.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, who represents Cohasset at the Statehouse along with state Sen. Robert Hedlund, gets a hug from his son, Will, during Cohasset's annual Town Meeting last week.

"Our community sound-scape should be something we cherish and protect."
— Marcus Ramsden, proponent

Selectman Paul Carlson addresses the voters at Cohasset's annual Town Meeting.

How You Can Get Super Rich with Boston's Commercial Real Estate!

• Apartments • Offices • Retail • Medical • Warehouses • Industrial • Hotels & Resorts •

Discover Why Commercial Properties are Easier to Own, Pay Greater Cash Flow, and are More Profitable than Owning Rental Houses Especially in Today's Market... And Anyone Can Do It!

Boston, MA — It's no secret that commercial real estate is legendary for its ability to "multiply" your net worth. And 2008 is poised to be one of the best years ever to invest in commercial property and secure your retirement.

The Wall Street Journal recently reported:

"While the residential housing market is struggling, commercial real estate is showing solid fundamentals in many markets — with occupancies high, increasing rent growth and supply under control."

Why? Simply because as the population grows, the demand for multifamily housing units, storage, offices, warehouses, parking lots, etc., grows proportionately. In fact, it is estimated that the population of the U.S. could double within the next 50 years. If this happens, it is very likely that values will skyrocket!

Now you can learn ways to master the art of commercial real estate and get a complete overview of what it takes to be successful in your own hometown.

Free Workshop Reveals How to Own Commercial Real Estate in the Boston Area

This FREE 90-minute introductory workshop shows you what it takes to begin building a fortune in commercial real estate. Right now in 2008! This groundbreaking event will show you step-by-step how you could own lucrative commercial real estate in as little as 60 days. You'll discover how it's possible to:

- Increase the worth of a commercial building by up to 30% in 30 days.
- Quickly pinpoint the value of a building. No calculator needed.

Plus...

- How simple paperwork can add huge value to your property.

REALITY: It can be the best bargain in real estate. Fact is, it can cost no more out of your pocket to acquire a commercial property than to buy a house. Even acquire prime commercial properties with little or no money down.

MYTH: Commercial real estate is too complicated.

MYTH: Commercial real estate is too volatile.

REALITY: History shows it can be much more stable than investing in houses, especially in the market we're in today, PLUS get property value appreciation, tax benefits, and higher income.

MYTH: Commercial real estate is too time-consuming.

REALITY: It can be effortless to manage. The secret is to have a team in place that manages your property. And the best part is, your tenants pay for your team's service. So, it can cost you nothing out of pocket.

The Biggest Myth of All...

You'll see how to "do the numbers" and you'll be shown how savvy commercial real estate deals are put together. You'll see how little more than a week's worth of work on your part can lead to extra monthly income of $5,000 or more.

The moneymaking potential is spectacular. Let me prove it to you in person.

I'm one of the largest single owners of historical commercial properties in the United States, including U.S. territories. Imagine traveling to the Caribbean and coming back with more than a tan... coming back as the owner of income-producing property. I'll show you how I did it.

From Hotel Manager to Real Estate Magnate

Cherif Medawar, Founder, Institute of Commercial Real Estate (ICRE)

My education at UCLA taught me how to work for money, but not how to make my money work for me. I was working night and day as a hotel manager in California when a billionaire guest pulled me aside and said, "Cherif, come work for me. I will show you the path to wealth."

I learned how to acquire properties, how real estate deals are structured, and how billions are made. On a much smaller scale, I also began to buy my own properties around the U.S. and develop a personal system for creating wealth.

Today, I have property all over the world. And yet, I work less than ever. My wealth works for me.

Let me pull you aside, as the billionaire did for me, and show you my 12 steps to wealth. Steps that become easier the more often you take them! Richer the less you do! It all begins at my FREE workshop. See you there!

This is real estate investing on steroids. Discover how to find, analyze, and secure the biggest and most lucrative properties and watch your profits soar.

- Real Estate Professionals: Now is the time for you to make more money on your deals. See how you can earn more than a commission and massively increase your net worth by getting in on the action for yourself.
- Small-Business Owners: Stop paying rent to someone else. Build an additional cash flow stream for your business and watch your wealth multiply.

For Beginners & Seasoned Investors!

If you've been wishing for a new way to invest that's richer than single-family houses, this is for you!

This is more than how to move up a rung or two on the Wealth Ladder... this is how to take the express elevator to the top floor!

Now you can learn ways to master the art of commercial real estate and get a complete overview of what it takes to be successful in your own hometown.

You'll get an up-close view of the best types of commercial property to invest in now, and the hidden properties with big payout potential that often go overlooked, including:

- Finding prime commercial real estate in your area before it hits the market
- Exactly why it's a reliably profitable investment path

Plus how to:

- Invest in property using other people's money
- Start with a positive cash flow
- Get immediate cash back
- Locate properties that can subsidize your retirement

It's OK to Start at Zero, as Long as You Start

Some of today's most successful real estate investors started with nothing. Like me, banks wouldn't talk to them. They had no personal assets. No money. Now you can find out how it's possible to overcome the obstacles and go from $0 to millions.

At my FREE 90-minute workshop, you'll discover how to find hidden real estate gems, how to structure risk-free deals that make you wealthy, and how you can do this quickly in your local real estate market or any area you choose. Team Lyons forms in tribute to fallen triathlete believed in the possibility of finding a cure for juvenile diabetes. Although it didn't happen in his lifetime, Joe firmly believed a cure was achievable in his son's lifetime.

More than just finishing the triathlon, Karen wants to continue what Joe started in a much broader view. She wants to raise money and awareness for JDRF, the cause her husband was so passionate about.

The decision to do the triathlon wasn't one that came easy, but once decided it felt right to her.

"Even on the first day I heard the news about Joe, it struck me he didn't finish the race," says Karen, and the thought stayed with her during the next few months.

Part of the reason was the kind of guy Joe was, Karen says. She called Joe an "end to end" guy: once he set out to do something, he finished it. When Joe wasn't able to complete the race he had trained so hard for and prepared for so thoroughly, it bothered her.

"Everyone who knew him was fired up about him doing the triathlon," says Karen. "We were convinced he was not only going to finish the race, but he was going to do well."

As time went on, she began to have more thoughts that maybe she could do the race. An avid runner and occasional cyclist, she knew her body could endure the physical challenges of the race.

During a spinning class, she began to envision herself riding her bike through the winding, picturesque roads of Cohasset even though she had never seen them.

"It was an overwhelming feeling. But, it felt good, it felt right," says Karen. "It hit me, I need to finish the race for him. It just had to be done."

"Team Lyons pulls Joe's life together. The team is an opportunity to touch all the aspects of his life."

— Karen Lyons

Team Lyons

Late last year, she confesses she began secretly looking at the Cohasset Triathlon website, still hesitant to tell anyone of her plan.

But, she set up a meeting with Race Director Bill Burnett who embraced her idea of running the race and forming a team in tribute to Joe.

From there, she asked family, friends, neighbors and coworkers to ask for their support in her endeavor and to see if they would be willing to compete with her.

The response she got was overwhelming — over 50 people responded that they were ready to join her team and the triathlon. It's a response that speaks to the kind of man her husband was and the many lives he touched.

It was then "Team Lyons" was formed. Joe's brother and sister, close friends from around the country and neighbors from Newton are all members of the team.

"Team Lyons pulls Joe's life together," says Karen. Many of the members' only connection to each other is Joe. "The team is an opportunity to touch all the aspects of his life."

Together, Team Lyons is hoping to raise as much money as possible for JDRF and its efforts to find a cure for the disease.

"Joe was a giver in everything he did. He was looking to have an impact on the world," says Karen, from fundraising to being involved in Newton schools, to foremost being a loving father, husband and friend. She says he always thought big and went head first into everything he did.

"I know Joe would be very proud of me. This will be the greatest tribute to him," says Karen.

Karen's son, Sam, will be an integral part of the Cohasset Triathlon; in fact, the race won't be able to start without him. On race day, he'll be the official race starter for the first wave of competitors, which includes Olympic triathlete Jarrod Shoemaker and 30 other elite racers.

"Sam is incredibly excited he gets to be the official race starter," says Karen, with pride in her voice. After giving the "on your mark, get set, go," he'll join the spectators to cheer on his mom (who a friend says he is very proud of) and the rest of Team Lyons to the finish line.

The actions of the members of Team Lyons say more about the man Joe was than words ever could. Karen says she was thinking 10 or 15 would join her on the starting line at Cohasset's Sandy Beach, but embraced the support she received. Some team members will compete in all three legs of the competition, while others have joined together to compete as relay teams.

A website (www.teamlyons.org) will highlight the dozens of members of the team and their mission in doing the triathlon. A donation page, linked off the Cohasset Triathlon homepage (www.cohassettri.com), allows supporters to contribute directly to their team.

The team motto, "we will finish what you started," in one sentence encompasses what they are striving to achieve and has meaning well beyond a race.

Being a part of the race and ultimately crossing the finish line will be a victory for Karen, for Sam, for JDRF, for the triathlon and an inspiration to all who witness it.

"It's going to be an amazing feeling," Karen says.

Commitment to JDRF

With strength and courage, Karen and her son, Sam, are writing the next chapters of their lives — chapters they never thought they would have to write — all while dealing with the daily challenges of living with juvenile diabetes.

"(Juvenile diabetes) is a tough thing to deal with day-to-day," says Karen. While she says many think the management of the disease involves simply checking insulin and getting a shot every day, it's much more than that. Sam and Karen must be constantly vigilant about everything that goes into his body.

"In our house, before he can eat anything he has to check his blood sugar," says Karen, sometimes pricking his finger multiple times a day. "It's doable, but it's hard."

For Karen — and parents like her — dealing with juvenile diabetes is a balancing act. Having a child with Type 1 diabetes means constant monitoring and a constant struggle to balance food and insulin, a hormone that the body uses to change glucose in the blood into energy.

A person with Type 1 doesn't produce any insulin and without it, glucose builds up in the blood, causing high blood sugar. If left untreated, there can be serious complications.

Other factors like exercise, stress, and illness can affect blood sugar as well, making it very difficult to control, according to the JDRF website.

"Everything is individualized," says Karen — what may work for another child, might not work for Sam and what works one day might not work the next.

Type 1 diabetes affects millions of kids and adults in the United States. The condition is diagnosed most often in childhood or adolescence, but it can strike adults as well.

Research and the funds to support it are the only ways science can better understand the disease and develop a cure. According to their website, JDRF is the leading charitable funder and advocate of Type 1 (juvenile) diabetes research worldwide.

With Joe as their guide and inspiration, Karen, Sam and Team Lyons hope to achieve something big for themselves and for JDRF. Karen says Joe always wanted to do something big, change the world, and leave it a better place. If the 55 people on Team Lyons are any indication, he will have succeeded.

Lady Skippers take first two; set to play Duxbury Thursday

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

Last season was a disappointment for the Cohasset High girls lacrosse team and head coach Chuck Jaffe admitted as much. The Lady Skippers finished 7-9 overall after qualifying as the top seed in Div. 2 south the year before. They had talent (see 2007 graduate Lindsay Durkin) and veteran leadership but still fell just short of making the south sectionals.

"Some of it was coaching," the third-year coach said Monday afternoon. "People were stunned we didn't make the tournament."

Expectations didn't reach reality in 2007, but Jaffe and the 2008 Lady Skippers hope to dispel any bad taste left from last season.

"We are young, but we want to win now," Jaffe said.

Cohasset is young with only three seniors; Sarah Brown, Jen Silvia and Amanda Hurd. All three are captains and only Brown has ever been a full-time starter.

As a program, adolescence is turning to young adult.

"When the boys got good it was in the fifth or sixth season of the youth program," Jaffe said. "When those first kids that went through the youth program got to junior and senior year they [saw success].

"We are just reaching that stage now."

Although Jaffe is quick to point out he isn't forecasting the type of success the boys have had, he does hope his young squad can surprise some people this year.

Two South Shore League all-star midfielders will return to the lineup, Caitlin Mahoney (Jr.) and Amy Meikleham (So.)

"My first two years we relied heavily on the attack, this year we will rely on the midfield," Jaffe said.

The Skippers opened up a 5-0 lead in the game's first few minutes, Monday, and spent the rest of the day working on movement and motion and adjusting to game situations. The team expanded its lead to 9-2 at the half and assistant coach Jennifer Palmer — running the sidelines for Chuck Jaffe (who was out on a one game suspension from last season) — played mostly reserves in the second half.

Junior Amanda Masotta, stepping into the goaltending position vacated by South Shore League all-star Aisling Guinee, made five saves to win her debut effort.

Cohasset 17, Abington 1

Cohasset jumped out to a 6-0 lead just 3:33 into the game, and then spent the remainder of the early-season game looking at a lot of players and getting an inkling of how those girls can perform at the varsity level. The Lady Skippers cruised to a 10-0 halftime lead and dominated the game even while playing its reserves en route to a 17-1 win.

Lindsay Hill, Amy Meikleham, Kaleigh Teague and Katie Gaumer scored two goals each. Kelsey Erler, Hannah Burgess and Eliza Kinnealey each picked up a goal and an assist, and Caitlin Mahoney, Isabelle Franklin, Kaci Kucinski, Kenzie Hart, Olivia Murphy, and Amanda Masotta had solo markers. For Kinnealey, Hart, Murphy and Masotta — the latter having started the game as the team's goaltender — the goals represented their first varsity points.

Bats come alive

Big hitting keys win over Green Wave

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

After starting the season by splitting a two game series versus Scituate, the Cohasset High baseball team showed its full potential this week against South Shore League opponent Abington. The Skippers won 10-6 giving them an early lead in the South Shore League at 1-0.

Dave Snowdale (Sr.) steered the ship pitching for the Skippers and recorded all but one out.

"He pitched really well," said Cohasset coach Al Galotta.

Snowdale did allow nine hits, but the hits were scattered throughout the game. He also recorded six strikeouts for the Skippers.

A victory was in clear sight heading into the final inning as Cohasset led the Green Wave, 10-2. Unfortunately a two-out error kept Abington in the game for a bit longer and fogged up the Skipper's sight of a win.

The Green Wave rallied for four runs and got the bases loaded and the tying run to the plate. At this point, Sam DeGiacomo (Sr.) came into the game to try and get the last out of the game—and that's exactly what he did.

DeGiacomo got the leading hitter on Abington pop out to end the game and give Cohasset a 2-1 overall record on the young season.

This game was not about Cohasset's pitching, but rather the bats of the Skippers.

"We just had a huge day at the plate" said Galotta.

Of the twelve hits Cohasset knocked around, half of them were for extra bases. Senior Kenny Muir had the biggest day of all the Skipper hitters recording three hits, including two doubles, and knocking in three runs. Sophomore Brendan Doonan also had an outstanding day at the plate for Cohasset with three hits, one double and two runs batted in. Seniors Alex Goetz and Kyle Pinkus each had a double of their own, knocking in a run. Two other offensive contributors were DeGiacomo, who had an RBI single, and Pat Doonan (Sr.), who had two singles, one driving in a run.

"We did everything well," Galotta said following the game. "Dave pitched well, we hit well, and our defense was solid with only that one error."

That one error was the Skippers only infield error of the season thus far, a tribute to the team's work ethic on defense.

"(Our defense) has been key to our success," said Galotta.

Galotta is pleased with the Skippers early season success.

"We're really clicking on all cylinders, it's going really well," he said.

Cohasset looked to continue its strong play against Harwich, Thursday, passed the Mariner deadline.

Cohasset Lacrosse Notebook

In a rematch of last year's State championship game, the Cohasset boys lacrosse team beat Scituate 12-10 Sunday night at a sloppy Alumni Field in a cold, wind-driven mist. Over one hundred fans and students braved the elements and were treated to another classic in this great rivalry.

Cohasset grabbed the early lead on a textbook fastbreak that ended on a quick stick goal from senior middie Pete Ernst on a beautiful feed from All-American, senior co-captain, Mark Flibotte.

After Scituate scored three unanswered goals, senior co-captain Mike Grimm brought the Skippers to within one with a roll dodge through two defenders and a quick release to the upper corner. A Cohasset penalty gave Scituate the man advantage and the Sailors scored again. Dodging from behind, Grimm then found fellow captain Chuck Czerkawski alone inside the restraining line and Czerkawski let go a rocket to the lower corner. Grimm followed with a whirling dodge from the side — shooting and scoring as he fell on the slippery turf. After another Scituate goal on the man-up, Grimm scored again unassisted. Scituate found the cage before the half-time whistle to take a 6-5 lead at intermission.

The key to this victory was Cohasset's penalty killing. At the start of the second half, the Skippers found themselves two men down as a result of some late hits in the last seconds of the first half. Fortunately, the man-down defense of juniors Vin Curran and Andrew Smith, freshman Jake Kissick, sophomore Dana Valentine and goalie, senior co-captain, Nate Porter, were up to the task and prevented the Sailors from taking advantage.

Cohasset coach Stew Curran lauded his defenders.

"We had way too many penalties today, but our man-down defense was outstanding," he said. "Stopping Scituate at the start of the second half was critical and gave my team a lot of momentum."

Cohasset followed the big stop with three unanswered goals to take the lead and never looked back.

Czerkawski found Flibotte in the middle of the Scituate defense and Flibotte buried an incredible shot from his knees after getting knocked down. Flibotte scored again after picking up a loose ball on a scramble in front of the cage.

Hingham's Chrissie Bowler was a force for the girls hockey team all winter long, but perhaps shined brightest in the postseason. The sophomore racked up four goals and an assist in the Harborwomen's 6-1 Division 2 State title win March 11 over Milton, this despite playing with a sprained right ankle. She also netted the game-tying score late in the third period of the Harborwomen's 4-3 comeback win over Waltham in the semifinals.

Junior attackman Johnny Wade then grabbed his own rebound off the Scituate goalie's stick and put it in the back of the net. Flibotte then found Grimm alone again on the wing and Grimm buried his sixth goal of the game to give Cohasset a comfortable 12–7 lead. However, no lead is ever comfortable when these two teams meet. Scituate fought back hard scoring the last three goals of the game to make the final score close.

Grimm led all scorers with six goals and three assists. Flibotte and Czerkowski each added 2 goals and 2 assists. Porter was again outstanding in goal with 20 saves and a very intelligent clearing game.

Cohasset 8 – Abington 0

The Cohasset boys lacrosse team improved its record to 3-0 with a rare shutout victory over Abington on the road, Monday. Once again, the Skippers played on a wet and muddy field on a raw afternoon. The field conditions slowed Cohasset's vaunted offense as players had trouble keeping their feet in the slippery conditions. Abington's sophomore goaltender, South Shore League all-star Ryan Walsh, also played a great game, stifling the Cohasset offense with over twenty saves.

Coach Stew Curran thought his team came out a little tired and unfocused.

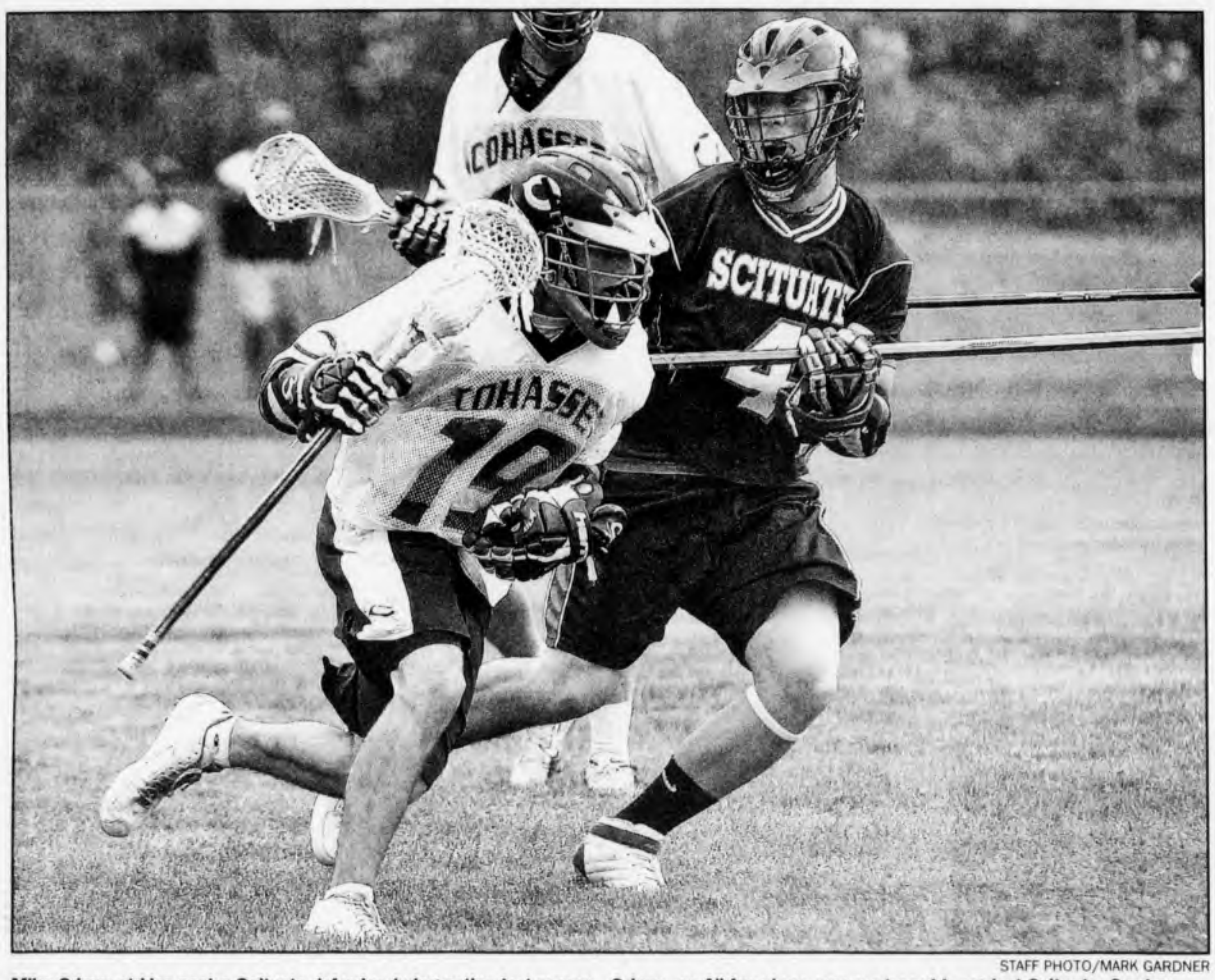
"Our tight battle with Scituate on Sunday night still was fresh in our minds and we never got untracked and running like we can. The field was in tough shape for both teams and our team likes to push the ball on offense whenever possible. The slop in front of both goals did slow our cuts and scoring opportunities. The penalties also slowed our offense down since we were a man down for most of the first half and did not have the ball."

With the man advantage, Mark Flibotte started the scoring on a quick stick goal after a feed down low from Mike Grimm. Nate Porter in goal kept the score tied with a circus stop of an Abington shot at point blank range less than a minute later.

Flibotte then found Johnny Wade alone on the crease for Wade's first goal of the game. Cohasset once again suffered from the penalty bug as at least ten yellow flags came out against the Skippers in the first half alone.

The man down defense was spectacular time and time again turning away the Green Wave without good shots on goal. The man-down defense combinations of seniors Jake Cuneo and Cliff Musto, juniors Anderson Lynner and Vin Curran, sophomore Dana Valentine and freshman standouts, Jake Kissick and Tom Flibotte had many chances to work their magic.

Cohasset's offense got its act into a little better gear in the second half again keyed by the defense.



Valentine stripped the ball from his attacker, picked up the ground ball with his long stick, raced the length of the field and passed to a wide-open Flibotte on the crease for Cohasset's third goal.

After another solid save, Porter found Chuck Czerkawski with a beautiful outlet pass. He quickly delivered the ball to Flibotte who just as quickly found a streaking Grimm for the goal.

Flibotte, dodging from behind, assisted again on Wade's second goal, a great catch and shot in traffic. Grimm then followed with a cannon to the top shelf after a hard bull dodge to the right side. Wade completed his hat trick thirty seconds later on still another assist from Flibotte. Junior middie Alec Livingstone scored Cohasset's final goal (his first varsity goal) on a bullet to the far right bottom corner that beat the goalie on the stick side.

Mark Flibotte led the Cohasset scoring with two goals and three assists. Johnny Wade added three goals and Mike Grimm had two goals and one assist.

Nate Porter and sophomore goalie Jack Murphy combined for twelve saves and preserved the big shutout win. Cohasset plays Division 1 State champion Duxbury at Alumni Field, Thursday afternoon after the Mariner went to press.

One student-athlete is chosen from the list of nominees as the South Shore Athlete of the Month. Coastal Nissan, sponsor of the South Shore Athlete of the Month, will present a check in the amount of $500 each month to the athletic department from the winning school.
Hingham's Chrissie Bowler was a force for the girls hockey team all winter long, but perhaps shined brightest in the postseason. The sophomore racked up four goals and an assist in the Harborwomen's 6-1 Division 2 State title win March 11 over Milton, this despite playing with a sprained right ankle. She also netted the game-tying score late in the third period of the Harborwomen's 4-3 comeback win over Waltham in the semifinals. In four tourney games, she led Hingham with seven goals, six assists. Overall this winter, the forward led the Harborwomen (23-1-2) in scoring with 72 points on 32 goals, 40 assists. She already has 104 career points in only two seasons at Hingham High School.

What a mess the Summer Olympics are turning out to be, with protests worldwide calling for a boycott of the 2008 Games.

The Olympic torch went through the gauntlet in Europe. With its arrival on American soil this week, get ready for an influx of "Free Tibet" T-shirt-wearing, self-serving heroes to make their presence felt. A few of them already climbed the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco to air their dissatisfaction, leaving their unwashed Che Guevara T-shirts for another day.

Hillary Clinton has asked President George W. Bush to boycott the opening ceremonies. Grumblings out of France are for a complete boycott, athletes included.

The Olympics have always been, and will always be, political.

Fine.

Anything that gets the average person involved in politics and foreign affairs is a wonderful thing.

Ken Burns was asked what his motivation was for the PBS documentary "The War." One response was that when surveyed, half of graduating seniors in the United States think we fought with the Germans against the Soviet Union in World War II.

Nice. I'm proud to be an American…

I'm as much against Chinese domestic and foreign policies as the guy climbing the Golden Gate. Most rational people are, but just because the Olympics have always been political doesn't mean they need to be at the expense of the athletes. It doesn't mean the kid who has worked his tail off on the track or in the swimming pool should be denied the opportunity of a lifetime.

The world is a messed-up place. This is old news, as will be this entire hullabaloo about the Olympics once they come and go.

Last time I checked, no one really cares about the Olympics anymore, anyway. They are viewed as an archaic institution of games that are met with terrible television ratings and an apathetic attitude here in the United States.

Globalization and Bristol, Conn., are much to thank for that. The 24-hour news and sports cycle provided by ESPN and others give the average viewer a watered down feeling to the whole Olympic experience. Nonetheless, qualifying for the Olympics takes hard work and dedication. It's based on facts, numbers, wins and losses, times, math, things that can't be questioned.

That might be hard for people like Hillary Clinton to understand. Politics nowadays seem to be solely based on shady poll numbers, entitlement and appearances. Show up with a smile and say the right thing like "boycott," and it's gold medals all-around.

The same thing goes for the jerks that climbed the Golden Gate, putting hard-working city workers in danger. An "A" on a philosophy paper doesn't make you Socrates. Come up with something original.

U.S. swimmer Michael Phelps winning a record eight gold medals this summer? That would be original.

The other Orlando: EXTREME ADVENTURES

Auditi Guha
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Orlando - I had a little trepidation when the small airplane pulled us - my instructor and me - way above the ground. But then I found soaring like a bird was the greatest thrill and wondered why I had never tried hang gliding before.

The rides at Disney World and Universal Studios aren't the only places to feel a rush of adrenaline in Orlando. The city and its surrounds offer a wealth of experiences for those who like their adventures extreme, from flying in the air to swimming with sharks.

Flying and Falling

At Wallaby Ranch in Davenport, a short drive from Greater Orlando, try a first-class hang gliding experience in a secluded field surrounded by woodlands. A tandem flight with an instructor costs $120. After learning the basics, you are comfortably secured, lying face down in a harness like a sleeping bag, attached to a large kite-like tandem glider with your instructor next to you.

A small airplane tugs you up into the air, and releases you at 2,000 feet. Then you leisurely glide, maneuver and enjoy the scenery. For details call 800-WAL-LABY or visit www.wallaby.com.

For more adrenalin pumping, SkyVenture Orlando will give you all the excitement of skydiving without having to jump out of an airplane. It's fast, fun, indoors and $44 will buy you an hour's class, with two-minute flight rotations equal to two real skydives per person. It's so realistic that professional skydivers come to fine-tune their free-fall techniques.

Your instructor will first show you basic body movements. After you put on your one-piece flight suit, goggles and earplugs, you are taught to fall into a 125 mph wind tunnel where you are held up in midair and can manipulate your movements with a mere flick of your wrist. If you are not relaxed, you will tend to bounce about, but once you get the hang of it, your instructor might twirl you up and around the giant SkyVenture tower in a breathtaking leap and fall. Your two minutes here will certainly feel much longer and more intense. For details call 800-SKY-FUN-1 or check out www.skyventureorlando.com.

Fly like a bird on a hang gliding ride at Wallaby Ranch.

Sharks ahoy!

Sharks are fascinating predators with intimidating weapons, namely, their teeth. You can see just how many up close if you decide to brave the Sharks Deep Dive. SeaWorld Orlando's most daring animal encounter program at $150 per person is certainly a lifetime experience for the thrill-seeker.

You get basic instruction, including common-sense suggestions like "Don't stick your hand out." The hardest part is getting into a tiny wet suit, putting on a heavy underwater helmet and stepping into the cold seawater. But once you are acclimated, the thrill begins with a giant step into a shark-proof cage that is plunged into a 125-foot-long underwater habitat – like a giant aquarium open on top - teeming with more than 50 sharks, including sand tigers, sand bars, black tips, sawfish and hundreds of tropical fish. If you are lucky, some of the more curious ones will swim by, inches away from your face.

While you ogle the sharks, diners in the adjacent Sharks Underwater Grill restaurant will be ogling you through the glass walls. For reservations, call 800-327-2424 or visit www.SeaWorldOrlando.com.

Wild Orlando

For a back-to-basics nature experience, the eco-tour at Grande Lakes Orlando resort offers a glimpse into the area's wildlife. The relaxing two-hour canoe or kayak trip takes you up Shingle Creek, which leads to the Everglades. You may be surprised to find such unspoiled wilderness so close to civilization. Your guide will narrate the creek's history and point out native birds, fish and wildlife

IF

Staying there: Grande Lakes is home to both a Ritz-Carlton and a JW Marriott hotel. Spread over 500 acres, the resort is unique to central Florida for both its natural setting and conservation efforts - it has even been recognized by the Audubon Society. Guests will find luxurious amenities from an 18-hole Greg Norman Signature golf course to a world-class Ritz-Carlton spa. Five swimming pools including a lazy, manmade river for tubing.

The majestic, 26-story JW Marriott is built Spanish-style with 1,000 rooms, while the 14-story Ritz-Carlton is an opulent oasis with 564 rooms.

The resort truly offers something for everyone. Nature lovers can partake in eco-tours (see above) and fish with the Orvis Fly Fishing School. Sports enthusiasts have access to the golf course, three lighted tennis courts, a bocce ball court, a fitness center and jogging trails.

Foodies can sample anything from sushi to steak at 11 dining venues, including renowned Chef Melissa Kelly's restaurant Primo, featuring Italian cuisine using the day's freshest herbs and vegetables from its own garden.

Spa enthusiasts can try treatments from shiatsu to a steaming hot stone massage.

Both hotels offer all-day children's recreation programs including pool activities and carriage rides, afternoon tea and even a course in etiquette.

Get Speedy

Like speed? Forget roller coasters and book yourself the real NASCAR experience at Disney World's Speedway, one of many Richard Petty Driving Experience locations. If you are bold enough and can drive stick-shift, you can attend a class, take the wheel and zoom around the race track in a V8 NASCAR race car for $339-$449. Prefer to ride shotgun? For about $110, you can enjoy three hair-raising laps on the speedway in a two-seat car driven by a professional, burning rubber at 160 miles per hour. You might be a little shaky as you climb out of the window (yes, that's the only way!) but it will be another unique experience to cherish. Call 800-BE-PETTY or go to www.1800bepetty.com.

Daffodil days is close to the heart

June King is a cancer survivor

By Mary Jane Hanron
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

When King was first diagnosed she said one of the first inquiries she made was to the American Cancer Society.

Many customers and members of the community are familiar with the Spring Event at King Jewelers Inc., which celebrates the season's arrival with its annual Daffodil Days festivities to benefit the American Cancer Society (ACS). Also showcased is a preview of new jewelry for the upcoming season. Not all who attend or partake in the festivities are aware of why the cause is so important to the King family, owners of the business. The annual event was held recently at the Kings' store at 812 3A in Cohasset.

This affair holds particular meaning to the family as June King is a cancer survivor and is currently celebrating 18 years of being cancer free.

2008 is the fifth year the store has celebrated Daffodil Days. According to those at the South Shore headquarters of the ACS, the event at Kings is the only one of its kind in the area. The general public is able to come in and purchase daffodil bouquets while enjoying light refreshments and viewing new jewelry designs for the upcoming season. Among the array of baubles on view this year was a collection of dazzling yellow diamonds as well as the intricate and spectacular designs of Maryann Englander of Dragonfly studios.

During the past five years of this festivity, with the support of clients and guests, King's has donated $4185 to the ACS simply from the sale of Daffodil bouquets.

June King, widow of Forrest King Jr. whose father founded the store in 1921, has been involved with the business in many capacities most of her professional life. She also is the mother of Valerie and Vicki King who today run a substantial part of the company. She speaks of her ordeal candidly and interspersed with anecdotes of her years with the business.

"I was absolutely surprised when I was told I had cancer," she said. "I tend to be a positive person and it never had occurred to me that I had a serious illness. Once I found out and knew I had to face it, I decided to do some research and learn what I could about my condition and the various options available to me. It was during this research that I learned of Dr. Susan Love, a leading authority in her field, straightforward, caring, and author of "The Susan Love Breast Book."

King asked for a second opinion and then consulted with Love who, at the time was practicing in the Boston area. She chose Love as her surgeon for several reasons, one of which was, "she offered more alternatives than a "complete mastectomy" and understood the devastation of this disease psychologically and emotionally to women.

Following King's surgery and during her treatment she was able to go to work at the store regularly. "The only days I couldn't work were the day I had my treatment and the day after. Otherwise, I was pretty much able to keep to my schedule," she said.

She recalled that at the time, the store was moving from what is now Shaw's Plaza to its former location in the Plaza opposite Stop and Shop on 3A. "I was there most of the time, washing the cases, organizing inventory and doing what I always did. I do think I was fortunate because I was otherwise healthy and tend to have a strong stamina.

"People would come in and talk to me about it, especially those facing similar situations in their own lives. Of course, it was a time that people didn't discuss it openly like they do today."

When King was first diagnosed she said one of the first inquiries she made was to the American Cancer Society. "They could not have been kinder, more informative or more supportive," she said. They sent me materials about my particular condition and resources that I might find helpful. It is a wonderful organization and can help anyone in any situation touched by cancer at any time."

Now eighteen years later, she serves as an inspiration to many who are newly diagnosed or have been survivors for a far shorter time. She gladly tells the story of how her role at the store has evolved throughout the years.

She worked there before she met her future husband, Forrest King. As a teenager, her evening job was at the Scituate playhouse operated by Bud King, Forrest's brother. Bud was working feverishly to keep the jewelry store functioning properly while running the playhouse at night. He hoped to keep King Jewelers in order until Forrest came back from serving in the military in Japan. June assisted at the store as well.

Upon Forrest's return, changes occurred. After marrying the owner in 1955, June played a vital role in the company's daily operation. "I helped customers, washed counters, dusted, did buying and acted as an inventory coordinator. There was a day that I knew the item-number and price of every piece in this store!"

Her daughters Val and Vicki soon grew to be more involved in the business and today they are the principle managers of the store. As the family members currently running the business are all women, they are great supporters of Women's Charities. Recently they participated in "Womenbuild," a project for Habitat for Humanity which was a house completed exclusively by women. They also present a unique perspective to customers looking for gifts that will appeal to women. The compassion and community spirit exhibited by their efforts, their extensive knowledge of gems and jewelry and an eye for the unique and sentimental gift indicates the staff at this store offers a distinct shopping experience.

June King continues to perform her duties at the store. When she is not working at the business, she is often occupied with her grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She is well aware that one of them could represent a future generation of King Jewelers.

Relay planned for June 13-14

Relay for Life is the signature fundraiser of the American Cancer Society. Participants raise money by personally collecting donations and organizing group fundraisers prior to or at the event. The money goes towards cancer research, patient services, advocacy and education. It also provides hope to those how have cancer and their family and friends that a cure is available, it provides hope that cancer can be detected in its early stages and it provides hope that cancer is eradicated in our life time. The Hingham/Hull/Cohasset and Scituate Relay will be held on June 13th and 14th organizations clubs, family, friends and co-workers form teams of at least 8-15people and gather at Cohasset High School on the 13th.

Members of the team take turns walking around the track for the duration of the event. An important part of Relay is honoring and remembering those people in our lives who have faced cancer. Each Relay invites cancer survivors in the community to walk a special Survivors Lap. Another focal point of each Relay is the Luminaria Ceremony, held after dark, where candles are sponsored and lit in honor and memory of our loved ones who have battled this disease. Part of what makes Relay for Life special is its atmosphere — the sense of community, camaraderie and hope that permeates the event from start to finish. Hope has become the catchword of Relay, because hope is what it's all about; the hope that one day we will be free from the fear of this terrible disease, that our children will grow up in a world where cancer is no longer fatal. Relay is a time to do something about a danger that seems so much bigger than us, and to know that we are actually making a difference. It is a time to reflect, to remember those who have been lost and those who can still be saved. And it is also a lot of fun to be there with friends and take part in the activities.

Cowboy Music at Coffeehouse April 19

Skip Gorman plays the simple, yet beautifully poignant music that was performed around campfires by cowboys and westward settlers in the nineteenth century. Come hear him perform at the Old Ship Coffeehouse off the Square on Saturday, April 19 at 8 p.m. The concert begins with an open mike at 8 p.m. Beverages and desserts are fifty cents. Net proceeds benefit the Unitarian-Universalist Service Committee.

Gorman has performed on Garrison Keillor's 'A Prairie Home Companion' and at bluegrass festivals and cowboy gatherings. He frequently presents programs and concerts at schools and museums dressed in authentic cowboy garb while playing period instruments.

The Coffeehouse off the Square is at the Old Ship Church Parish Hall, 107 Main St., in Hingham Square just up from the Loring Hall Theater. Admission is $10 at the door (sorry, no reservations.) For information or to volunteer (for free admission) call 781-749-1767 or visit www.skipgorman.com.

Sheriff Bellotti offers seniors tips on crime prevention

A section of the booklet also is devoted to protecting the elderly against con artists and their scams.

Keeping senior citizens safe is a priority for Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti. To help ensure their safety, he is distributing illustrated booklets with tips on preventing seniors from being victimized by criminals.

The easy-to-read booklets – addressing crimes ranging from house breaks to phone scams to identity theft – are available free-of-charge to individuals and groups. They can be obtained by calling Bellotti's Community Programs office at 781-751-3505.

"Crime directly touches a certain amount of our cherished senior citizen population, but the fear of crime affects a far greater segment of our elderly community, often preventing them going out and enjoying life in the way they deserve," Bellotti said.

"The information in this booklet can help keep them from becoming victims. And it can help alleviate any fears they may have by advising them on how to avoid situations where they may be at risk," he said.

The booklet offers advice on avoiding crime: at home, while out in the community, with specific tips for using public transportation or using a car and while on vacation.

A section of the booklet also is devoted to protecting the elderly against con artists and their scams.

"Knowledge is power, and I hope this booklet empowers the senior citizens of Norfolk County to live free of the paralyzing fears surrounding crime," Bellotti said.

An obligation to help others is subject of talk

Glastonbury Abbey's will present a program titled "Am I My Neighbor's Keeper – If My Neighbor Lives Half a World Away?" at 7:15 p.m., on Thursday, April 17. The lecture is part of the Inter-Religious Lecture Series, "Listening to Other Voices: Prophets of Compassion: Who Cares?"

Do individuals have an obligation to help others? Ruth Messinger thinks yes – even if they are half a world away. She has made it her life's work. After serving in public service in New York City for 20 years, now as president of the American Jewish World Service, she directs support to 300 grassroots social change projects throughout the world. She has worked tirelessly to end the genocide in Dafur, Sudan. She will tell people what is needed, where and how people can transform the lives of others and gain something for themselves in the process.

COURTESY PHOTO

Recipient of the Jewish Council of Public Affairs Award in 2006, Messinger also received an honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters from Hebrew Union College in tribute to her life's work.

Reservations are recommended and can be made by calling 781-749-2155. The lecture is free, but donations will be accepted.

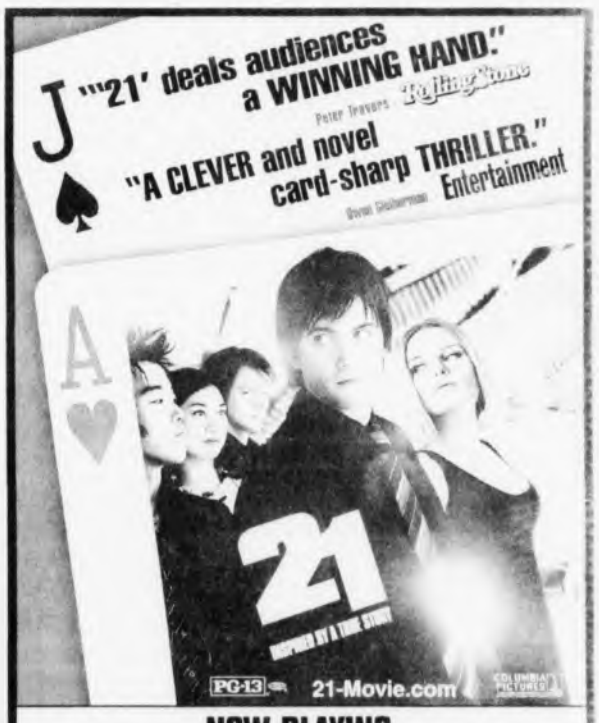
Interfaith Seder celebrates 'A Nation of Immigrants'

The Twelfth annual South Shore Interfaith Seder will be celebrated Sunday, April 13, at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in Hingham. This year it will focus on the theme that people are "A Nation of Immigrants." Children from the Children's Theatre Company in Boston will be singing at the service.

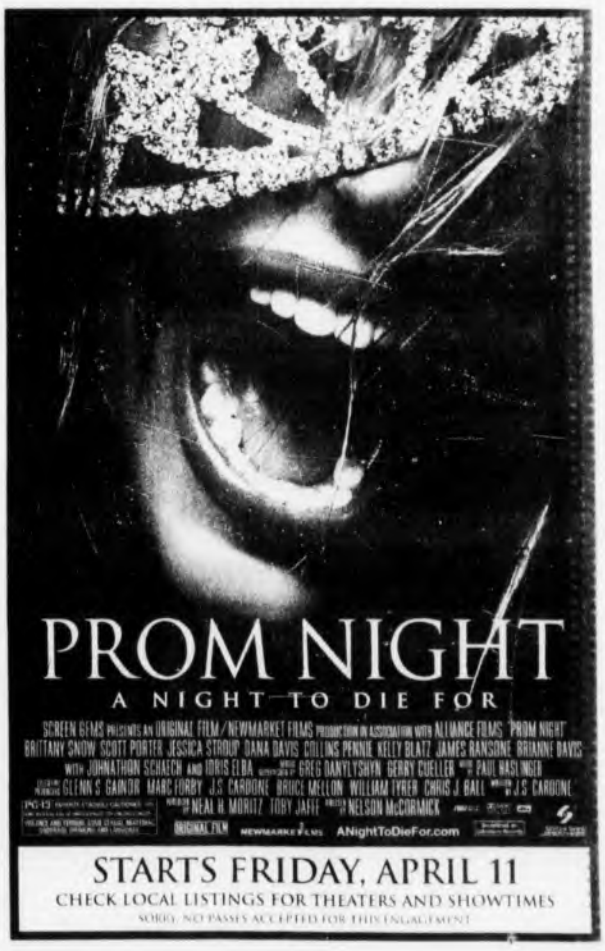
Through music, stories and rituals modeled on the traditional Passover Seder, children and adults from many diverse faiths and communities will join together to celebrate and honor the journeys that many citizens and their ancestors have made in becoming part of this nation. During the ceremony, the story of the Jewish Exodus from slavery in Egypt is retold, and its central message of freedom becomes relevant to all people and faith communities in today's world.



The ritual includes prayers of gratitude and appeals for compassion to care for all people, of all different faiths, races and backgrounds. In the Interfaith Seder's version of the Haggadah, or book that guides the Seder ritual, the Leader says, "We are all God's children, and if one of us suffers – even our enemy – we are all diminished." A bit later in the ceremony, the community says "that people will cast out the plagues that threaten everyone everywhere they are found, beginning in our own hearts." Thus the Seder calls on everyone to look within their own hearts, to take responsibility for personal thoughts, words and actions that might contribute to the suffering and oppression of others.

Traditionally, Passover, or Pesach, is a week-long celebration of the ancient story of Exodus, the Israelites' liberation from slavery in Egypt. It begins with the annual celebration of the Passover Seder. In the Exodus story, God sent 10 plagues down upon the Egyptians: blood, frogs, vermin, flies, cattle disease, boils, hail, locusts, darkness, and finally, the slaying of the first born. Passover refers to the 10th and final plague, when the Angel of Death spared the lives of the first born among the Israelites, "passing over" their houses and afflicting only the Egyptians. After the 10th plague, Pharaoh decided to free the slaves.

The traditional Seder is essentially a meal with 15 sections or blessings. Each food blessed and eaten during the ceremony is a symbol that helps to involve the participants more fully in remembering the Jews' passage into freedom. For example, Matzah, or a flat, unleavened bread is eaten. It recalls the haste with which the Israelites left Egypt. They had no time to prepare food, or to bring yeast. Maror, or bitter vegetable, is dipped in salt water and eaten to remember the bitterness of the experience of slavery. Salt water represents the tears of suffering the people shed during their ordeal as slaves.



The 12th annual South Shore Interfaith Seder is hosted by hosted by Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in partnership with the Hingham No Place For Hate Committee and the Hingham Hull Religious Leaders Association. It is coordinated by the Hingham No Place Committee in conjunction with the Anti-Defamation League.

For reservations and information about the 12th annual South Shore Interfaith Seder from 3 to 5 p.m., on April 16, at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St. Hingham, contact HinghamNoPlaceForHate@gmailcom or call the Anti-Defamation League at 617 406-6300.

It's a travesty

Weymouth's McKenzie-Nogueira plays a ghost in play

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Portraying the ghost of Nadia Lenin in Tom Stoppard's "Travesties" is a departure for Lorna McKenzie-Nogueira. The actress, who is making her Publick Theatre debut in the comedy now at the Boston Center for the Arts, is used to playing very different kinds of characters in locally produced, low-budget horror movies and on cable access television.

"This is my first Stoppard play," McKenzie-Nogueira explained last week from her Weymouth home. "It is also my first professional theater production and I have to admit I was quite nervous when I was first cast."

Having Public Theatre Artistic Director Diego Arciniegas at the helm of the production has helped put McKenzie-Nogueira at ease.

"Diego is so dynamic," said the 1981 graduate of North Quincy High who also has high praise for the playwright. "He is very smart and very encouraging. I'm always amazed by how much Stoppard puts into his plays and how he still manages to keep them funny. This one has so much great wordplay and great slapstick. My character, Nadia Lenin, is a ghost so I mainly interact with the audience and not the other actors. There is a lot of comedy going on around me on stage, but I can't laugh at any of it."

Set in 1917 Zurich, "Travesties" is Stoppard's spoof on the classic Oscar Wilde comedy "The Importance of Being Earnest" and a fiery debate between three revolutionary Modernist thinkers – Vladimir Lenin, Dadaist Tristan Tzara, and James Joyce – on the role of artists in shaping society. The trio expounds on everything from their beliefs on history, politics and war, to humanity.

McKenzie-Nogueira may play the role of observer in "Travesties," but as co-host of the cable access program "The Dungeon of Dr. Dreck," broadcast in Bellingham, Brookline, Mendon and Upton, she gets a chance to share her thoughts on a range of public domain horror movies.

"My character on the program is a zombie cheerleader named Moaner and my co-host is Dr. Dreck, a bumbling scientist played by Mike Legge," said McKenzie-Nogueira, who once played a bisexual mortuary director in a Whistler in the Dark Theatre Company production of "Vampire" in Watertown. "Mike is a terrific low-budget independent filmmaker and an expert on the horror genre. We do about four shows a month and we're often joined by a rubber rat named Stu and even some shrunken heads."

With roles in the feature film version of "The Dungeon of Dr. Dreck" as well as "Honey Glaze, "Democrazy" and "Chicken, Chicken" already on her resume, McKenzie-Nogueira says she plans to continue to pursue all kinds of acting opportunities in the future.

"I hope to be able to do both stage and independent films. I enjoy doing both very much," McKenzie-Nogueira said.

The Publick Theatre production of Tom Stoppard's "Travesties" will be at the Plaza Theatre at the Boston Center for the Arts, 539 Tremont S., Boston, through Saturday, May 3. For tickets and information, call 617-933-8600 or go online at publicktheatre.com.

Movie review

Clooney fumbles

Leatherheads (C-)

Film Review
ED SYMKUS

I like George Clooney. The rugged good looks. The gravelly voice. And during interviews, he's open and honest and often amazingly self-deprecating. Just ask him about "Batman & Robin" some time; you'll get an earful about how he helped destroy the franchise.

It's that sense of humor and his comic acting ability that earns this guy a whole lot of extra credit. Check out his timing in the "Ocean" movies, his way with facial expressions in "O Brother, Where Art Thou?" or his physical presence in his "Welcome to Collinwood" cameos. Then remember, for heaven's sake, that he was the voice of Sparky the Dog in "South Park"!

Clooney has shown promise, if not panache, in his directing efforts: the muddled "Confessions of a Dangerous Mind" and the too-earnest "Good Night, and Good Luck."

But still, the prospect of "Leatherheads" was enticing — a loony Clooney in front of the camera, and the same guy with a point to prove behind the camera in a screwball romantic comedy about the early days of pro football.

And the first 15 minutes of "Leatherheads," set in 1925, is a goofy delight, with Clooney, as Dodge Connolly, an aging player on a struggling team, frolicking amidst much slapstick, and getting multiple laughs just by moving his eyebrows. There's also the college football hero Carter Rutherford (John Krasinski), who became a legend in WWI after single-handedly defeating a squadron of Germans — and is now brought into the pro football ranks — and the hotshot newspaper writer Lexie Littleton (Renee Zellweger), who's been assigned to find out if Carter's story about his wartime exploits is a sham.

Dodge Connolly (George Clooney) and Carter Rutherford (John Krasinski) have no idea what their next play is going to be.

There's a lot going on here, and that's without bringing the shifty team owner (Jonathan Pryce), the drunk sports reporter (Stephen Root), or the teamful of misfits (too many to mention) into the equation. Unfortunately, there's just too much of it, and the free-flowing lunacy of the opening reel soon gets clogged up by all of the plotting. The film not only runs out of steam, but except for a few bursts of great sight gags and some well-delivered banter, it stops being funny.

Most of the blame goes to first time feature writers Duncan Brantley and Rick Reilly, who have tried to mix the serious (the war angle) with the amusing (the hapless footballers) and the romantic (both Dodge and Carter fall for Lexie). But it's obvious that the writers are in over their heads about a half hour in, and despite having a good ending, don't really know how to get to it.

Clooney is growing as a director, and he certainly has a way with comedy — single scenes are hilarious. But he hasn't yet figured out how to handle pacing, and screwball comedy pacing is the most demanding of all. Saddled with a weak script, Clooney has nowhere to go but down.

Clooney is quite good as the long-in-the-tooth, slightly desperate athlete, and Krasinski is great at using his rubbery face and awkward body to get a laugh. But the film hits a big pothole with Zellweger, who should have played the part either nastier or slyer. Instead she's flat.

In fact, "flat" is an apt description of the film.

Too bad, because "Leatherheads" got off to a good start. The audience that I saw it with roared with laughter at the start, but by the end, they had grown suspiciously quiet.

Rated PG-13. "Leatherheads" has brief strong language.

Making puppy mills history

Howard leads protection society

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A tiny yellow lab in a pet shop window changed Deborah Howard's life. After seeing his open wound pressed up against a wire cage, she looked around the store. Cramped cages, unsanitary conditions and visibly sick animals were what she saw in the Docktor Pet Center pet shop in Atlanta in 1989.

When she held the yellow lab, she wondered about where he and the other puppies came from. When she found out they came from "puppy mills," commercial breeding facilities that mass produce dogs for resale, she knew she had to do something.

Twenty years later the Cohasset resident has had some successes, but is still battling the puppy mill and pet shops issue full force across the US on multiple fronts. As president and founder of the Companion Animal Protection Society (CAPS), her foremost concern is pet shops and puppy mills. CAPS is the only national non-profit dedicated Shortly after her experience in the Docktor Pet Center pet shop in 1989, she formed the non-profit exclusively to protecting companion animals — the College student supports affordable housing

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A cross-country trip post-college graduation is not out of the ordinary, but driving Route 66 is not the way Frannie Noble will be tackling the open road.

In June, following her graduation from Connecticut College, Noble will set off on a 3,743 mile bike ride as a part of Bike & Build, a non-profit organization helping to provide affordable housing. She'll bike between 40 and 80 miles each day for nine weeks as she makes her way across the country, from Providence to Seattle.

This summer, the Bike & Build program will have seven groups of about 30 riders set off from the east coast to raise awareness, funds and community spirit for affordable housing. Each group will make several stops along the way to help build homes and educate on the national issue of affordable housing.

Noble, a 2004 Cohasset High grad, was originally interested in a driving cross-country trip to see and get to know the country, but was immediately drawn to the Bike & Build opportunity because it combined two of her passions — travel and volunteering.

"I liked the idea of seeing the country at a slower pace and volunteering along the way," says Noble. She spent six months last year in West Africa and got to see first hand how another part

Treat's process to be 'transparent'

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Going forward, the town's involvement with the Treat's Pond saltmarsh restoration project will be open and transparent. Selectmen made it clear Monday night they want to involve all interested parties in the controversial Treat's Pond project as well as town-wide flooding issues.

"We want to have from this point forward an open and transparent process," said Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr.

The discussion on how to proceed with the Treat's Pond proposed restoration project follows on the heels of a Town Meeting resolution that conveyed the town's interest in the partially federally funded project, but did not allocate any money toward the project.

Last week, some residents became concerned when they heard a meeting about the Treat's Pond project was happening, but would not be open to the public. The meeting reportedly was going to involve an Army Corps representative, two Selectmen, Cohasset resident and former Congressman Amory Houghton, and Town Manager Bill Griffin.

Resident Peter Pratt heard about the meeting and subsequently filed an open meeting law complaint with the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office on April 9 (see sidebar).

Turf field funding clarification

School Committee member Lucia Flibotte said there was some confusion about the board's involvement in the Cohasset Sports Partnership's effort to raise money for a turf field at the high school.

"We as a School Committee are supporting the efforts of the Cohasset Sports Partnership, but the funding for the turf field will not be coming out of the school budget," said Flibotte, who reported she received several calls last week from concerned parents.

The Cohasset Sports Partnership is embarking on a private fundraising endeavor in order to raise funds for the estimated $1 million project.

The school's operating budget will not be used to supplement the cost of the turf field, said Chairman Rick Flynn. As a capital purchase, some town money could possibly be used to supplement the Partnership's fundraising. Flynn said the School Committee would help coordinate with other town parties once the effort got further along.

POLICE BEAT

Route 3A traffic detoured after head-on crash

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Those heading home along Route 3A Monday evening (April 14) around 6 p.m. were detoured at Sohier Street following a "near" head-on crash just past the lights at Stop & Shop.

Chief James Hussey said police and fire responded to the scene at 6:06 p.m. where they found two cars with heavy front-end damage.

Hussey said numerous witnesses were able to provide police with information on the accident.

The 2008 Honda driven by a Randolph resident was headed south on Route 3A when it crossed over the centerlines and struck almost head-on a northbound 2007 Chevrolet that was a Hertz rental car being driven by a man from Ireland.

The Irish man and his passenger were treated at the scene. The Jaws of Life was used to remove the Randolph man from the Honda. He was alone in the car. He was transported to the hospital; his injuries did not appear to be life threatening, police said.

Hussey said the Randolph man will be cited for crossing the double centerlines.

Protective custody

A 34-year-old Scituate man was taken into protective custody last Tuesday (April 8) after getting off at the wrong train station and then asking a woman for a ride at about 10:53 p.m.

Chief Hussey said the man was coming back from a Red Sox game and got off at the wrong stop. Apparently, he intended to get off the train in Scituate but got off in Cohasset by mistake. He approached a woman in her car in the parking lot to ask for a ride and appeared intoxicated.

Police took him into protective custody and held him until he sobered up, Hussey said.

Headed to court

A 43-year-old Norwell man is being summonsed to court on charges of possession of Class D (marijuana) following a traffic stop last Wednesday (April 9) morning. The man was allegedly tailgating a police officer who was in an unmarked car on Route 3A. The officer pulled over, saw the plate, installed the blue lights, and pulled the driver over farther up the highway.

Further investigation revealed the man had marijuana in his possession. He was also cited for following too closely and marked lanes violation.

Woman arrested

A 22-year-old Cohasset woman was arrested following a complaint about a "loud party" last Friday (April 11) on North Main Street by Ripley Road. Police found a car with four people inside and with rum, Tequila and beer in plain view.

Based on police observations and investigation at the scene, they arrested the woman and charged her with possession of Class D (marijuana) and with supplying alcohol to someone under 21. The other occupants of the car were released to family members.

Looking in cars

Police responded to a call about what looked to be a 16-year-old looking in cars at the post office. Although police could not locate anyone fitting the description, they appreciated the call. "We do appreciate the call and try to flush out what the suspicious activity is," Chief Hussey said. There have been a rash of pocketbooks thefts from unlocked cars, some of the incidents took place in the parking lot at the post office.

"We are glad that people are paying attention," Hussey said.

The call came in at about 11:30 a.m. on Saturday (April 12).

Hingham accident

After receiving a 9-1-1 call via OnStar, Cohasset police assisted Hingham with an accident last Monday (April 7) at Hull Street and Lamberts Lane. The accident occurred on the Hingham side of Hull Street, so Hingham handled the report, Chief Hussey said. The chief explained that the towns have mutual aid agreements so if Cohasset comes upon a Hingham accident, Cohasset can provide assistance. OnStar is an in-vehicle safety and security system.

Smiley face

A new resident of Forest Avenue went to police last week to see about removing a spray-painted "Smiley Face" from the rock wall in front of the house. Chief Hussey said officers told him the smiley face has been there for years. There was some question of whether the rock wall is on town or private property. Once that is worked out, there are no problems having the smiley face removed.

Beating reported

A caller reported seeing the driver of a vehicle that was in the northbound lane on 3A just past the lights standing outside the vehicle and was beating someone up in the back seat.

The incident was reported last Tuesday (April 8) at 3:12 p.m.

Chief Hussey said two cruisers went to the area but could not find the vehicle. He said police did not have a good description of the car.

If possible, it is always a good idea to try and get a plate number.

"A plate number is always good," he said. "Then we can run the plate and follow-up."

Blowing leaves

A business in Tedeschi Plaza complained last week about a man blowing leaves in the parking lot at 5 a.m. near Starbucks.

The manager, who called, wanted it logged and would call back if the leaf blower returned.

Police explained the man was blowing leaves in the parking lot before the stores opened in preparation for a street sweeper to clean up the lot. The leaf blowing was purposely being conducted when the shops were not open, Chief Hussey said.

Playground

A man who was reported as being suspicious had pulled into the parking lot by the playground behind the library to make a cell phone call, police said. Police talked to the man and was sent on his way. The caller was concerned that the man was acting strangely and there were children around. The call came in at 1:08 p.m. last Wednesday (April 9).

Ball field

Police gave a man a ride who was asking people for a ride at the Beechwood Ballpark.

A caller provided police with a description of the man who was described as "unshaven" and the fact that he was asking people for a ride last Thursday (April 10) at just past 10 a.m.

As it turned out, the man had lost his license due to an unrelated incident.

Filed with DSS

Police filed a report dubbed a 51-A with the Department of Social Services (DSS) after finding an unsupervised preschooler.

A caller reported that a boy who appeared to be 3 or 4 "wandering the streets alone." The caller did not recognize the boy.

Police returned the youngster to his babysitter. They filed the 51-A and DSS will conduct a review, Chief Hussey said. He said the boy's parents were aware of the situation.

MVs tagged

Police ask that motorists respect the time limits on parking in the village. Last week several cars were tagged after parking outside Tedeschi's for longer than the 15 minutes allowed.

"Make sure to pay attention to the signs," Chief Hussey said. He added that spaces have to be available for the local businesses.

Outboard motor

Police are investigating the apparent theft of an outboard motor from a home on Lamberts Lane.

The victim believes the motor was stolen sometime over the weekend of April 5-6 and reported it when he discovered it was missing on the morning of April 7.

Air rifle

Police confiscated an air rifle from a group of youths last week after reports of a BB gun being fired in the Grace Drive area. Chief Hussey said police believe the it was an air rifle not a BB gun and the youths could have been firing it at objects and people. No crime was committed but police did take the air rifle, he said.

BRIEFLY

Flynn reelected school board chairman

For the fourth time in his tenure on the School Committee and second consecutive year, Rick Flynn was named to the position of chairman.

Reorganizing the School Committee was the first order of business at their Wednesday night meeting. In addition to the chairman, a vice chairman and secretary were named.

Alfred Slanetz nominated Rick Flynn for Chairman, Adrienne MacCarthy seconded the motion, no additional nominations came forward, and Flynn received a unanimous vote.

"I wasn't sure if I was ready to do this again, but it's great to have a group that's moving forward," said Flynn. "This past year has been a lot more enjoyable for me. It's been a collaborative process and hopefully we can keep that going. Hopefully, we're all in this together."

He cited the committee's collaboration with the Selectmen, Advisory Committee and other town boards with the budget.

For vice chair, two nominations came forward: Lucia Flibotte nominated Adrienne MacCarthy and Steve Fusco nominated re-elected member Alfred Slanetz. Flynn seconded both nominations. Alfred Slanetz was appointed to vice chair in a 3-2 vote, with Fusco, Flynn and Slanetz voting in favor.

Lastly, Fusco was nominated to the position of secretary in a unanimous vote.

Sub-committee appointments will be discussed at the next School Committee meeting.

Local Teachers Get Free Books

By Abby Adler

Attention educators! Tired of budget cuts or endless reduced resources? There may be an end to your problems. There is now an easy and rewarding way to get free books for you and your classroom, while raising money for your school in the process.

Local organization Got Books is dedicated to finding new purposes for used books. They collect book donations through their free residential pick-up service and through their more than 225 book donation drop-off containers. With these items, they are able to donate books to groups in need, send books to local troops overseas, and help raise money for nonprofits.

They are also able to offer a fundraising program through the placement of book donation containers. Simply put, they place a container at your school which is there to receive books, CDs, DVDs, videos, and audio books from the public. Your school or group gets paid when you fill up, but raising money isn't the only incentive for implementing this program; when a container gets placed at your school, every faculty member will receive a voucher which entitles them to get free books for their classrooms.

This fundraising program is easy to start and maintain. No costs are ever incurred by the school or group and it also works great for churches, temples, nonprofit and charity groups and others. If you'd like to learn more about the fundraising program or donating books, contact Got Books at 978-664-3536 or visit them online at www.GotBooks.com.

No alternatives for staging area

Resident raises safety and procurement issues

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

With the weather getting warmer and construction work gearing up to its prime season, no other project in town is more prominent that the ongoing Little Harbor water and sewer project.

None of the issues surrounding the $15.2 million project has been more often discussed in Town Hall than the staging area located on Jerusalem Road. The issue was again re-visited at Monday night's Selectmen's meeting.

Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt and Sewer Commissioner John Beck reported that they have looked at other alternatives for the staging area, but have found none as appropriate or feasible as what is currently being used. However, residents and abutters to the staging area, Paula Becker and James Mahar of 185 Jerusalem Road, renewed their safety, due process and communication concerns about the staging area to the Selectmen.

Pratt went through a long list of sites looked at for the staging area — from the Avalon property on Route 3A to Wheelwright Park to land behind the library to conservation land throughout town. He explained nearly each one had its own set of obstacles and drawbacks.

"We are convinced the yard we have is the best one out there," said Pratt.

"The keys to this project is foremost to be done safely, on time to meet the state's second amended judgment and on budget," Beck said. "It's important to recognize the cost to move of the staging area would come out of the pocket of the homes benefiting from the project and the water users."

If the staging area were relocating Beck estimated an additional $150,000 to $200,000 would be added to the project cost and might delay the completion of the project up to six months. The current schedule has the project completing in August 2009.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the site did need some cosmetic adjustments, such as a fence you can't see through and removal of unnecessary materials.

"It's important to recognize the cost to move of the staging area would come out of the pocket of the homes benefiting from the project and the water users."

— John Beck, Sewer Commission

"You can do an awful lot to make it a better site," said Dormitzer.

Beck said he was willing to work with residents to make appropriate visual improvements to the staging area.

Becker's issues with the staging area went beyond additional fencing or paint on the trailers, "there aren't enough trees to hide those trucks," she said.

She raised issues of safety, procurement laws, conflicts of interest and due process.

At a Selectmen's meeting in March, there were questions as to whether the town had violated the state procurement laws (Chapter 30B) in its use of the private property as the project's staging area. It was the opinion of the Inspector General the town had violated the law. Under Chapter 30B, or the Uniform Procurement Act, procedures for local governments to use in contracting for supplies, services, and real property are outlined.

Since then, Town Manager Bill Griffin said it was Town Counsel's opinion that they had taken appropriate steps since then to remedy the problem.

The creation of a "memorandum of agreement," a document signed by the town, the contractor and the property owners, Leonora and Leland Jenkins of 198 Jerusalem Road, to clearly establish and clarify the town's control over the site put the town out of compliance with the procurement because it changed a less formal "license agreement" into a lease agreement, which is subject to the procurement laws.

In order to comply with the state procurement laws (chapter 30B), Griffin said the Jenkinses have granted the town a temporary construction easement to operate and maintain the staging area. The contractor, LM Holdings, has a license agreement with the Jenkinses to use the property for their staging area. With the easement granted, the memorandum of agreement has been eliminated.

"By securing the temporary construction easement and eliminating the memorandum of agreement, it is Town Counsel's opinion that the procurement rules of Chapter 30B are not applicable," said Griffin in an e-mail. The temporary construction easement gives the town control over the site while it is being used a staging area, Griffin said.

Becker said she has been picking up litter along Nichols Road on the weekend and has found an increasing amount of alcohol nip bottles along the way. She believes the bottles belonged to construction workers working on the street. Becker brought in a package of trash she collected over the past weekend as an example.

Selectman Fred Koed requested Griffin to bring the issue and the trash to the attention of the police department to be investigated.

"If there is any proof any of the construction workers were drinking on the job, they will be fired immediately," said Beck.

After bringing forth her concerns with the staging area, the Selectmen had little solace to offer Becker.

"Nobody likes to do these projects, but it has to be done," said Koed.

"We will take all your comments under advisement," said Carr.

When reached by phone this week, Becker would not comment on if she plans to pursue the issue further. She has already appealed to the Zoning Board of Appeals; her appeal was denied.

Sawchuk to recuse himself from staging area discussions

Resident and abutter to the staging area, Paula Becker of 185 Jerusalem Road raised an issue with what she believed is a conflict of interest with newly elected Sewer Commissioner Wayne Sawchuk.

Last year, Sawchuk served as the Jenkinses' agent and signed the license agreement between LM Holding and Jenkins. He aided LM Holdings in finding a site for the staging area, a requirement of contractor's contract with the town. Sawchuk said he looked at more than a dozen locations before the Jenkinses' property was chosen.

In addition, his name appears on the signature page of agreement, which allowed LM Holdings to use the property as a staging area for the Little Harbor water and sewer project. Sawchuk said he signed the contract because the Jenkinses were in California at the time.

"I had 100 percent of the town's interest at heart," when he aided LM Holdings in locating a suitable staging area said Sawchuk in a phone interview. "I felt like I did an absolutely terrific job in coming up with something that was good for everybody…It's nice not to have a yard anywhere but it has to be somewhere," Sawchuk said.

Becker was upset Sawchuk did not disclose that fact while he was running for election.

However, Sawchuk said he did disclose his involvement in locating the staging area in his appearance on "Our Town," at a Board of Selectmen meeting and a ZBA hearing on the staging area.

Sawchuk said he would recuse himself from all discussions regarding the Little Harbor project staging area going forward.

$160K in chapter 90 funds

Town Manager Bill Griffin reported Cohasset has received $160,080 in Chapter 90 funding from the state for fiscal 2009. Chapter 90 is the state program for road and sidewalk maintenance improvements. Statewide the chapter 90 local transportation aid will be $150 million.

Griffin said the town's share was more than usual, but in the typical range of allocations. Cohasset routinely received between $140,000 and $160,000 in chapter 90 state aid.

AROUND TOWN

SPRING BREAK

Hello Cohasset. Vacation time has arrived for so many children and because of this, so many adults have vacation time as well. Whether you are hanging around and enjoying our town and day trips or, you are traveling afar, please have a wonderful, safe and happy week. Also, please send any pictures or stories of your vacation that would be fun to share in the column. Anyone who is running in the Marathon on Monday, we wish you great luck from all of us here in town.

RUN FOR RESEARCH

Muscular dystrophy, cystic fibrosis and cerebral palsy affect adults and children, sometimes with horrible results. Neurofibromatosis, a little-known genetic disorder that, surprisingly, is more common that muscular dystrophy and cystic fibrosis combined, can be equally devastating. Melissa Curley Barrett of Cohasset, formerly of Hanover, is all too familiar with NF, and that is why she is running this year's Boston Marathon on April 21. She's helping to raise funds for Neurofibromatosis Inc., Northeast, a charity that is in its 20th year on their mission to find the cure and treatment for this disorder.

Neurofibromatosis is a neurological genetic disorder that causes tumors to form on the nerves anywhere in or on the body at any time. NF affects more than 100,000 people in the United States, can be disfiguring and can result not only in deformity, but deafness, blindness, brain tumors, cancer and death. The mission of NF Inc. is to find a cure and treatment for neurofibromatosis by promoting scientific research, creating awareness and providing hope and support to those who are affected by NF.

Melissa's son, Gaeb, now age 5, was diagnosed with NF two years ago. "We've been fortunate so far," she said, "and Gaeb has only suffered some of the more minor complications. That's the hardest and scariest part of NF: never knowing when to worry, never knowing what is lurking inside his body." Melissa will join 12 others running for NF, including her friends, Barbara Wipf and Marlo Hayes, and cousin, Kelli Pompeo. "I'm just a mom who loves her little guy more than words can say," Melissa said, "and if our running is one small link in the chain that cures this thing, then we'll do it."

Proceeds from their Boston Marathon fundraising endeavors will benefit the Center for NF and Allied Disorders at Mass General Hospital as well as the NF clinics there and at Children's Hospital. In addition, funds will be used to support NF Inc. Northeast public awareness campaign and send children with NF to a special camp this summer.

'QUILTS IN BLOOM'

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset has been busy planning and participating in several events this spring. On Tuesday, April 22, the annual President's Day meeting will be held at 11:30 a.m. in the Parish House at Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church. This year's event which will feature a luncheon and the program, "Quilts In Bloom," presented by floral designer and gardening consultant, Robin Murphy. Robin will create beautiful floral interpretations of quilts and patchwork. The presidents of the South Shore District Garden Clubs will attend as special guests. All members are invited. Please note the time change.

On April 1st, a luncheon was hosted at the home of Community Garden Club President, Mary Eisenhaure, to welcome the following new members to the club: Helen Arnold, Diane Benson, Joan Brown, Barbara Canney, Diane Dutton, Carol Graham, Jennifer Joyce, Elizabeth Morse, Anne Sexton, and Mary Ward. The club looks forward to working with them.

The Community Garden Club will present "Books and Blooms" on Wednesday, May 7, from 10a.m. to 5p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Garden club members will interpret a book of their own selection through arrangements of flowers and fresh plant material. This is not a standard flower show as it will not be judged according to National and Federation rules. Instead, the public will have the opportunity to select the winners in different categories such as the most beautiful, the most creative, and the most whimsical. The show is a unique opportunity for all members to display their creative talents without being judged. This event will be free and open to the public. Please plan to come and enjoy!

The Junior Gardeners are also preparing for the upcoming Books in Bloom flower show. At their March meeting, Club member Pat Cammett led a stimulating program brainstorming for the show. Pat brought several children's books and explained ways to use plant materials to convey story lines and characters. The students then completed an innovative project on a styrofoam base using oasis, moss, flowers and props that were provided. At their April meeting, Fran O'Toole taught the children the basics of Ikebana.

Lastly, please save the date for the club's annual Plant Sale which will take place on Saturday, May 17, on the grounds of the Cohasset Historical Society from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is a member of The National Garden Clubs, Inc. and The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc.

Cohasset family shines at Conservatory's Performathon

Saturday, April 5th, was a festive day at the Barnes & Nobles located at Derby Street Shoppes in Hingham. Barnes & Nobles, in concert with the South Shore Conservatory, hosted the second annual "Performathon," which raises money for the Conservatory's Scholarship Fund. "Performathon" is a performance marathon that offers Conservatory students the opportunity to hone their performing skills in a public venue, while soliciting funds for musical education.

The Herzfelder family certainly did their part, with dad Bruce singing and playing the piano, and daughter Julia and son Desmond both performing piano pieces.

South Shore Conservatory President Kathy Czerny sees Barnes & Noble as an exciting venue for the Conservatory's students. "We are very grateful to Barnes & Noble for providing a wonderful public performance space. It is a fine opportunity for our hard-working students to have an occasion to showcase their talents in a public setting."

The event drew more than 200 performers from across the South Shore.

ACS Key Gala helps 'Open the Door to Hope'

The American Cancer Society hosted its 3rd annual Key Gala, "Open the Door to Hope" on April 12th in the Grand Ballroom of the Fairmont Copley Plaza Hotel. Special guests included emcee Gail Huff of WCVB-TV/DT Channel 5 and Chris Lemmon, actor and author of "A Twist of Lemmon", a tribute to his late father, Jack Lemmon. Chris lost both of his parents to cancer and he and his wife, Gina (who live in Glastonbury, Conn.) have become ardent supporters and ambassadors for the A.C.S. New England.

Presented by Cushman and Wakefield, the Key Gala raised nearly $500,000 with all proceeds to benefit construction costs and ongoing operational expenses of the AstraZeneca Hope Lodge Center in Boston, a program of the American Cancer Society. Located at 125 South Huntington Avenue, when the Lodge opens in the fall of 2008, it will annually provide free lodging and support services to more than 1,500 cancer outpatients and their caregivers who must travel far from home for treatment in Boston.

Cohasset resident takes on puppy mills

politically correct way of saying pets, like dogs and cats.

After her experience at Docktor Pet Centers, Howard almost immediately began to take action. She brought the story to "20/20" and gathered video and document evidence to expose the horrific conditions. After the "20/20" special, numerous protests and feature articles in national magazines, Docktor Pet Centers declared bankruptcy in 1993.

But, Howard's work didn't stop there. Since becoming a non-profit in 1992, CAPS has investigated over 1000 pet shops and puppy mills. Investigators work undercover to gather evidence to bring forward to state and federal legislatures who are supposed to be overseeing the industry.

Puppy mills fall under the US Department of Agriculture (USDA) and although Howard says regulation is in the books, the laws are not being enforced. Sometimes CAPS investigators collect evidence of numerous violations — days after a federal inspection issues a report listing no violations.

"There needs to be a lot more USDA oversight. If they were really doing their job, a lot of puppy mills would not exist," she says. Even when violations are found, Howard says there is very little follow up or consequence and the site can continue to operate as it is.

"Our specialty is investigation, we have outstanding undercover agents," says Howard. Bringing to light the existing situation and educating the public is one of the key components of CAPS efforts.

Howard says pet stores bank on the impulse buyers who are drawn in by the adorable puppies on display. Pet stores typically do not ask questions about the buyer's home environment to determine if the home is appropriate for raising a puppy. Educating the public to know about the background about pet shops before they go into a pet store is essential. Through their websites (www.caps-web.org, www.caps2point0.org), educational materials, media relations, legislative involvement, consumer assistance, CAPS is constantly battling the pet shop industry.

Howard says there is a growing number of young people, sometimes still in college, buying puppies from pet stores. Even more disturbing, she says is the birth of "designer dogs," basically what she describes as mixed-breed dogs.

"It breaks my heart to know dogs are being thought of as fashion items," says Howard. "Dogs should be a member of the family and be provided with a good life, it should not be there because the owner wants to make a fashion statement."

Every year more than a half-million purebred puppies, destined for pet shops across the United States and Canada are born in crowded and usually squalid conditions at Midwest, New York and Pennsylvania puppy mills, says Howard.

"A puppy mill could be a clean facility (most are not), but it is still a commercial livestock operation. they are not raising dogs in the warmth of a home," says Howard.

After years of fighting the puppy mill industry, Howard says a new facet to the same problem has cropped up — the internet breeder.

"Now, a lot of what we are seeing is internet sales," says Howard, buyers are purchasing puppies sight unseen from an internet website. Many internet breeders are the same puppy mills pet shops get their dogs from. Other internet breeders are completely unregulated and the buyer has very little recourse if the dog arrives sick or later develops health problems, says Howard.

Foremost, Howard says people need to stop buying dogs from pet stores or online and educate everyone they know about puppy mills and pet stores.

"Don't buy a pet store dog, go to a shelter. Go to www.petfinder.com. It's doesn't make a lot of sense to buy a dog when there are millions of unwanted dogs and cats in shelters," says Howard, who has four dogs and two cats, all rescue animals. "Rescue animals make wonderful pets."

In addition, as a non-profit CAPS constantly needs financial assistance. "It's not cheap doing investigations," says Howard, from equipment to travel expenses. Often, CAPS rescues puppy mill dogs as well and incurs veterinary expenses.

People can become a member of CAPS, currently there are 4100 CAPS members nationwide.

College student to bike across country

of the world is living.

"When I came back I realized I didn't even know my own country," she says. "I'm excited to meet people along the way, cross states I've never been to and see how other people in the US live."

This summer, seven groups of about 30 riders will set off from the east coast to raise awareness, funds and community spirit for affordable housing.

Each member of the team is coming to the program from different directions: some are avid cyclists, some are passionate about affordable housing, and others were drawn to the idea of a cross-country trip by bike. All Bike & Build participants are between the ages of 18 and 25 and most are recent college grads or students.

With little cycling experience when she signed up for Bike and Build in the late fall, Noble has been building up her training in order to withstand the grueling physical aspects of the trip. During the week, she gets out for "shorter" 20 to 30 mile ride with longer rides on the weekend. She mixes up her training with running workouts.

"It's been a learning process, but I love it," says Noble. She's joined the cycling team and has been join Through her bike rides, she says she's gotten to see parts of Connecticut near campus she otherwise would have never explored — and that is only a taste of what she will see on the cross-country trek.

After a two-day orientation followed by a Build Day in Providence, the 30-person group will head west from the shores of the Atlantic, across Connecticut, and over the hills of New York and Pennsylvania. Then it's across the Midwest and the cornfields of Iowa and Nebraska to the old frontier towns of Wyoming. They'll spend two days in Jackson, Wyo. before riding north along the Rocky Range, and west across the North Cascades to Seattle.

There will be nine days of helping to build homes and the team will get just three days off during the nine week trip.

"The physical toll this will take on us will be trying. There are periods when there are six, seven days of cycling in a row. I'm not looking forward to the Rockies," she says. "I know (the trip) is not going to be simple."

The daily routine begins early in the morning. The group meets together to get directions for the day's trip. Each rider can go at his or her own speed, stopping at points of interest as long as they arrive at the designated destination by 4p.m.

The group will bunk up together at different places along the route typically taking advantage of the hospitality of a church or community center. Each night a member of the group will give a presentation on affordable housing to the community. Once a week they take a break from cycling to work on an affordable housing project.

"We work on physical homes and build awareness about affordable housing issues," says Noble. Her interest in service and travel was born out of her two trips with the Appalachia Service Project.

"I didn't have to leave the country, but it felt like I was in a while other world," says Noble of her ASP trips. She looks at Bike & Build as an extension on that idea — seeing how other people live and giving back along the way.

Noble is a government major who has focused on international studies, particularly international children's rights. She says her interest in being an international volunteer always goes back to her involvement with ASP. Noble is extremely interested in international community care systems, particularly in impoverished areas of the world. Dedicated to helping others, next March she will embark on an even bigger trip, this time around the world. She plans to travel and volunteer for several months on three different continents: South America, Southeast Asia and Africa.

Bike Across America fundraiser

As part of Bike & Build, each rider is required to raise at least $4000 to participate — a daunting number for any college student. The majority of the proceeds will fund a student-built Habitat for Humanity home in Providence. The remainder will be distributed through the grants program where riders will review grants submitted to Bike & Build and decide which ones are the most deserving.

To jump start Noble's fundraising, a spinning fundraiser will be held at USA Fitness on Route 3A on Saturday, May 10 from 9a.m. to 3p.m. With Noble at school, Cohasset resident and family friend Susan Franklin has been organizing the fundraiser details.

A relay event of sorts, 10 teams of six will be spin for six hours with a spinning instructor leading each hour. One member of the team is required to be on the bike at all times. Each team will be assigned a certain portion of Noble's cross-country trip and is encouraged to match each mile with a dollar donation.

Prizes will be given every hour and there will be plenty of motivation during the course of the day, Noble says.

"It's a fun way to help get her off the ground," says Franklin. "She a very focused young person who has dedicated a lot of time to service. This is just another thing she is trying to do to help the world around her…She's an impressive young lady."

Cohasset Sports Partnership launches its got turf? Campaign

Along with election signs and Cohasset Road Race signs, Cohasset residents may have noticed green "got turf?" signs popping up all over town two weeks ago. This marked the kick-off of the newly formed Cohasset Sports Partnership's got turf? campaign, a fundraising effort to bring a turf field to Cohasset Middle High School. The Cohasset Sports Parntership's mission is to improve and maintain Cohasset's athletic facilities and programs and is affiliated with the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund.

The Cohasset Sports Partnership (CSP) held a kick-off event at Atlantica on a recent Saturday night where 150 interested people gathered to hear CSP President, George McGoldrick, along with CSP Vice President, Bill Cavanaro, unveil the first major project of building a turf field in Cohasset. A new synthetic turf field has been proposed by the School Committee and the CSP is seeking to supplement the funding of the field. (Money for the project would not come out of the school budget, see news brief on page 2).

Coaches from most high school varsity teams that play field sports also spoke about the many benefits of turf fields ranging from injury prevention, not having to reschedule games due to rain outs, field longevity, and lower maintenance costs. Also featured as a speaker was Weymouth's long time Athletic Director, Bob Donovan, who oversaw a turf field installation at Weymouth High. He talked about the many benefits it has yielded the town.

Cohasset High Varsity and JV boys and girls lacrosse teams were to hold their annual Spirit Day on Saturday hosting four games. They were all cancelled due to poor field conditions from the previous day's rain. Spirit Day would not have been cancelled with a turf field!

The CSP hopes to raise a portion of the funds for the field through private donations, grants and sponsorships.

Stop & Shop program supports Wellspring

Stop & Shop in Cohasset, through their "Feed the Need" program, donated $3,000.00 to Wellspring Multi-Service Center's Food Pantry. Wellspring's Food Pantry has increased its services and now provides food and basic supplies to over 250 people each month. Several years ago, the Food Pantry moved into dedicated space allowing for greater storage and the opportunity to provide evening hours for working clients. At the same time Wellspring created a transportation program that delivers clients to the pantry and returns them home with their groceries. Contributions from businesses such as the Stop & Shop in Cohasset have enabled Wellspring's Food Pantry to offer these additional services and feed the hungry in our community.

Executive Director Vinny Harte met with Marty Sharpe, and in thanking her said "Marty and Cohasset's Stop & Shop, represent the best of area businesses willing to take the time and make a vital commitment to certain members of our community. We remain grateful to Marty and to Stop & Shop for their generosity and for enabling us to extend a hand and provide food to families and individuals who need this help."

Pratt files Open Meeting Law complaint

Although a meeting with the Army Corps of Engineers that would have included two selectmen has been cancelled, Peter Pratt has not withdrawn the Open Meeting Law complaint he filed on April 9 with District Attorney William Keating's Office.

Pratt, who believes that two selectmen constitute a subcommittee and therefore a meeting must be held in public unless it falls under exceptions allowed for executive sessions, said he received a call from Assistant District Attorney Alexi Moscow last Friday saying the office would move ahead with the complaint.

In a telephone interview, Pratt said the DA's office accepted his argument that "irrespective of the cancellation of the meeting that selectmen and other governmental bodies in town had to finally be instructed what selectmen had proposed is fully illegal under the law.

"It is my personal opinion that the magnitude to which the Treat's Pond matter has routinely violated the Open Meeting Law and public ethics laws at the state and federal level – I applaud the fact the Bill Keating's Office is moving ahead with the Open Meeting Law complaint."

He explained that the DA's office asked if he wanted to withdraw the complaint and called back "a day and half later" to say they had looked at the matter and would proceed.

Pratt said the Treat's Pond issue has "suffered from lack of public oversight for the past four years."

Pratt, who is a former member of the Planning Board and former selectman, described himself as having a reputation in town both as an environmentalist and defender of Cohasset Harbor.

Bark-a-thon event at Wompatuck State Park

A walk in Wompatuck State Park to benefit the local animal shelter will take place from 9 a.m. to noon, on Sunday, May 18. The walk begins and ends in the parking lot outside the Visitors Center Common Room at the Wompatuck State Park entrance off Union Street in Hingham.

How can people help: Get one or more sponsors, collect a donation in any amount and bring one's dog – real or imagined – to Wompatuck State Park the morning of May 18 and take one of several trails through the park and meet back in the parking lot for prizes refreshments and fun.

How can companies help: Just make a donation in any amount or donate goods or services that can be given out as prizes or help in the care of the animals at the animal shelter. Company information will be posted during the event on the Wall of Fame.

The shelter serves the five towns of Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Norwell on an as-needed basis. It is a nonprofit, tax-exempt organization dedicated to the welfare of companion animals. The mission is to rescue abandoned, homeless animals and give them proper care, love and attention. The shelter is a no-kill facility.

The event organizer, William Hall, a junior at Hingham High School, is an avid animal lover. His dog, a 3-year-old terrier mix named Princes Leia, was adopted at the shelter, and he has a pet sitting business that he has operated for several years in his spare time. With the help of the local students his family and friends, he hopes to make "Bark a thon 2008" even more successful than the last two years.

For information, contact Hall by email at william@gailhall.com or call 781 749 4492. Donations can also be sent to Friends of Scituate Animal Shelter, P.O. Box 823, Scituate MA 02066. Note Bark-a-thon 2008 on checks.

Treat's Pond and flood control will be vetted publicly

Griffin confirmed the meeting has since been cancelled andw on Monday night requested the Selectmen to provide guidance on how to proceed with the Treat's Pond project.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr said a private citizen had initiated the meeting while the Board of Selectmen was in transition between Town Meeting and town election.

Following the canceling of the proposed meeting, Griffin said he has told the Army Corps of Engineers' project lead David Larsen that when the town is ready to talk, he would call Larsen and set up a public meeting.

Selectman Karen Quigley said an issue had been raised with her on whether the Treat's Pond restoration project was under town or private control. With some discussion, the Board made clear the potential of the Treat's Pond project was under town control and would involve public meetings to thoroughly vet the town's involvement in the project before fall special Town Meeting.

Accordingly, Griffin said he would be the town contact for Army Corps going forward. But, he admitted the Army Corps could remain in contact with private citizens.

"People have been saying to me if the town is looking for public money, they need to bring the discussion into the public eye."
— Selectman Karen Quigley

"How (the Army Corps) interacts with private citizens is not my call," said Griffin.

How to move forward with addressing both the Treat's Pond project and the several flood issues plaguing neighborhoods was discussed.

Quigley suggested a future meeting on Treat's Pond include members from other town committees. She said the one of the main reason the Treat's Pond project failed at Town Meeting as residents were not well informed of the project.

"People have been saying to me if the town is looking for public money, they need to bring the discussion into the public eye," said Quigley in a phone interview, adding many have expressed to her they felt the project was done behind the scenes in private meetings. "No one really felt they knew what was going on."

Quigley said committees like the Advisory Committee and the Capital Budget Committee should be included in the discussion to ensure they can make sound recommendations come fall Town Meeting.

For Selectman Fred Koed, he suggested a general flood meeting would be beneficial.

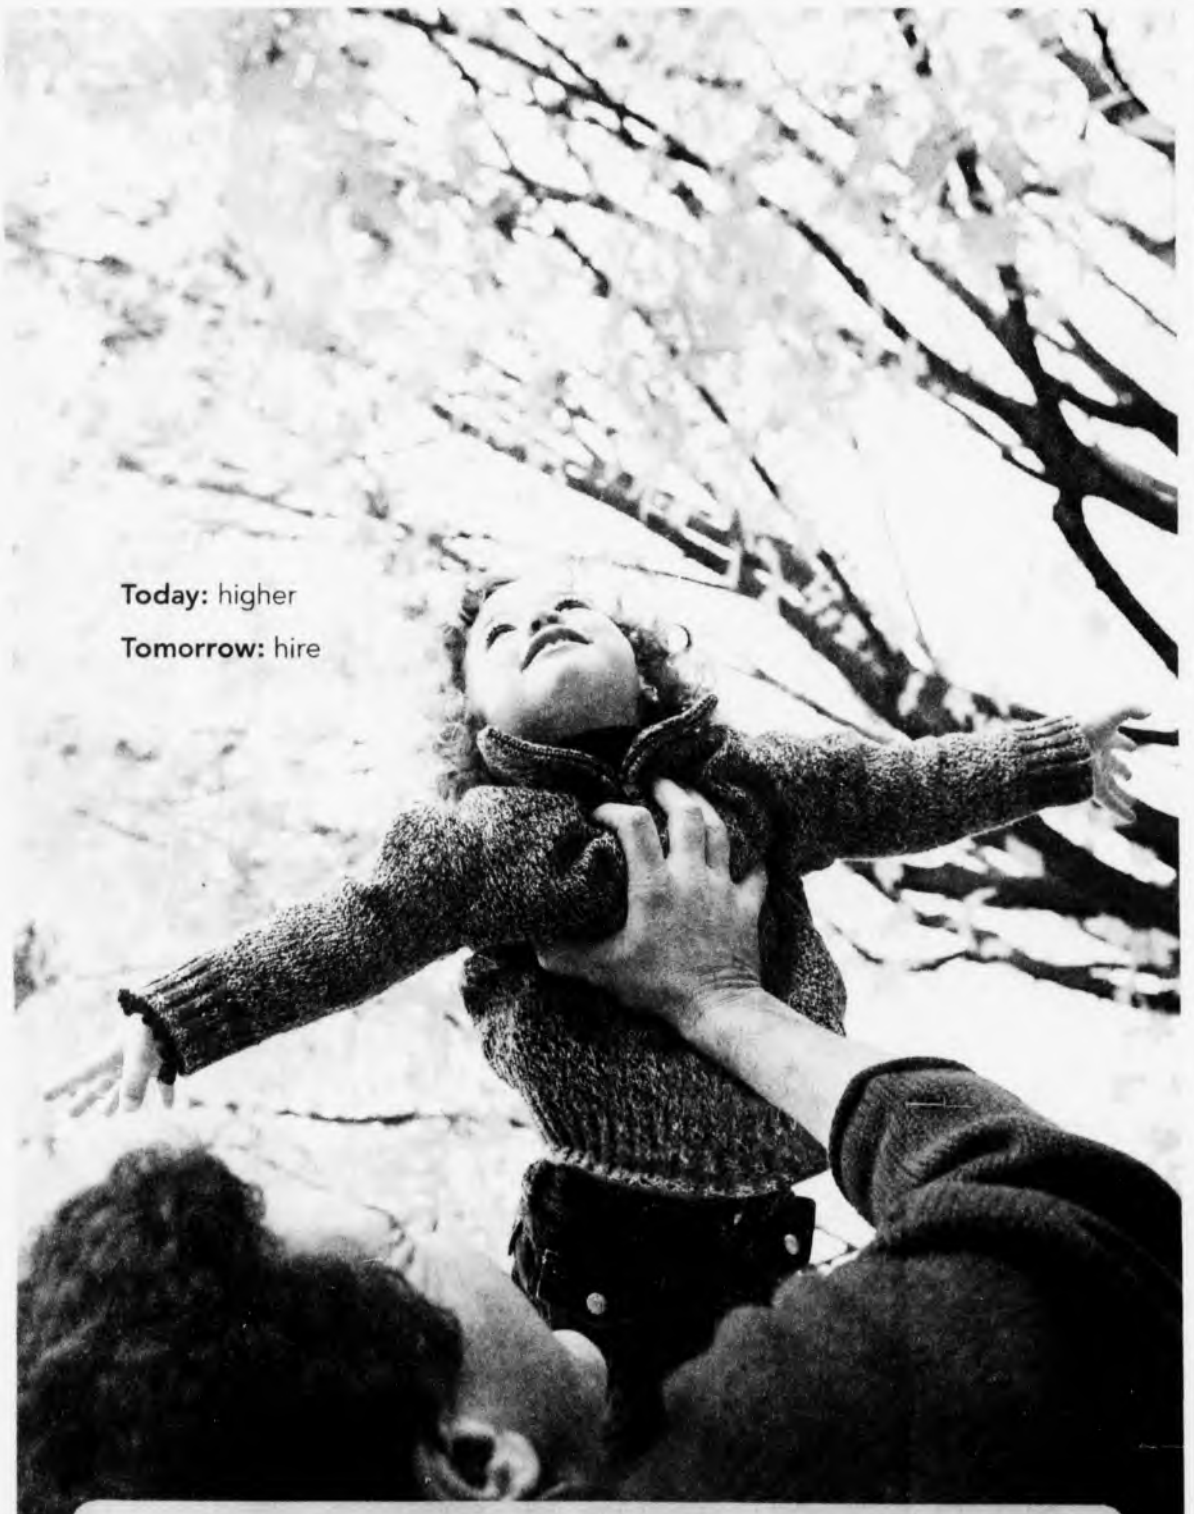
"I think we need to create a dialogue with people and make sure we are addressing the issues comprehensively," said Koed. "I think we should carve out some time to devote to (the issue). I think there is a lot of interest…it's a hot button item."

The consensus of the Selectmen was to include all interested parties from residents affected by flooding to town committee members to interested citizens to a meeting where issues could be addressed comprehensively.

When reached by phone, Koed said he wanted to ensure the process to address flooding needed to be done in a comprehensive fashion to ensure a fix in one area does not negatively affect another.

No clear steps were outlined on how the town will proceed specifically with Treat's Pond saltmarsh restoration project, except whatever steps would be taken would be open and transparent.

Flood Control Master Plan update



Dan Coughlin of Coughlin Environmental Services offered an update on the ongoing flood control master plan at Monday night's Board of Selectmen meeting. The engineering study is taking an in-depth look at the flood prone areas of town: Jacob's Meadow, Atlantic Avenue and other smaller areas, like Rattlesnake Run. The town-wide study, as described in the Request for Proposals for the project, would develop a conceptual, phased drainage master plan that the town can implement over the next few years, the exact schedule depending on the pace of funding. A detailed engineering design of each phase is not part of the present scope; instead, it will be done at a later time as the master plan is implemented.

Coughlin said he plans to have several public meetings leading up to the completion of flood control master plan. A preliminary interim reports are currently available on the town's website (www.townofcohasset.org).

The first meeting to be held in mid-May will focus solely on the Jacob's Meadow/James Brook watershed. In June, a session concerning the Treat's Pond/Atlantic Ave. area will be held. An analysis of the Army Corps' proposed project for Treat's Pond is not included in the purview of the flood control master plan, but separate flood control remediation is.

In July, Coughlin expects the draft flood control master plan will be available and a public meeting will be held for it. Finally, the final draft will be available in mid-August to allow for review before the fall's special Town Meeting.

Neighbors as well as interested citizens are encouraged to attend to provide input and relay information the engineers may not be available, said Coughlin.

College will be here before you know it.

Instead, the public will have the opportunity to select the winners in different categories such as the most beautiful, the most creative, and the most whimsical. The show is a unique opportunity for all members to display their creative talents without being judged. This event will be free and open to the public. Please plan to come and enjoy!

The Junior Gardeners are also preparing for the upcoming Books in Bloom flower show. At their March meeting, Club member Pat Cammett led a stimulating program brainstorming for the show. Pat brought several children's books and explained ways to use plant materials to convey story lines and characters. The students then completed an innovative project on a styrofoam base using oasis, moss, flowers and props that were provided. At their April meeting, Fran O'Toole taught the children the basics of Ikebana.

Please save the date for the club's annual Plant Sale that will take place on Saturday, May 17, on the grounds of the Cohasset Historical Society from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is a member of The National Garden Clubs, Inc. and The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc.

Cowboy Music

Skip Gorman plays the simple, yet beautifully poignant music that was performed around campfires by cowboys and westward settlers in the nineteenth century. Come hear him perform at the Old Ship Coffeehouse off the Square on Saturday, April 19 at 8 p.m. The concert begins with an open mike at 8 p.m. Beverages and desserts are fifty cents. Net proceeds benefit the Unitarian-Universalist Service Committee.

Gorman has performed on Garrison Keillor's 'A Prairie Home Companion' and at bluegrass festivals and cowboy gatherings. He frequently presents programs and concerts at schools and museums dressed in authentic cowboy garb while playing period instruments.

The Coffeehouse off the Square is at the Old Ship Church Parish Hall, 107 Main St., in Hingham Square just up from the Loring Hall Theater. Admission is $10 at the door (sorry, no reservations.) For information or to volunteer (for free admission) call 781-749-1767 or visit www.skipgorman.com.

OPINION

Three steps to a better world

Step one is awareness.

Earth Day, first celebrated in 1970, has certainly gone a long way in bringing environmental concerns to the mainstream. As we get ready to celebrate another Earth Day on Tuesday, April 22, people are certainly aware of some of the basic things that need to be done to protect the environment, such as cutting down on pollution, recycling and reducing trash, and conserving energy and water. In recent years, the "green" movement has focused more and more on the Earth's climate and the phenomenon known as Global Warming.

The second step is understanding. Knowing the issues is one thing. Understanding the cause and effect and the science behind it is becoming increasingly important as we try to wrap our arms around such a big issue.

In its simplest terms, we can look at what's happening around the world to see how the climate is changing dramatically before our very eyes. Glaciers are melting at an alarming rate, storms are becoming more ferocious and devastating, and the changes in the climate are driving plant and animal species to extinction. The scientific data is compelling to say the least, and if you believe what Al Gore is saying in his documentary, "An Inconvenient Truth," the science has been around for a long time and people are just beginning to take notice.

And that leads to the final step — action.

Around the globe, from coast to coast, and in your own backyard, action is on the rise. From the recycling efforts of elementary school children, to families who have taken the use of alternative energy sources to new heights by installing wind turbines in their yards or solar panels on their roofs, there are examples of green living all around us.

Conservation groups are teaming up to preserve and protect open space and waterways throughout Massachusetts and voters in cities and towns are showing support for environmental initiatives by adopting and supporting the Community Preservation Act.

Area businesses, universities and developers are thinking green when they build new offices, dormitories and housing subdivisions. Our supermarkets are devoting aisles and entire sections to organic products - everything from produce and frozen pizza to household cleaners.

We can all do our part to keep this green movement going forward — and small efforts count. Installing more energy efficient appliances and replacing burned out incandescent light bulbs with the new Energy Star CLFs (compact fluorescent light bulbs) is a great start, and the give back is savings on your utility bills. Throwing less in the trash and more in the recycling bin is another easy way to join the movement.

These issues and challenges are bigger than any of us individually. Collectively, though, we can make a difference. Earth Day is a good time to start if you haven't, but the effort needs to take place more than one day a year and involve more than picking up trash or recycling a water bottle. We need to take action each and every day. It has taken us a relatively long time to get to this point and we won't be able to fix things overnight. It will take time, but it's time for all of us to be part of the solution.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thank you Cohasset

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Cohasset Rotary Club, I would like to thank all those who helped make the 32nd Cohasset Road Race by the Sea such a wonderful event. From the Rotary Club members who put in many hours of effort, to the volunteers who help in so many ways on race day, the various local businesses that helped sponsor the race T-shirts, the Armstrong Brothers Band and their accomplished guitar and vocal students Ana Buckley, Colby Smalzel and Thomas Buckley who wowed the runners and spectators with the after race entertainment, the Cohasset Public Works Department, the Water Department and the contractors working on Atlantic Avenue and Jerusalem Road for all their efforts to make the roads usable for a road race, the Police Department for their assistance in keeping the roads safe for the runners during the race, and most especially the many citizens of Cohasset who turned out to cheer on the runners and offer their encouragement and support.

We had a record 1,258 runners registered for this year's event and well over 250 walkers participating in the fourth Fran Coffey Memorial Fun Walk Sunday morning. And we heard over and over again how pleased the runners were to see the many residents who lined the course and finish area to cheer on the runners as they traveled the 6.2-mile course through our beautiful community.

The Cohasset Rotary Club is proud to put on this event to help continue our efforts of "service above self" in supporting both local efforts like the Rotary scholarships presented each year, to helping with the fight against Polio throughout the world, to support of local homeless shelters, clean water in the Philippines and on and on, and we could not do it with out the support of the Cohasset community.

Re: Cat Dam discussion

To the Cohasset Board of Selectmen:

(Editor's note: Mr. Woods provided the Mariner with a copy of his letter for publication.)

It occurs to me that the Board of Selectmen could happily dismiss itself from the Cat Dam involvement in that the "Lagoon" or Inner Little Harbor is a portion of a tide water estuary under the jurisdiction of the Conservation Commission through the Wetlands Protection Act.

Also, one must realize that:

a. The lagoon, or so-called Inner Little Harbor, is not the property of any citizen;

b. The control/expense of handling this water should not be the responsibility of individual citizens – just as neither should The Gulf, Lily Pond, Cohasset Harbor, the lagoon at Bow Street or Strait's Pond. These waters, our inheritance, serve the usefulness and pleasure of all Cohasset citizenry.

Support 'Healing Field' on Memorial Day

The effort should result in hundreds of American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets. The island faces Veterans Memorial Park where the annual Memorial Day observances are held.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces. (Those who purchase flags will be able to pick them up after 10 days).

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post and at both branches of Pilgrim Bank. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

Greenbush posts new rail schedule

MAKING TRACKS

Flash Announcement – We mentioned several weeks ago that the MBTA was in the process of making minor adjustments to the Commuter Rail Schedules. Well, they posted a new schedule on their web site effective Monday, April 7. Those of you who are "regular" commuters have certainly figured this out buy this time. Their website for this information is: mbta.com/schedules_and_maps/rail/lines/?route=GREENBSH (Wow! How's that for a web address?) Or, just put "MBTA commuter rail" into your search engine of preference and that should lead you to the web site.

Greenbush ridership – We have suspected that the higher and higher cost of gasoline would have a positive effect on Greenbush ridership. This week on Tuesday, April 15th, we had a chance to take one of our periodic parking lot car counts at the Greenbush station. The results do show a little greater than an 11 percent increase from mid-February.

An interesting bit of history – For quite a few years we incorrectly thought that the roadway between the Town Parking Lot and the South Shore Art Center was properly called Pleasant Street. Well, much to our surprise, it's not. It is actually a part of Depot Court. Years ago, the Cohasset Train Station was where the Art Center is today. Depot Court ran from Main Street to the tracks at the station. Thus, Depot Court goes all the way to the railroad tracks and stops. Pleasant Street starts on the other side of the railroad tracks. After the train stopped running, the station was moved to its present location (where Bernard's Restaurant is located).

MBTA Greenbush Project – The MBTA has called us and told us that they will be completing the eight new parking spaces next to the Teen Center. There will also be a new sidewalk around those spaces.

Other tasks that are yet to be completed or scheduled in the Town Parking Lot are:

- Replacing asphalt behind the gas station that was removed to install curbing.
- Adjusting the curbing in front of the Fix-It Shop.
- Adding the new sidewalk along Depot Court across from the South Shore Art Center.
- Reconnect the walkway lights on the James Brook Walkway.
- Replace the dead plantings near the signal bungalow.
- Adding an historic signboard to commemorate the old roundhouse site.

They did ask us when would be a good time for them to add the new lines in the parking lot. We have sent an email to the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce to get the shopkeepers' recommendation regarding the time that will be least disruptive to their businesses. We await their answer before we get back to the MBTA.

Little Harbor Project – Every resident on our small side lanes wants to have the amount of disruption in their neighborhood minimized. Most of us really don't like the idea of a lengthy construction project in our neighborhood. This is particularly true on our small lanes. A week or so ago, we had a chance to visit one such lane, Jerusalem Road Drive. We observed several interesting things.

The contractor, LM Holdings, LLC (LMH), has worked very hard to minimize the amount of time that they have streets, such as Jerusalem Road Drive, tied up. With this in mind, LMH has had two separate crews working on Jerusalem Road Drive. One crew started at the Jerusalem Road end and worked toward the cul-de-sac end. The other crew started at the cul-de-sac and worked toward the first crew. With the use of two crews, the construction work is in the neighborhood only about half as long as it would be with one crew.

We snapped the accompanying photo of the trench and sewer pipe as the pipe was being buried. The small stub you can see extending to the right (see arrow) will be used to connect a home at a later date. The photo demonstrates several key design features of this project. First, if you can gauge the size of the sewer pipe from the leg of the worker in the upper portion of the photo, you can see that the pipe is not very large. In fact, this particular sewer main is only 3 inches in diameter. You might ask, "Why is the sewer pipe so small, even in my home it is larger?" The reason it can be small is due to the fact that this sewer line is a "force main" and not a "gravity main."

A "force main" is a pipe in which the sewage flow is pumped rather than having flow created by the forces of gravity. So, why pump the sewage here when some other parts of Town don't need pumps? The central portion of Town, where most of the gravity sewer exists, has the distinct advantage that it is relatively flat. And, these areas are fairly close to the plant. In this case, the main sewer lines can be constructed with the necessary slopes to let gravity do the work of moving the sewage to the plant. Where there are hills, for the most part, fortunately, it is downhill to the plant and gravity can once again do the work. Occasionally, in the central area the Town needed install a booster pump to move the sewage over a high spot.

But, in the little Harbor area, just like the North Cohasset area, the terrain is not as favorable as the center of Town. Considerable amounts of ledge and many natural hills preclude the use of a gravity system. So, pumps are needed to move the sewage to the plant. If pumps were not used, the pipes would need to be larger and much deeper in the ground to maintain sewage flow. This would dramatically increase the project cost and the construction time in a very major way. In the Little Harbor area, the pumps that create the flow will be installed at each home. To be technically correct, this is actually a low-pressure system, since the pressure generated by the pumps is quite low when compared with other services like water. The pumps also play one other important function. They take the sewage from each home and grind up the waste to make it a slurry which flows easily through the pipes to the treatment plant. So, that's a very long explanation of why we are able to use smaller pipes in this system.

Sullying the Olympics

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I was watching them sneak the Olympic torch down the streets of San Francisco on its way to Beijing with a SWAT team on one side and what looked like the 82nd Airborne on the other when a thought occurred to me.

This isn't exactly what Baron Pierre de Coubertin had in mind when he revived the ancient Greek games 112 years ago.

The Baron's thoughts were more like "to educate young people through sport in a spirit of better understanding, helping to build a better and more peaceful world (and) spread the Olympic ideal throughout the world, thereby creating international goodwill."

See, no mention of free Tibet or stop the genocide in Darfur – or find Natalee Holloway, for the matter.

The Olympic ideal was sullied on an international scale for the first time in 1936 when Nazi Germany was awarded the games and Chancellor Hitler sought to use them to showcase his theories of Aryan racial superiority.

This isn't exactly what Baron Pierre de Coubertin had in mind when he revived the ancient Greek games 112 years ago.

Unfortunately for the Fuhrer, it was the black American, Jesse Owens, winning the 100- and 200-meter dashes, the long jump and the final leg of the 400-meter relay who drove him from the stadium rather than shake hands. "America's black auxiliary," the Nazi press called him.

A couple of weeks after the Soviet invasion of rebellious Hungary in 1956, Hungarians met the Russians so enthusiastically at water polo in the Melbourne Olympics and police had to be called to halt the brawl.

Holland, Spain and Switzerland boycotted the Olympics that year to protest the Russian invasion. Not to be outdone, Egypt, Ira and Lebanon also boycotted to protest the Israeli invasion of the Suez Canal. And China boycotted when Taiwan showed up under the name China.

Black activists Tommie Smith and John Carlos used their victories in 1968 Mexico City to deliver a raised fist black power salute on the podium but the international tragedy was the 46 unarmed student protesters killed by government troops across the streets from the Olympic stadium.

Eight Palestinian terrorists broke into the Israeli village at the Munich Olympics in 1972 and when the smoke had cleared 11 members of the Israeli team, five terrorists and one German policeman had been killed.

Twenty-two African nations boycotted the 1976 Olympics in Montreal for a rather convoluted reason. They wanted the New Zealand team banned because a non-Olympic rugby team from New Zealand had toured South Africa while it was under apartheid.

China and Taiwan were at it again in 1976 and this time the lads from the mainland won. Canada had switched its recognition from Taiwan to Beijing so when the Taiwanese showed up as Chinese, the Canadians wouldn't let them in and they went home.

President Jimmy Carter ordered a boycott of the 1980 Olympics in Moscow to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and 64 others joined in the boycott.

And the Soviets had to retaliate by boycotting the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles and taking 12 of their best friends with them.

All in the interest of "helping to build a better and more peaceful world," of course.

Customer is always right unless...

THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

I first encountered Helga a half-dozen years ago while placing an order for a rather expensive custom-made bridesmaid dress.

I can always tell when it's spring no matter what the weather. First, it's taxes, then allergies, and finally, a mailbox full of wedding invites. Fortunately, unlike the "27 Dresses" star, Katherine Heigl, my bridesmaid days are far behind me. Nevertheless, I'm still the owner of a handful of overpriced, unflattering dresses that despite the well-intentioned brides' beliefs, I will never, ever wear again.

This is why when I see those vanilla envelopes spill out of the box I'm reminded of Helga, the owner of a bridal salon who taught me a business lesson that I'll never forget: The customer is always right – unless she has to wear taffeta.

I first encountered Helga a half-dozen years ago while placing an order for a rather expensive custom-made bridesmaid dress. The bride had selected an empire-waist style that would accommodate her pregnant, married sister; with the unfortunate result of sacrificing her three single bridesmaids. Chalking it up to my normally rational friend having been struck down with a bad case of "weddingitis," – a brain-impairment resulting from reading way too many bridal magazines – I reluctantly gave Helga my measurements (a humiliating experience under any circumstance). I was then a bit surprised to see her put me down for a dress order two sizes larger than anything I had ever purchased. When I mentioned this, she snapped back that she has to go by my worst measurement – my post-baby waistline. Ouch! Smarting from her frankness, I tried to explain that waist size was irrelevant in this case, as the dress style didn't have a waist.

"Are you telling me I don't know my business?" Helga barked at me in a voice loud enough to make the entire store jump to attention. Rattled and caught completely off-guard, I dropped it. But when she announced that due to my height, she had to special order my dress 6 inches longer (at an extra cost of $100), I began a feeble protest, annoyed at spending even more money on a dress that's only function would be to repel the few, if any, single men at the wedding.

"Can't we just hem the other dresses to match the length it falls on me?"

"The bride wants the dresses precisely 3 inches from the floor. What kind of friend are you, trying to spoil the bride's special day!" Helga shrilled as she hit me full on with the emotional blackmail. I wasn't exactly sure how a hem length could possibly ruin anyone's day, but not wanting to find out, or continue being yelled at by this pint-sized tyrant, I once again caved.

A month later, the dress arrived – clearly two sizes too big – and I looked like Olive Oyl wearing a circus tent. Not my best look. I tried to conceal my smirk as Helga marked off the necessary alterations including cutting off all 6 inches and $100 worth of extra fabric she ordered. But my smugness was short-lived, because she then handed me an alterations bill for $175, bringing my grand total to nearly $600 and that didn't even account for the dyed-to-match shoes!

When I balked, Helga simply shrugged it off and said, "It's not my fault that you're too flat-chested, too thick-waisted and too tall." Doh!

"They never say that at Armani," I hissed under my breath. (Not that I'd ever shopped there, but it sure sounded good at the time.) Unfortunately, Helga had already waltzed off to announce to another customer – an extremely stressed-out bride overwhelmed by much too much taffeta, tulle and crinoline – that her dress didn't fit because she was simply too fat. As the bride burst into tears, I seethed at having to give money to someone who earns a living making customers feel badly about themselves.

Yet, I had to hand it to Helga. As she ushered me out the door, she informed me with a wink and a smile that she wouldn't charge me any tax if I paid her in cash. She shoots – she scores. She had managed to violate every single maxim about customer service I had ever learned in business and even made an "off the books" profit to boot. Now, this is not a sales strategy I would recommend unless, like Helga, you have a customer base held captive by the emotional blackmail equivalent to a stressed-out bride and her mother, and are not banking on repeat customers.

Nevertheless, for any brides-to-be who may be reading this, please take pity on your friends because, it doesn't matter what you think, they will never, ever wear that dress again.

Diane K. Danielson is a Cohasset resident who promises not to torture any of her friends in her upcoming nuptials by skipping the whole bridesmaid bit altogether. Not only does she not want to fund Helga's retirement, she realizes that the only good use for an old bridesmaid dress is as a decorative pillow cover.

Design Review Board needs members

The Design Review Board is looking for a few good men and women to fill out its ranks. Saved by a vote at Town Meeting, the Design Review Board is an advisory group that has been active in the past in assisting and advising the Planning Board in a variety of ways.

To date, only two residents have come forward to lend their expertise to the town committee, Town Manager Bill Griffin said. Although ideally the members of Design Review Board would have some sort of background in design, from architects to real estate agents, all applicants will be considered. The Design Review Board is a Selectmen-appointed committee.

Interested citizens should send a letter of interest to the Town Manager's office at Town Hall.

Remembering when ammo trains rolled before Greenbush

By Jim Rose
SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

The Hingham Naval Ammunition Depot was the last operation to run trains on the Old Colony railroad before the Greenbush line opened last year. The Old Colony carried passengers on the line from 1845 until shutdown in 1959; the depot closed its doors in 1962. Having begun in 1904, the ammunition depot provided ordnance for the U.S. Navy fleet during World War I, World War II and the Korean conflict. A few of its employees remaining in the South Shore still have warm memories of their past jobs working with the Navy trains. Since they are getting on in years and they worked with my late parents there, I thought I would interview them.

When Hingham resident Sam Amonte hears the horn sound from the new Greenbush railroad, he nostalgically recalls his 1950s employment as a brakeman for the ammunition depot. "My job was to hook-up and brake-away ammunition boxcars, operate the rail switches and wave warning flags at street intersections," said Amonte. "I enjoyed my job. A lot of Hingham people worked there, including my two brothers, Rocco and Patsy, who were heavy equipment operators. Although the work had an element of danger, we had safety procedures. We all got along and had a few laughs at the same time." Well known to many Hingham residents, Amonte ended up working as a police officer for the Town of Hingham for 36 years.

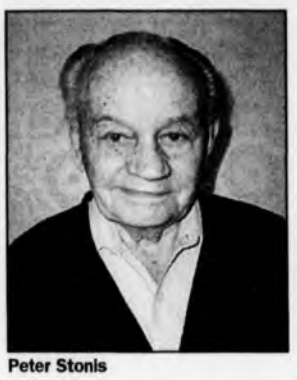
Peter Stonis of Walpole spent his depot railroad days as a hoisting engineer. "At the Mainside (now called Bare Cove Park), we operated a 65-ton locomotive and an 80-ton locomotive," Stonis remembered as he studied photos of railroad cranes in the depot's "Shot and Shell" newspaper dated 1955. "Over at the Cohasset Annex (now Wompatuck State Park), we also had a 65 and an 80. My specialty was to load and off-load ammunition from the trains to trucks and warehouses. Whenever a Navy ship pulled into Boston Harbor, they would store the ammo at the depot."

When questioned if there were any accidents, "only when a train would jump the track now and then," he said. "We would send a crew down and fix it. No big deal. Oh, and also when I was given an 'all clear' to depart and someone left a heavy metal loading plank attached to the train. I ended up wiping out three pillars supporting the loading dock roof."

Former Leadingman of Transportation Donald Guilfoyle of Hanover was the supervisor in charge of the rail operation. "We all loved working at the depot," he beamed. "The job gave me a feeling of accomplishment. I scheduled the departures and pick-ups. We hauled everything from bullets, bombs, depth charges, torpedoes, 16-inch projectiles and rockets. Besides the locomotives, we operated boxcars, flatcars, section cars, railroad cranes and a small utility train called a hurdy-gurdy. The trains would travel back and forth from the Hingham Mainside to the Cohasset Annex and also out of state." U.S. Navy records from 1959 list: 70 boxcars, 22 flatcars, four section cars and two railroad cranes.

Bill Handrahan of Hull was an inspector then. Besides checking tolerances and safety procedures, he also made sure carpenters blocked and braced in the bombs, etc. so they wouldn't role. This operation was done at the Cohasset Annex classification yard. "Many of the boxcars would be stored overnight at the Annex in barricaded concrete sidings," Bill recollects. "That was in case of an explosion, the blast would be contained and sent straight up."

Former ordnance man Jim Larsh, who lives in Middleboro, remembers when blocking gave way inside a boxcar: "A 16-inch shell broke free from the cribbing," Larsh said in an ominous overtone. "The warhead rolled off its seat and the tip of the projectile penetrated the side of the freight car. That warhead weighed over a ton. If that thing ever blew, the whole of the South Shore would have heard it. Plus, no telling how many casualties it would cause. I also remember when kids broke into an ammo car, I believe in the Readville yard of Dedham. It was a shipment of mortar shell propellant increments that Seattle, Wash., was sending down to us. The boneheads threw them all around the area, not knowing what they were. Luckily, none exploded. The Navy had a big investigation after that. Also at the depot, if you came up with a good idea the Navy could use, you got a reward. It was called a 'benny-sug' for beneficial suggestion. I got 15 bucks for a truck scale idea. It now sounds like peanuts, but a loaf of bread was around a dime then."



Hingham resident and former guard and ordnance man George Bartlett recounts the strict safety procedures. "We all had to wear safety shoes there," Bartlett said. "The shoes had a big steel toe to protect us in case a shell dropped on it. We also had to wear anti-spark grounding clamps on the shoe. And naturally, there was no smoking on the job. They had designated areas for that. The Navy periodically gave out a 'Commanding Officer's Good Housekeeping Plaque' award for safety. I loaded a lot of bombs to and from boxcars at the Annex Transfer Building. The state park still uses it for storage."

Tom Beary from Whitman helped close down the depot with my father. He was a brakeman and also head ordnance man. "When I think back to those depot trains, I think the funniest incident occurred at Hingham Mainside on the docks of the Back River," he said with a boyish smile on his face. "When we were loading one of the freight cars, the driver of the forklift wasn't watching where he was backing with his full load and drove himself off the dock into the drink. The few of us still around with our fading memories always seem to remember that hilarious accident. The driver didn't get hurt, and we eventually recovered the forklift. How can you forget a caper like that?" (Sadly, Tom died Feb. 21.)

All of the former depot workers interviewed approve of the new Greenbush line. Sam Amonte says, "Greenbush is great! I only pay $2.50 as a senior for a trip into Boston. By the way, did I ever tell you the time we used the train to steal a hot stove at the depot?" Thank God Sammy became a cop.

Stormwater challenge must be met

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

We have one of the largest, and most expensive public works activities in our history going on.

Earth day is April 22 this year, and as for cleaning up the streets, sidewalks and open lots — forget it! We're in the middle of so much construction that any debris is under a pile of dirt or gravel. Hopefully the results will give us sewer, water and drainage with a strong effort at intelligent solutions to flooding using both the old, but still relevant techniques of municipal drainage with the equally effective stormwater management using smart growth principles embodied in the new Stormwater Bylaw. What strikes me in all this is that flooding of streets and cellars by stormwater are being treated as afterthoughts: not necessarily included in most of the planning.

On Tuesday, the Stormwater Committee, or those who could get away, met representatives of Norfolk Environmental, Coastal Zone Management, the Cohasset DPW and others interested in stormwater management to discuss the implementation of measures already paid for to reduce the rate and volume of Stormwater that now goes untreated into Cohasset Cove, flooding cellars and filling up back yards along the way. We initially met at the Police Station that has a flooded basement after every heavy rain, the front lawn of which will contain a rain garden. We then proceeded to several other sites all of which drain untreated stormwater water into James Brook. It turns out that drainage from "the hill" an area bordered by Bancroft Road, Pond Street, and Pleasant Street at the sides, and Cushing Road at the bottom comprise an area of about 12 acres, four acres of which are totally impervious depositing about 30,000 gallons of raw stormwater into James Brook.

The raingardens being considered will be placed at various spots on the northeast side of Cushing Road. Alix White and David Bigley confirm that the area is subject to considerable ponding, cellar flooding and general discomfort every time it rains, a condition considerably exacerbated by the MBTA which causes drainage of enormous amounts of water into our already taxed drainage system.

Drainage was to be addressed by the Drainage Master Plan, but the plans for drainage along Cushing Road, for example, call for so-called stormceptors, underground infiltration tanks designed to accept overflows and hold them releasing slowly as the flood subsides. Measurements of groundwater levels and other parameters indicate that stormceptors at best will be ineffective and at worst, remain full, thereby rendering them useless. This condition occurs over much of the Town where principles of intelligent modern stormwater management have been ignored.

As we go on with our most costly public undertaking, we must invoke the principles of Stormwater management for which we voted at our last Town Meeting. The next Selectmen's meeting is on Monday April 28, when the Stormwater Committee will be requesting that the Selectmen undertake several important actions. Among other items, we now have to appoint a new stormwater committee. The old committee burned out so many of its numerous previous members that it looks like a casualty list. Next, the Committee needs a new charge, since the selectmen chose to be responsible for its management. Finally responsibility for duties of the Committee must be assigned. The stormwater committee has six specific duties.

- Conduct public education and outreach
- Advise the Board of Selectman on stormwater projects to alleviate existing and future stormwater pollution and flooding in Cohasset.
- Provide for maintenance of stormwater works and structures
- Develop a program for illicit discharges into the drainage system
- Ensure compliance with federal requirements under Phase II of the National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System.
- Seek funding, through the Town Manager, from grant programs, Town Meeting, and other sources for the study, design and construction of stormwater capital improvement projects.

The Bylaw passed at Town Meeting assigned some of these duties to the Board of Health; some to the Conservation Commission and administration by the Selectmen. Many of the Committee's duties have not been assigned. For example, who writes the required annual report that goes to the Town, State and the EPA?

The Stormwater Committee needs an agent versed in the latest stormwater technology to aid citizens who are having stormwater problems just as the Health Agent and Public Health Nurse aid those needing advice on health and septic system matters.

Lets look at what's been happening in Cohasset. We have one of the largest, and most expensive public works activities in our history going on. Virtually every area in Town is being affected, this after a massive restructuring of the downtown area. Stormwater won't go away and we have the shape of a system in place to help solve its problems. It's up to the Selectmen to integrate the system into the fabric of our existing Town Management.

Relay For Life planned for June 13-14

An important part of Relay is honoring and remembering those people in our lives who have faced cancer.

Relay for Life is the signature fundraiser of the American Cancer Society. Participants raise money by personally collecting donations and organizing group fundraisers prior to or at the event. The money goes towards cancer research, patient services, advocacy and education. It also provides hope to those how have cancer and their family and friends that a cure is available, it provides hope that cancer can be detected in its early stages and it provides hope that cancer is eradicated in our life time. The Hingham/Hull/Cohasset and Scituate Relay will be held on June 13th and 14th organizations clubs, family, friends and coworkers form teams of at least 8-15people and gather at Cohasset High School on the 13th.

Members of the team take turns walking around the track for the duration of the event. An important part of Relay is honoring and remembering those people in our lives who have faced cancer. Each Relay invites cancer survivors in the community to walk a special Survivors Lap. Another focal point of each Relay is the Luminaria Ceremony, held after dark, where candles are sponsored and lit in honor and memory of our loved ones who have battled this disease. Part of what makes Relay for Life special is its atmosphere — the sense of community, camaraderie and hope that permeates the event from start to finish. Hope has become the catchword of Relay, because hope is what it's all about; the hope that one day we will be free from the fear of this terrible disease, that our children will grow up in a world where cancer is no longer fatal. Relay is a time to do something about a danger that seems so much bigger than us, and to know that we are actually making a difference. It is a time to reflect, to remember those who have been lost and those who can still be saved. And it is also a lot of fun to be there with friends and take part in the activities.

Boston, MA — It's no secret that commercial real estate is legendary for its ability to "multiply" your net worth. And 2008 is poised to be one of the best years ever to invest in commercial property and secure your retirement.

The Wall Street Journal recently reported:

"While the residential housing market is struggling, commercial real estate is showing solid fundamentals in many markets — with occupancies high, increasing rent growth and supply under control."

Why? Simply because as the population grows, the demand for multifamily housing units, storage, offices, warehouses, parking lots, etc., grows proportionately. In fact, it is estimated that the population of the U.S. could double within the next 50 years. If this happens, it is very likely that values will skyrocket!

Now you can learn ways to master the art of commercial real estate and get a complete overview of what it takes to be successful in your own hometown.

I learned how to acquire properties, how real estate deals are structured, and how billions are made. On a much smaller scale, I also began to buy my own properties around the U.S. and develop a personal system for creating wealth.

Today, I have property all over the world. And yet, I work less than ever. My wealth works for me.

- Real Estate Professionals: Now is the time for you to make more money on your deals. See how you can earn more than a commission and massively increase your net worth by getting in on the action for yourself.
- Small-Business Owners: Stop paying rent to someone else. Build an additional cash flow stream for your business and watch your wealth multiply.

For Beginners & Seasoned Investors!

If you've been wishing for a new way to invest that's richer than single-family houses, this is for you!

This is more than how to move up a rung or two on the Wealth Ladder... this is how to take the express elevator to the top floor!

Now you can learn ways to master the art of commercial real estate and get a complete overview of what it takes to be successful in your own hometown.

You'll get an up-close view of the best types of commercial property to invest in now, and the hidden properties with big payout potential that often go overlooked, including:

Small steps to greener Cohasset

AEC received grant for daylight pipes and fuel savers

"If the pilot program goes well we hope to evaluate the fuel savers for use on the school bus fleet."
— Andrew Willard, Alternative Energy Committee

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Alternative Energy Committee is looking for ways big and small to make Cohasset a more energy efficient place. A recent victory in their cause came when they received a Department of Environmental Protection grant to do install two types of energy saving technology on town assets.

The $17,050 municipal sustainability grant will allow the town to save diesel fuel and electricity, primarily in the Department of Public Works. "Tornado fuel savers" will be placed in 16 DPW diesel trucks and "daylight pipes" will be installed in the DPW garage.

Both efforts will be pilot programs and, if successful, could be applied in other areas of town. The Alternative Energy Committee (AEC) is focused on investigating and implementing alternative energy sources that can be used by throughout the municipality.

"The committee feels these small steps are as important as the large ones," says AEC chairman Andrew Willard. The AEC was able to apply and receive the grant with the help of its consultants, Judeth Van Hamm and Joanne Sanders.

According to the manufacturer's website (www.tornadofuelsaver.com), precisely engineered slotted fins convert normal air intake flow into a powerful spinning vortex of air that mixes the air and fuel together, resulting in better fuel mileage and performance. The swirling effect helps to atomise the air/fuel mixture in the combustion chamber which, when exposed to the ignition, results in a more efficient burning of the fuel.

The tornado fuel savers can increase gas mileage anywhere from seven to 15 percent, depending on driving habits and use of the vehicle. Eighteen DPW vehicles will receive these tornado fuel savers.

"With the torpedo fuel savers we will be tracking actual diesel fuel use on DPW trucks versus last year's records. We are looking for a 3 percent decrease in fuel usage," says Willard. A 3 percent decrease in fuel usage saves over one dollar for every 10 gallons of fuel purchased, he said.

"If the pilot program goes well we hope to evaluate the fuel savers for use on the school bus fleet," says Willard.

The cost for all the fuel savers is approximately $900.

The bulk of the grant will be used to install 16 daylight pipes, 15 will be placed in the DPW garage and one will be installed in another municipal building. The second location for a daylight pipe Van Hamm said she would like to see installed a location frequented by residents to increase their visibility.

Daylight pipes are stainless steel tubes, with an acrylic dome cap placed in the roof to allow sunlight into the room below, much like a skylight but more energy efficient.

"This type of light has application in any room with a roof over it," says Van Hamm, including other municipal buildings and residential homes. If this initial group of daylight pipes prove to be a energy saver as is expected, school buildings, police and fire headquarters and the library could all be prime locations for daylight pipes, say Van Hamm.

"They are so simple and really a no brainer," says Van Hamm, who plans to install one in her own home in the near future. "There's use for the municipality and use for residential. It's how you can have a light without turning on a switch."

In addition to saving money and energy, AEC member Sally Ayers says the daylight pipes create a healthier work environment, "it's a nicer and healthier way to light a space than the fluorescent lights."

The daylight pipes at the DPW garage is expected to save the town about half of its electricity cost for that building. The electricity powered lights at the garage will have light sensors, in the event of a cloudy or rainy day.

"The daylight pipes are not replacing the fluorescents, just supplementing them," says Ayers. The grant covers the purchase and installation of the daylight pipes, "we'll be able to do the project without town (funding) assistance," says Ayers.

Both the project is on a very strict timeline; the grant funds must be used by June 30. Ayers says while much of the work the AEC does takes time and effort to show progress, this project will have immediate and visible results.

"There's progress being made, we're going to be saving fuel costs and we're being environmentally conscientious," says Ayers.

Re-vamping school lunch

Food service consultant advises menu changes

"To increase meal participation the menu has to be revamped and then marketed to students and parents."
— Mary Jo Cutler, registered dietician and nutritionist

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The days of mystery meat in school cafeterias are long gone, but still Cohasset schools have been struggling to get kids to buy lunch at school. Efforts are being made to get the students at all three school buildings off the brown bag and back into to the cafeteria line.

Mary Jo Cutler, founder of Cutler Associates and a registered dietician and nutritionist, was hired to do an extensive operational review to help the fledging school lunch program. In the last year, the food service budget which typically is a self-sufficient operation has barely been making back its cost. Cutler's primary goal was to suggest improvements to strengthen the fiscal integrity of the lunch program.

Cutler spent the last couple of months collecting data for her report. She met with parents, teachers, administrators, food service staff and students to get each group's take on school lunch. She visited each school's cafeteria to see it in operation. The result is a 47-page report in which she gives her findings and offers many suggestions to improve the cafeteria and encourage students to purchase lunch.

"It seemed to me the errors were pointing to the menu, which is something fixable," Cutler said.

A re-vamping of the school menu including an increase in fresh fruit and vegetables, more exciting descriptive language of the entrees, and the improvement of a salad bar at the high school were a few of the immediate changes the cafeteria could implement.

"To increase meal participation the menu has to be revamped and then marketed to students and parents," Cutler said. The changes should be monitored to keep track of the acceptance of the menu.

A shift in the menu would focus on fruits and vegetables, salads and healthy sandwiches, suggested Cutler. Each group she talked to expressed a desire for more fresh fruit and vegetables; parents even said they would be willing to pay more for fresh vegetables and fruits were offered.

A removal of convenience type foods, items containing trans fat, and striving to include more organic options were proposed. Bacon and bologna, because of their low nutritional value, are to be taken off the menu completely in May.

Spicing up the menu still has to be done in accordance with Department of Agriculture requirements for school lunches. In her report Cutler gave recipe ideas for new menu items that met the USDA requirement.

Director of Food Services Bob Levy has worked closely with Cutler during the process and is looking forward to making changes to the cafeteria.

"When we opened upstairs (at the middle-high school), it was so well received," said Levy, but in the passing years sales have slipped off.

"It's going to be a challenge, but a challenge we are willing to step up to," said Levy. He plans to continue to educate himself on what other successful school lunch programs are doing. He'll visit other schools in the coming months as well as attend a menu workshop at Framingham State College in May.

Striking a balance between the nutritional needs of the students with what interests their taste buds is a constant struggle, he said.

"The menu items the students buy tend to be not nutritious, there's a balance we need to find," said Levy. Cutler's research named are chicken stir-fry, chili, subs, bagels, buffalo chicken calzone, chicken Caesar wrap and custom sandwiches among the students' favorites.

In addition to menu changes, Levy will begin to implement flow changes at the middle-high school to decrease congestion. While the wait time in the lunch lines isn't particularly long, the set-up of the cafeteria makes the lines seem longer and could be discouraging participation. Simply moving the to-go items to a different part of the cafeteria could increase sales, Levy said.

Cutler suggested the cafeterias move toward automated purchasing and establish an online prepayment method for parents. Sixty-three percent of the survey responders said they would use an online payment system, if available.

The use of Styrofoam products was also discussed. Styrofoam is the cheapest available, but the trays are not recycled. Cutler noted at the elementary level, the trays were often too small to fit all the meal requirements and the students had trouble balancing them.

The School Committee was supportive of the changes suggested; some changes will be piloted before the close of the school year in the hope of ending the fiscal year in the black. Changes in participation will be closely monitored.

"Let's start small and see how it works," said chairman Rick Flynn. He asked Levy to report back near the close of the school year with an update.

Skippers solid in offensive explosion against Clippers

Cohasset 17, Norwell 5

The Cohasset High boys lacrosse team finally got its formidable offense into high gear playing for the first time on a relatively dry field on a sunny Tuesday afternoon in Norwell.

After taking the lead on an early goal and playing Cohasset pretty even for the first eight minutes, Norwell took a bad penalty for an illegal stick. For the next three minutes, Cohasset had the man advantage with a Norwell player "locked in" to the penalty box. The Skippers took full advantage running off five straight goals with their man-up offense.

After still another Norwell penalty, Ernst found Grimm alone up top for a top shelf rocket. Grimm scored again less than a minute later with a floater that somehow eluded the Norwell net minder. Scooping a loose ground ball at the midfield line after a failed Norwell clear, Grimm streaked through the middle of the field and beat the goalie with a hard shot at the hip to the off-stick side.

Flibotte found Wade alone on the crease for a quick stick goal and then Flibotte scored twice himself – once on a roll dodge from the side and thirty seconds later on a bull dodge from up top shooting high to low. Nate Porter (with three point blank stops near the end of the half) and the defense led by Jake Cuneo, Cliff Musto, Anderson Lynner and Vince Curran kept Norwell off balance all afternoon.

The first half ended with a 11-2 Skipper lead.

The Cohasset offense kept up the pressure and the domination in the second half. Grimm scored twice unassisted beating his man cleanly dodging from behind.

Cohasset defeated Harwich 5-0 late last week. Victor Hartman (Pictured, last season) won 6-1, 6-1 at first singles. Ryan Crough (6-4, 6-4) and Dan Brady (6-1, 6-0) won at second and third singles. First doubles team of Mike Filby and Ivan Sceery won 6-1, 6-1. Second doubles team of Mark D'Antonio and Robbie Hill won 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

Lady Skippers head into vacation week on bad note

Two big losses sandwich win over Fairhaven

The Cohasset High girls lacrosse team went 1-2 over the last week with a 19-10 win against Fairhaven, Friday, April11, and losses to Duxbury (22-3, Thursday, April 10) and Norwell (17-1, Wednesday, April 16).

The Skippers are now 3-2 overall, 1-1 in the South Shore Legaue.

"I have never felt so good about an ugly loss as I did in Duxbury, and I have never been so disappointed with a wide-margin win as with these two games," Cohasset head coach Chuck Jaffe said through e-mail Sunday afternoon. "This team needs to find its identity, which is hard when you are playing feast-or-famine games where the opponents are either very weak or very strong. Regardless of the opponent, we need to come out and play at our top level, and we certainly haven't done that yet."

"We basically played defense all night," Jaffe said "And while our effort was solid, you simply can't give a team like Norwell that many possessions and expect to compete with them. Our inability to control draws and to settle the ball on offense were real issues; but we also will be a different team by the time we see Norwell again at the end of the season. We have a lot of room for improvement."

Thursday, the Skippers traveled to Duxbury to play the defending Division 2 State champions. After tying the game 1-1 on a Kaci Kucinski free-position shot, Duxbury ran off the next 10 goals. Caitlin Mahoney scored two of the next three goals in the game, both on free-position shots, but 12-3 was as close as Cohasset ever got, as Duxbury ran off to a 22-3 win.

Amanda Masotta played a particularly strong game in the net. According to Jaffe "which might be a surprise given how many goals she surrendered, but she saw more rubber than a tourist in a tire factory and things would have been much worse had she not come up with several point-blank saves."

Despite losing by 19, the Skippers came through this game with their head up, having worked hard to see a lot of kids play at that level, trying a lot of new and different things and being willing to pay for mistakes in order to come away from the game smarter.

"The effort level was outstanding throughout, despite the score," Jaffe said.

Friday Cohasset played a brand new Fairhaven team. After rushing out to a three-goal lead, Cohasset gave up an end-to-end run that made the score 3-1. The same kind of defensive lapse happened again to make the score 5-2, and two more poor defensive plays made the score 6-4.

"That was particularly alarming because the same Fairhaven squad had been badly outmatched against Cohasset's junior varsity team in a scrimmage in late March," Jaffe said.

The host Skippers bounced back to make the score 11-5 at the half, and after trading goals in the first minute of the second stanza, broke free for four goals to salt the game away. From there, the two teams traded goals to a 19-10 final.

Kelsey Erler, Kayla Farren, Lindsay Hill and Amy Meikleham each scored three goals in the game, with Hill adding two assists and Erler one. Caitlin Mahoney scored two more goals, giving her the team lead with seven scores through four games.

Hannah Burgess added a goal and an assist. Isabelle Franklin, Kaci Kucinski, Chelsea Silvia and Olivia Murphy added solo markers; for Silvia, a sophomore, it was her first varsity goal, as she finished a feed from Kaleigh Teague.

Amanda Masotta made six saves on the day.

Cohasset Sports Partnership launches its got turf? campaign

Along with election signs and Cohasset Road Race signs, Cohasset residents may have noticed green "got turf?" signs popping up all over town. This marked the kick-off of the newly-formed Cohasset Sports Partnership's got turf? campaign, a fundraising effort to bring a turf field to Cohasset Middle High School. The Cohasset Sports Partnership's mission is to improve and maintain Cohasset's athletic facilities and programs and is affiliated with the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund.

The Cohasset Sports Partnership (CSP) held a kick-off event at Atlantica on Saturday night where 150 interested people gathered to hear CSP President, George McGoldrick, along with CSP Vice President, Bill Cavanaro, unveil the first major project of building a turf field in Cohasset. The School Committee has proposed a new synthetic turf field and the CSP is seeking to supplement the funding of the field.

Coaches from most high school varsity teams that play field sports also spoke about the many benefits of turf fields ranging from injury prevention, not having to reschedule games due to rain outs, field longevity, and lower maintenance costs. Also featured as a speaker was Weymouth's long time Athletic Director, Bob Donovan, who oversaw a turf field installation at Weymouth High. He talked about the many benefits it has yielded the town.

Cohasset High Varsity and JV boys and girls lacrosse teams were to hold their annual Spirit Day hosting four games. They were all cancelled due to poor field conditions from the previous day's rain. Spirit Day would not have been cancelled with a turf field!

The CSP hopes to raise a portion of the funds for the field through private donations, grants and sponsorships.

Girls tennis team gets by league rival 4-1 Tuesday

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High girls tennis team is off to a 5-0 start after beating Norwell, 4-1 Tuesday afternoon. The match-up with the Clippers has historically been one of the better ones in South Shore League play and Tuesday was no different.

Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan was thrilled after things wrapped up.

"It was good tennis all-around," Meehan said. "Every time we play Norwell, it's a very comparable program, it's not going to be a blowout on either side. "We're ecstatic to come away with 4-1 win, it's usually 3-2 either way."

Meg Anderson dropped first singles to Susan Bitetti (one of the areas best players, along with Anderson).

"Meg played great," Meehan said, despite the tough loss.

Cohasset's Maddy Altholtz made quick work at third singles, 6-0, 6-2 to wrap up the first team point.

"She had a solid performance," Meehan said. "She just goes out there and plays her game."

First doubles, Maggie McGoldrick and Jean Thomae, won 6-1, 6-1, to put the Skippers up 2-1. That left two very tight battles still raging at second singles and second doubles.

The second doubles team won 6-3, 5-7, 6-0, to give Cohasset the win. That took some pressure off Sally Meehan at second singles. According to Coach Meehan, second singles usually decides matters when these two teams meet.

Meehan won 6-4, in the first set and then won all seven points in the tiebreaker to take her match.

The girls beat Notre dame Academy, 4-1 Monday.

Anderson and Altholtz won first and third singles and both doubles teams won as well.

"We knew going in it was going to be tough," Meehan said about the Notre Dame match. "It was a tight match everybody played well. It was one of those matches that is a nice non-league match and it was excellent competition."

Cohasset also beat Harwich last Thursday, 4-1, on the road.

Anderson, Meehan, Altholtz and Thomae and McGoldrick all won.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse

The U15 Blue Team highlights

The Cohasset Lacrosse Boys U15 Blue team finished the day Sunday with their second win of the season. The game ended 11-4 against a tough but overmatched Abington squad.

Robby Mahoney started off the scoring with a nice individual effort. The Cohasset squad showed their tenacity as they out hustled the Abington team and consistently won the ground ball battle that led to numerous fast breaks. Charlie Neaves (one goal, two assists) playing midfield had several assists. One early in the contest where he picked up a ground ball in the defensive end sprinted out of the zone to lead a classic fast break, feeding Brennan Bukowski (two goals, one assists) for the finish.

Charlie also spent some time at close defense where he supplemented the defense led by Geoff "Goff" Swain, Teddy Pastos and Alec Hurd. The defense was outstanding as they kept the Abington players from getting many shots on goal. Danny "CZ" Czerkawski (one goal, one assist) played a stellar game on both sides of the field, leading several fast breaks where he assisted Bukowski on a score and on the other end of the tandem when he converted a nice give an go pass from Brennan.

In only the second game of his career, Peter Hinman (two goals, one assist) found the net twice while also gaining an assist on a nice pass to Alec Hurd (one goal) who finished impressively. Alec chipped in at both defense and attack.

Jimmy Lydon was tough in net all day, holding the Abington team scoreless through three quarters and surrendering only four goals on the day. Jimmy continues to shine between the pipes. Hunter Forrer (one assist) picked up an assist as he found Peter Hinman on the crease for a score after a nice hustling effort to get the ball into the attack.

Hunter played his usual unselfish game chipping in where needed. Also of note was the fine midfield play of Drew Nahill and John Collins with multiple ground balls. Collins as usual was on the winning end of most of the face-offs. The win was a total team effort with contributions from every player on the roster.

CYBSA field clean-up day

Opening Day is nearly here and it's time to get the diamonds in shape. The CYBSA will be holding it's annual field clean-up day on Saturday, April 19 at 7:00 a.m. at Barnes Field. We will have a good supply of the necessary rakes, shovels, wheelbarrows etc. on hand, however we ask that if you have a spare rake please bring it, along with work gloves, elbow grease and a great attitude. Even if you can only come for a short time, it will be helpful, so we ask that you please make the effort to help get the fields looking their best for the upcoming season. Thanks and we hope to see you on Saturday.

Win number one for softball team

Skippers route Clippers on home field

Rob Spofford

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

It feels nice to get that first win under your belt. Just ask first year Cohasset High softball coach Rob Spofford.

"It's great," he said after beating Norwell 17-2 at Freedom Field, Tuesday afternoon. "You bet, now we got one going and maybe it will kick start us."

Cohasset jumped on the Clippers early and extended a lead to 9-0 on a three-run home run by Marissa Tangherlini in the second inning. Both Cohasset (1-5) and Norwell (0-5) came into the game without a win.

Something had to give, and Spofford and company were happy to come away with the first win of the year.

"You know, we have played tough," Spofford said. "We have been in every single game, but you could see the bounce in their step today. You could see it. The bats came alive today. We are changing our hitting philosophy and they are committing to it."

Besides Tangherlini's blast, Cohasset got strong offensive production from Meredith Kelly (3-for-4), Kristin Monaco (three runs) and Carly Salerno (triple).

Christine Conor earned her first ever varsity win. The sophomore is taking over on the mound for the Skippers this season along with freshman Brittany Pinkus. Cohasset's big graduates from a year ago include Christina Pinkus and Virginia Spofford. Its lone returning South Shore League all-star is Monaco.

"We have been in a lot of close games," Spofford said. "We played some tough teams, some bigger schools Hingham, Quincy and Rockland, we went down to Harwich and had a great 4-3 game. We took Abington to six innings and it was 1-0 them and in a lot of past years they have slaughter-ruled us.

Cohasset played returning league champs East Bridgewater on the road Thursday, past Mariner deadline. It's the last game before school vacation week.

"We have talked about collectively the success and failure of this team is how we do one through nine, or one through twelve," Spofford said. "And that is sort of what I have been trying to preach to them."

Cohasset High Boys Lacrosse Notebook

FROM LACROSSE, PAGE 19

After a terrific clearing pass by Czerkawski, Flibotte lost his man on a dodge and found an open Wise for the goal. Czerkawski scored himself on an absolute cannon to the upper near corner from the restraining line. Junior middie Andrew DePaulo found the cage after a beautiful roll dodge from the midline.

Wade closed out the Cohasset scoring with his second hat trick of the year on a beautiful inside feed from fellow junior Owen Landon after great ball movement on the man-up. Sophomore Jack Murphy played the entire second half in goal for Cohasset making a number of super stops.

Despite the impressive offensive fireworks, Cohasset coach Stew Curran praised his two goaltenders and defenders.

"Both Nate Porter and Jack Murphy were absolutely terrific in the goal," Curran said. "Not only did they make some acrobatic stops, but their quick clearing passes really got our offense into the flow.

"Our defense never let Norwell get on track and did a much better job of staying out of the penalty box today (only 3 flags against Cohasset)."

Curran singled out the defensive play of sophomore Dana Valentine, freshman Jake Kissick and senior Cliff Musto and the solid two way middie play of Pete Ernst, PJ McCaw, Andrew Smith, Andrew DePaulo and freshman Thomas Flibotte.

Mike Grimm led Cohasset scorers with six goals and one assist. Mark Flibotte added three goals and two assists. Will Wise had two goals and two assists and Johnny Wade had three goals.

Nate Porter had six saves in the first half and Jack Murphy added nine saves in the second half.

The Skippers play in the Chowder Cup Memorial Tournament at Scituate High on Thursday and Saturday. The tournament (in memory of PJ Trendowicz #21 Cohasset, Ryan Flannery #9 Scituate, Justin Langham #4 Cohasset and Tim Mahoney #9 Scituate) includes Scituate, Marshfield, Sandwich and Cohasset.

An "all tourney" team will be chosen along with a tourney MVP while the proceeds from the event will be donated to lacrosse scholarship fund programs in each of the four towns.

Duxbury 12, Cohasset 5

Duxbury, the five-time defending Division 1 State champions, defeated Cohasset, the two-time defending Div. 3 State champion, at Alumni Field, Thursday.

It was a beautiful spring day with temperatures over 70 degrees and there was another big crowd on hand. Duxbury, which has not lost a boys lacrosse game to a Massachusetts team in over five years, jumped out to a quick 3-0 lead at the beginning of the first period.

If not for some spectacular saves by Nate Porter in the Cohasset net, it could have been worse because Duxbury dominated the possession throughout the period. Chuck Czerkawski finally got Cohasset on the board with a blast to the bottom corner after a feed from Mark Flibotte at the end of the period. The second quarter went pretty much the same way as the first as Duxbury continued to control the ground ball wars and the ball.

After three more Duxbury goals made it 6-1, Mike Grimm found Pete Ernst clear in the slot and Ernst buried a bounce shot to the far side. Porter made two great stops at point blank range to keep the Skippers in the game at halftime.

Cohasset head coach Stew Curran saw plenty of room for improvement in his team's performance.

"Duxbury is a great program, but we did not compete even-up due to our continued inability to stay out of the penalty box," he said. "They beat us to many ground balls and even when we got there, we just did not pick it up giving them another good possession.

"We needed to possess the ball more today and just did not get the job done for four periods."

Cohasset did mount a fine comeback in the third period. After a rare Duxbury penalty, Czerkawski scored his second goal of the game again assisted by Flibotte. Grimm then scored on a floater after beating his defender clean on a roll dodge from the side making the score 6-4 at the close of the third period.

The Skipper faithful had visions of the big upset. Unfortunately, two goals would be as close as the score got as Cohasset once again caught the penalty bug in the fourth period.

Curran was again disappointed with the yellow flags (10 in all).

"We need to cut down on our penalties as you cannot afford to give a team which moves the ball as well as Duxbury the extra man advantage," Curran said. "They scored seven goals on us today with their extra-man advantage."

Grimm scored Cohasset's final goal on a man-up rocket from just inside the restraining line after a feed from Ernst, but it was not nearly enough.

Mike Grimm led Cohasset scorers with two goals and one assist. Chuck Czerkawski also had two goals. Mark Flibotte had two assists and Pete Ernst had a goal and an assist.

Curran reported that "senior co-captain Nate Porter had 19 saves and is rounding into not only a good leader on the field, but one of the better goalies on the South Shore. Nate had six or seven huge stops on the doorstep in the game which kept us in the battle."

SCHOOLS

Fourth Quarter begins!

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

Can you believe it; we are already beginning the final quarter of this year? And with the start of spring sports there is definitely a plethora of athletic events to attend. Who needs to concern themselves with the upcoming Olympic events when CHS is providing equally entertaining sports now! But who am I kidding (sorry CHS sports fans)? Nothing beats the sometimes melodramatic and overwhelmingly patriotic festivities that the summer Olympics boast every four years. Oh, the agonies and the ecstasies.

Drifting away from sports, here is a new idea, summertime! Only 26 days for seniors and slightly more for underclassmen. The excitement can barely be contained these days. It doesn't help that after this Friday it's Spring Break '08! That is all kids need now, more time to take their minds of academics and team practices. Suffice to say, all the bronzed faces and beach vacations can only result in heightened anticipation for summer! With many seniors already advertising their future schools via sweatshirts and other apparel, the reality of next year is starting to sink in.

Now, it's time for the run down of this week's main events:

• Monday: Production for the last installment of "The Spinnaker" is underway. This issue is bound to be the best one yet! Don't forget to pick one up when the time comes. Furthermore, The Girl's Tennis team served up a nice win over Notre Dame, winning 4-1!

• Tuesday: The Varsity Boys Lacrosse team defeated Norwell. The tennis team also played big rivals Norwell and won 4-1. These girls are on a roll!

• Wednesday: The Varsity Girls Lacrosse team suited it up as they faced off on home turf against Norwell. Additionally, it was the deadline for senior scholarship applications.

• Thursday: The Girl's Softball and Tennis teams traveled to East Bridgewater to compete on enemy grounds. Luckily for the boys, their baseball game versus EB was played on Cohasset's very own Beechwood field.

• Friday: The last day before Spring Break!!

Well, that's it for me this week. Have a fun and safe vacation everyone!

CEF hosts first Spelling Bee

By Sarah Murphy
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

What is a competition without controversy? Several of the fourth grade teams were quickly eliminated by the word B-E-L-I-E-V-E, which will undoubtedly be moved to the Challenge Word List next year!

The Cohasset Education Foundation's Children's Spelling Bee was a huge success, raising more than $5,000 for the Cohasset Public Schools. Spellers in grades two through five participated in this first annual event at the Cohasset Middle High School. The auditorium was abuzz with great excitement as 160 spellers eagerly anticipated their chance to go on stage with their teammates and test their skills. Parents, community members and school faculty alike came out to support the Foundation's efforts.

Emcee Superintendent, Dr. Denise Walsh had her work cut out for her with the second grade teams. The PSO's Read-A-Thon had prepared them well as 17 teams competed for over an hour to get down to three teams. With only "The Queen Bees," "The Golden Hornets" and the "Bee Friends" left, Dr. Walsh had to come up with a difficult word. And, it was the word D-I-F-F-I-C-U-L-T that ended the Bee. Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan proudly presented the trophies to the second grade champions, Caitlin Conrad, Aidan Chamberlain and Emily Moy of "Bee Friends."

You could feel the excitement as Town Manager Bill Griffin announced the 51 third grade spellers. After three rounds of competition you could hear a pin drop as emcee Beth Marat, a foreign language teacher at the CMHS, pronounced – vegetable – a plant with edible parts – My favorite vegetable is broccoli – vegetable. "The Buzz Bombs," "The Der-Bees" and the "Spelltics" had a challenging championship round, until the Spelltics were the only team to correctly spell C-O-U-G-H. Congratulations Brigie Driscoll, Claire Glavin and Katie McKeon.

What is a competition without controversy? Several of the fourth grade teams were quickly eliminated by the word B-E-L-I-E-V-E, which will undoubtedly be moved to the Challenge Word List next year! I am certain that fourth grade teacher Mike Lewis, who also served as a judge, was impressed when the "Secret Weapon" word list had to be used to end a round of competition. Emcees and hosts of "Our Town," Pat Martin and Mark DiGiacomo, kept the competition lively and spirited as the "POLLENators," "J.A.M" and "Bee Happy" teams battled through words like announcer and dynamite, but it was P-E-R-S-I-S-T that had Principal Dr. Jennifer deChiara on stage handing out trophies to Morgan Fechter, Julia Stanganelli and Maria Waters of the "Bee Happy" team.

The "Busy Buzzers," "Joybuzzers," "Spelling Buzzers" and "Super Spellers" of grade five had only one round of competition. It was highly competitive with many challenging words. Luckily we had firefighter Ron Forde and police officer Lisa Matos on hand as judges to perform CPR if necessary. Emcee CMHS teacher Stephanie Noble, along with additional judges and volunteers, Ralph and Jackie Dormitzer, and Paul and Tanya Carlson, were impressed with all of the fifth-grade spellers on stage and grateful not to have to spell the winning word, E-N-V-I-R-O-N-M-E-N-T. Way to go, "Spelling Buzzers," Bridgette Berube, Sara Chojnacki and Christine Guinee.

Hats off to all of the spelling bee participants for their effort and for mastering the sport of spelling. They are all winners.

Now's the time to head to the Caribbean

Stephen Jermanok
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

BOSTON - My coupon-carrying mom taught me to love a good bargain. And one of the best bargains in travel happens every April 15, when prices in the Caribbean drop dramatically until high season picks up again in mid-December.

Spring is a great time to visit the region. Unlike Central America, where the rainy season rears its ugly head in the spring, the Caribbean gets very little rain this time of year. Temperatures hover in the mid-80s. So the islands continue to tease us with their bright sunshine while many of us are still dealing with a cold and often damp April and May. And without the winter crowds you may have the beach practically to yourself.

But what about summer and those dreaded hurricanes, you ask? Summer happens to be a great time to visit too. Hurricane season starts in early June and runs through October, with August and September usually the height of the stormy season. The good news is, unlike tornadoes, hurricanes come with advance warning. Travelers who have the flexibility to wait until the last minute will know exactly where the hurricanes are headed if they are, indeed, in the region. The reward for your brave undertaking is a big discount at resorts off the exorbitant high-season rates - look for savings of up to 50 percent.

And not all the region is hurricane prone. If you are afraid of storms, head to the southern Caribbean, especially the "ABC" islands of Aruba, Bonaire and Curacao. The last major hurricane to slap those islands was way back in 1877. Visit the ABCs - as well as neighbors Trinidad, Tobago and Margarita Island, just off the Venezuelan coast - and you have less than a 2 percent chance of encountering a major storm, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Another southern island, Barbados, has no time to fret about bad weather: They celebrate their annual Crop Over, a five-week festival with live calypso music every night, parades and more, pegged to the sugar harvest in August.

Caribbean deals are sweet this year as hotels and airlines try to court travelers in a sluggish economy. Holiday Inn Sunspree Resorts in Jamaica and Aruba have launched a 50 percent off sale from April through the end of June. For $180 a night per room, a family of four can stay at an all-inclusive resort on the beach in Montego Bay. The Aruba property's rate is a bit more expensive, at $283 per room, but it's still a great deal when you consider all food and alcohol are included in the cost. Call 888-HOLIDAY or visit www.holidayinn.com, and mention promo code 150.

Lush St. Lucia has created its own Web site, www.stlucianow.com, to give travelers a slice of paradise on the cheap. Book through the end of April for travel through June 20 and you could be staying at the four-star boutique hotel Coco Kreole for a four-day, three-night getaway. Cost is $599 per person, round-trip, including flight from the East Coast.

Resorts on the U.S. Virgin Islands, St. Croix, St. Thomas and St. John, have banded together for a Sizzling Summer Savings promotion that offers a free fifth night and various resort credits and gift cards at shops. Properties across the islands are participating including The Buccaneer on St. Croix, The Westin St. John and the Wyndham Sugar Bay Beach Resort & Spa on St. Thomas. The offer is valid for bookings made from May through October. Find more information at usvitourism.vi.

The Dominican Republic and Mexico are the best value travel destinations in the Caribbean year-round. On the newly discovered North Coast of the Dominican Republic, check out the Allegro Playa Dorada, an all-inclusive near Puerto Plata that's letting kids stay for free from May until the end of December. Save as much as $730 on a five-night getaway, with all-inclusive summer rates as low as $173 per night. All the Occidental-Allegro properties in Mexico (Allegro Cozumel, Allegro Nuevo Vallarta, Allegro Playacar) have similar deals this summer. Call 800-858-2258 or visit www.occidentalhotels.com.

There's a new reason to be joyous on the white sands of Antigua's Jolly Beach. From April through late December, the all-inclusive Jolly Beach Resort (866-905-6559, www.jollybeachresort.com) will take an additional 15 percent off for adults and let the first child stay free. Summer rates from $250 per night.

On Grand Bahama Island, stay in Freeport at the Sheraton Grand Bahama Island Our Lucaya (800-325-3535, www.starwoodhotels.com) and you'll no doubt be saying TGIF. Their "Free Fridays" program allows guests to book a three-night stay for only $178 per person, through Sept. 1. Add $5 per child, 11 and under. The promotion also includes a free breakfast, happy hour and unlimited golf on Fridays.

It's your choice this summer. Fight the crowds at your favorite U.S. beach spot or leave your footprint in the Caribbean sand.

Lifeline for children in developing countries

Local organization is making a difference

By Carol Britton Meyer

STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Dick Weisberg points to the six projects they have in Haiti and the Dominican Republic while Tim Bilodeau points to their project in the Darfur province of Sudan on a world map in their office. They have 16 projects throughout the world.

Timothy Bilodeau, a resident of neighboring Hull, created Medicines for Humanity because he wanted to make a real difference in the world.

People often set that as their goal, but Bilodeau is actually doing it. MFH, with strong ties to Hingham and other South Shore communities, offers a lifeline to children in developing countries. (Residents of Hingham, Duxbury, Hanover, Hull, and Sharon serve on the board and as staff members, along with members from European cities such as Geneva, Switzerland, and Grenoble, France, and other regions of the United States.)

"There's no other problem that matches the injustice of innocent children dying from diseases that are simple to treat or prevent," said Bilodeau, who serves as executive director.

Bilodeau's wife, Cathy, teaches for the South Shore Collaborative, which has classrooms in several South Shore towns. She currently teaches a classroom of autistic children at their Norwell location.

This Rockland-based non-profit organization helps replace the cycle of death and despair with one of life and hope by providing reliable healthcare providers in impoverished communities in Africa, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Jamaica, and Central and South America with critically needed basic medicines.

MFH is able to purchase medicines from European sources and suppliers at about five percent of wholesale prices. (See related sidebar.)

MFH also helps its partners to implement effective healthcare initiatives. More partnerships with developing countries are in the works. "It's one person, community, and site at a time," Bilodeau said.

"Twenty thousand children die each day because they lack basic healthcare and medicines," said Hingham resident Richard Weisberg, MFH's director of development. "As frustrating as it is that we can help only about 1 percent of those children, we do know the names of the people we're helping in these communities. Our partners are our heroes. Day after day they're in the trenches in unbelievable conditions making magic happen as they improve healthcare for women and children."

"Dr. Damian Javier (known as "Dr. Tony"), who serves 32 bateye communities (little villages set among the sugar cane fields) in the Dominican Republic, is one example of this dedication to helping children, even under difficult conditions.

"These people are the equivalent of modern-day slaves," Weisberg said. "They live in shacks made of crates and rusted metal, with no running water or electricity. But their children are beautiful. They are loving people, but they know no other existence. Yet share the same hopes for their families as we do — health, happiness, and peace of mind."

Javier was one of those children many years ago. Because he wanted a better life, he walked five miles over rutted roads and through sugar cane fields to attend high school in a neighboring town. He did so well that an individual he met took an interest in him and paid for him to go to college, where he earned a medical degree.

"Dr. Tony is still in the Dominican Republic today, because he promised himself if he ever became a doctor he wouldn't forget where he came from," Weisberg said. "Every day he puts on clean clothes and polished shoes and drives a mobile van into the bateyes to examine children and fill prescriptions. It's an amazing story."

What hits closest to home for Weisberg is that under different circumstances, "this could be me and my children. We all have the same innocent beginning in live, but these children are faced with this horrible existence because there's no infrastructure in their communities to support their lives," he said. "Our purpose is to protect these innocent children."

Bilodeau founded MFH in 1997 on the premise that no child should die from lack of these basics. Weisberg came onboard later after the two men met when their sons were on the same basketball team. They coached together effectively then, and that same team approach and spirit continue today in their MFH work.

"Dick and I are both passionate about what we're doing. We feel that lives are in jeopardy if we don't take action," Bilodeau said. "To the extent we're successful, lives will be saved. To the extent that we're not, lives will be lost. We share a sense of responsibility as well as fulfillment."

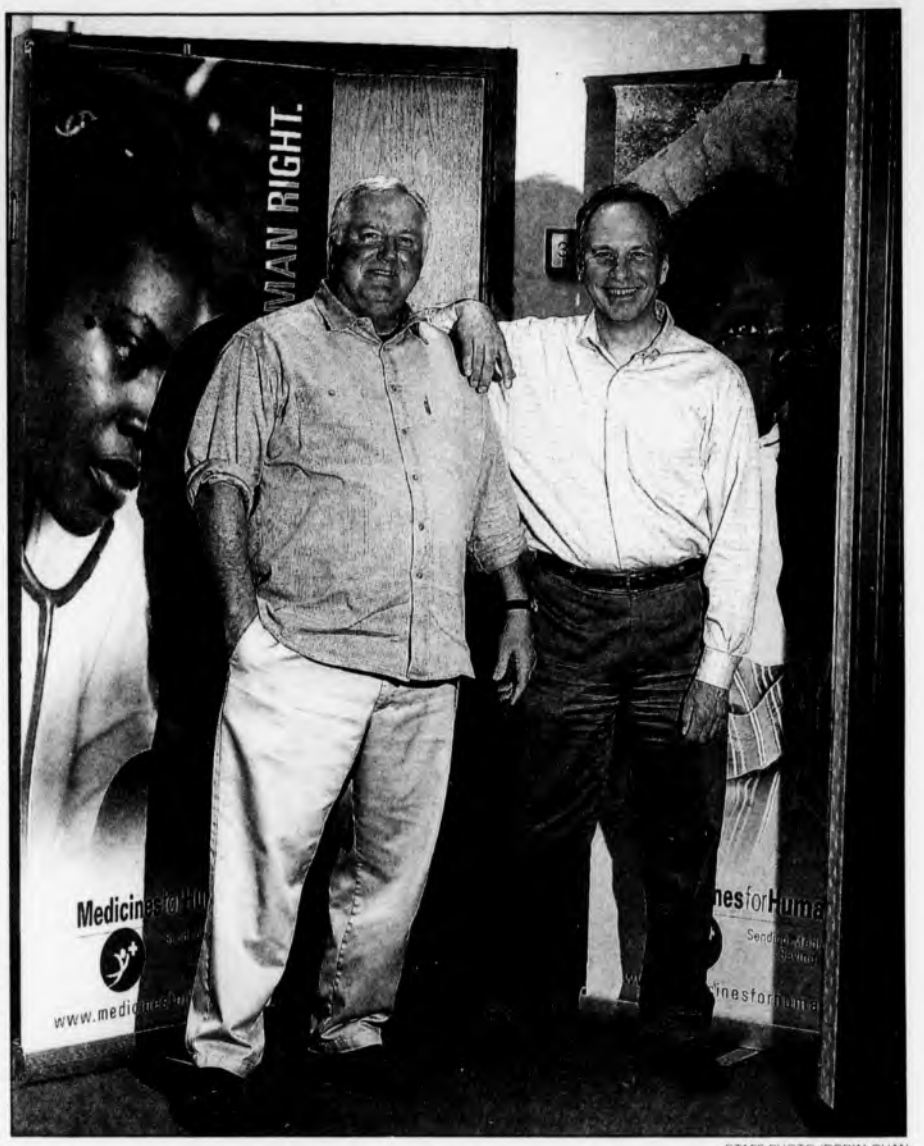
Bilodeau shared the events that led up to the creation of MFH.

"When I was 40 years old, I felt a desire, dating back to my 1960s youth, to get involved in something meaningful beyond the executive search work I was doing," Bilodeau said.

"After reading a story about the Por Cristo agency, which sends doctors to work with children in Ecuador, I decided I wanted to get involved with life and death issues and try to make a difference."

Because of his interest in saving lives, he was asked to join the Por Cristo board and travel to Ecuador. "Thus began my involvement with international health care," Bilodeau said.

He met a missionary priest, Father Frank, who was living in a shanty in a slum area of Ecuador overlooking a river basin, along with 300,000 other people. "There were a lot of health problems among the people living in huts," Bilodeau recalled.



His most heart-wrenching experience there was seeing the priest embracing a crying woman whose three-year-old son had died that day.

"She was asking the priest for Medicines for Humanity serves the world's most vulnerable children, 20,000 of which still die every day from preventable diseases.

forgiveness because although her son had been sick, she had other children who were hungry and so decided to spend the money she had on food," said Bilodeau. "The woman said she thought her son would get better and so didn't buy any medicine and now was asking to be forgiven for making the wrong choice."

MFH was conceived on the spot following that experience. "No parent should have to make that choice," he said.

Child mortality

That firsthand approach continues today. "Tim's solution is to visit the country itself to meet with the people of the community in order to understand who they are and what they need. They work together to determine what the appropriate response might be and whether there is a credible resource in the community to partner with us," Weisberg said. "We're not just sending medicines to Third World countries not knowing whose hands they're getting into."

Medicines for Humanity has a very tight focus on child mortality in the developing world, "the things that cause it, and how to treat them," Bilodeau said. "A driving force is the strong sense of injustice that innocent children are dying unnecessarily. Because we're small and focused, our benefactors feel an intense personal connection to the work."

Bilodeau was particularly struck by the fact that almost three out of 10 Angolan children don't reach their fifth birthday.

Weisberg noted that while economists often describe poverty as "getting along on $2 a day or less, we work in places where families are surviving on less than $1 a day."

Those served by MFH's healthcare partners are asked to pay a 25-cent co-pay if they can afford it to help preserve their dignity. The money is used by healthcare workers to pay for gasoline to visit the site again the next day to offer services to even more children and families.

MFH's partners are typically service-minded religious groups dedicated to the impoverished people they serve. This collaboration builds upon the trust and bonds these groups have already established within their own communities.

While those with whom MFH partners have the necessary clinical knowledge to save the maximum number of lives, they often lack the medicines necessary to accomplish this goal and the financial resources to implement effective children's health initiatives.

In addition to donating and shipping medicines for children, MFH provides the means for pre-natal care for women.

" Twenty thousand children die each day because they lack basic healthcare and medicines," Bilodeau said." And they're dying from diseases that could be prevented or treated – diarrhea, acute respiratory infection, malaria, measles, and malnutrition — if these basics were available."

Health education

Health education is an important component – "simple nutritional education, teaching children to wash their hands, and helping parents learn what is good for their children," Weisberg said.

Maxime Salon on Derby Street recently began a charitable partnership with MFH and donates $1 from every client service provided.

"Even five dollars can make a difference in countries MFH serves," said owner Ronit Enos.

Maxime is the first local business to reach out to MFH. "It's part of the bigger vision of being citizens of the world," Weisberg said. "We're hoping others will also join the effort, get a firsthand sense of the working of a project [in a particular developing country], and then determine what the needs are and help us connect with resources once they come back."

Partnering with impoverished communities

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Medicines for Humanity, based in Rockland, is dedicated to saving the lives of children living in impoverished communities worldwide by providing basic medicines and healthcare support.

MFH's slogan "Sending Medicines/Saving Lives" is rooted in its partnership with 17 of the world's most impoverished communities. MFH helps local healthcare partners in the countries it serves implement effective health initiatives for children as they work toward becoming self-sustaining organizations on both the clinical and business sides.

"We supply our partners with funding, technical assistance, project planning, and trouble shooting to make a difference in those communities," said MFH Executive Director Timothy Bilodeau. "We help our partners find the resources they need. We're capacity builders."

The Project Lifeline program is at the heart of these efforts, identifying reliable local healthcare partners in areas of high child mortality and providing them with the necessary tools to carry out their work.

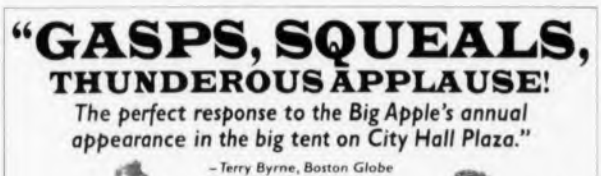
"This helps them build their capacity to save lives now as well as in years to come," Bilodeau said.

He founded MFH more than a decade ago in direct response to this dilemma, with a priority on getting essential medicines into the hands of people working in emergency and relief situations in developing countries.

Realizing that most nonprofit organizations relied on donations of short-dated medicines and were unable to respond with the specific medicines needed in a timely fashion, MFH researched reliable and low-cost manufacturers and suppliers of basic medicines in order to explore the possibility of purchasing them at an affordable price.

MFH went on to develop a network of pharmaceutical suppliers in the United States and Europe who were willing to provide necessary medicines at a fraction of U.S. wholesale prices.

Through its MedShare program, MFH provides essential medicines at the same low cost to other U.S.-based non-profits working in developing countries. The program is financially self-sustaining because an administrative fee is charged for each shipment sent to participating organizations.



"They share the same hopes for their families as we do – health, happiness, and peace of mind."'

Mock train disaster drill set for April 27

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Public safety officials hope there will never be a train crash in Hingham, but they want to be prepared, just in case.

Hingham Fire Chief Mark Duff was approached by the MBTA last year and asked to stage a mass casualty incident involving the train.

"I jumped at the chance," Duff said. "This is a wonderful training opportunity."

The mock crash will take place on Sun., April 27, from about 8:30 to 11 a.m. at the Water Street grade crossing (near the Fruit Center) and will involve a car, a school bus, and a train. There will be a debriefing following the drill.

Public safety officials from Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Weymouth, and Braintree and representatives from the Massachusetts Bay Commuter Railroad Company will take part in the drill. Members of the Hingham Citizens Police Academy Alumni Association and other volunteers will also participate.

"We will be living with the train for the rest of our lives and beyond, and we want to know where the bumps in the road are and what needs to be tweaked."
— Police Chief Taylor Mills

"Fifteen or 20 'patients' will be transported to local hospitals, and there will be some walking wounded," Duff said. "Between 12 and 14 ambulances will be on the scene."

A command post and staging area will also be set up.

"We believe this is the best place for the drill because we can use the parking lot there," Duff said. "There are few cars there on a Sunday morning."

Hingham Police Chief Taylor Mills emphasized the important of alerting the public in advance of the event to inform them that a drill and not an actual disaster is unfolding before their eyes.

"There will be a media blitz and signboards alerting people to avoid Water Street during the mock crash," Mills said. "This is an exciting, hands-on opportunity. We want to get as many of our officers involved and observing the event as possible."

Duff was quick to note that the drill can be stopped or altered if necessary and that sufficient public safety coverage will be in place in the event a real emergency should occur while the mock train crash is taking place. "We're fully prepared," he said.

A large gathering of spectators is expected. "We're working for the public so we will do everything we can to set up a safe viewing area to ensure spectators can watch the event comfortably without getting in the way," Mills said. Most of the activity will occur on the harbor side of the tracks. The train involved in the mock crash will be heading toward Scituate.

Greenbush rail service between the West Hingham Station and Nantasket Junction will be temporarily suspended that morning, but bus service will be available between the two stations to accommodate commuters.

The event will be videotaped for future viewing by fire and police department personnel, town officials, and others. "We'll learn a lot about our response to this type of situation from this drill," Mills said.

Once the mock crash and debriefing have been concluded, the Hingham police and fire departments will provide a tour of the tunnel from a safety perspective for public safety officials from other towns who were involved in the drill.

"The tunnel is more complex than you'd think," Duff said. "There's a curve that doesn't allow a straight view."

BUSINESS NOTES

Cohasset native opens data center in Waltham

ColoSpace, Inc., New England's fastest growing Managed Hosting and Outsourced Data Center Services company has opened a new 16,000 SF Data Center and Network Operations Center (NOC) on Winter Street, in Waltham, in the center of the 128 Technology Belt.

Co-founder and COO Aaron Sawchuk, a Cohasset native, said this new facility will serve the immediate needs of local firms desiring high availability Internet access from more than six carriers currently serving their facility, and along with high density (200 watt per square foot) electrical capacity.

Sawchuk said, "Many firms in the area are faced with serious shortages of power to handle the new blade server environments, and as summer approaches they will feel the impact of their undersized cooling systems".

ColoSpace currently manages several thousand servers, as well as provides space and power for many more non-managed customer owned servers, located in private cabinets and cages within their six existing data centers.

The Waltham site was previously built out for a national network provider, Giant Loops in 2001, and after upgrading is now reopening under ColoSpace ownership.

"We have been experiencing tremendous growth over the past several years, and were thrilled to find this opportunity, to roll out a new data center location in a mere eight weeks, compared to the normal 12-18 months it would take us to fit out an entirely new facility," Sawchuk added.

ColoSpace was founded in 2001, and serves many Fortune 1,000 companies, and local firms in the healthcare, financial services, and high tech fields. All six ColoSpace facilities are currently undergoing their 2008 Type II SAS 70 audits, which will be complete this summer, making them part of the select group of data center facilities in the Northeast meeting the new stringent standards.

Or, sponsors can reach more than 300 active members with an ad in the monthly newsletter for a nominal charge.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
APRIL 14, 2008

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A little woolgathering is OK. But don't let that dreamy state linger beyond midweek, when you'll want to be ready to take on new workplace responsibilities.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Love rules the week for single Bovines seeking romance. Attached pairs also find new joy in their relationships. Friday should bring news about a business opportunity.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Home becomes the center of a new social whirl, as you show your talent for hosting great parties. You can expect to impress a lot of people who've never seen this side of you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The Moon Child might have to raise those powers of persuasion a notch to get a still-wary colleague to agree to go along. Finding more facts to back up your position helps.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Hold off trying to fix the blame for an apparent mishandling of a work situation. A full investigation could reveal surprising facts on how and why it really happened.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your ability to find details others might overlook gives you an advantage in assessing a possibly too-good-to-be-true offer. A trusted colleague has advice.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect to be called on once again to act as peacemaker in a long-simmering dispute that suddenly flares up. Offer advice, but be careful to stay out of the fray.

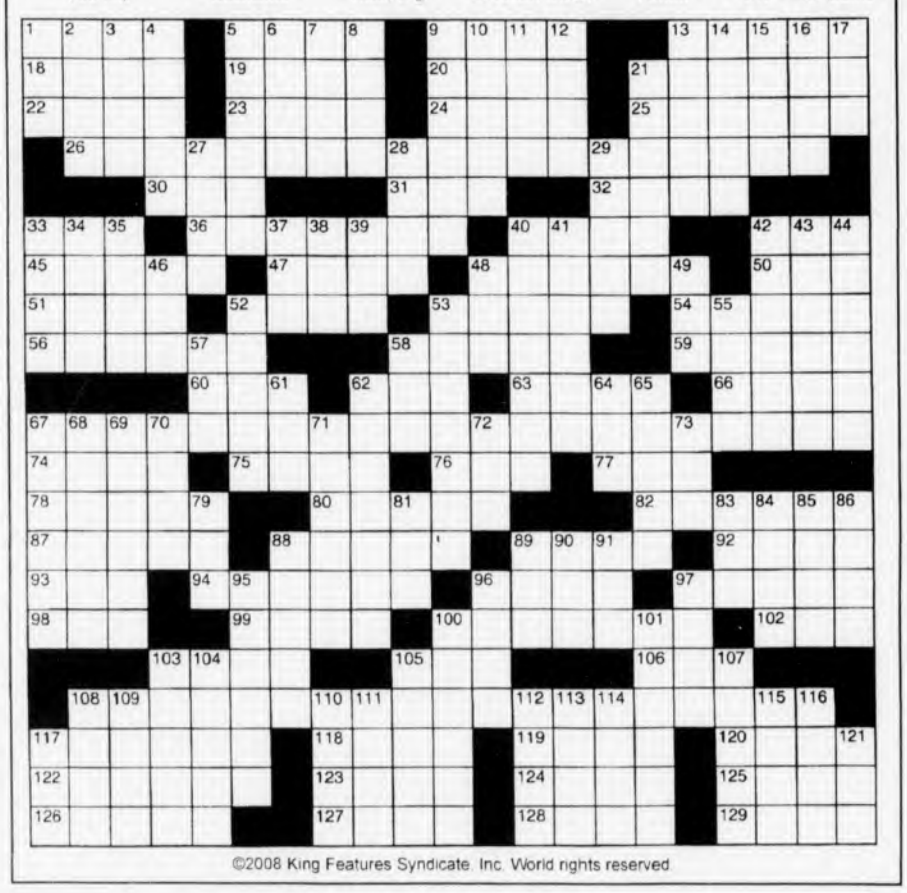
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your organizational skills help you line up your priorities so that you get things done without added pressure. The weekend could hold a special surprise.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) New ventures are favored. But don't launch yours before rechecking all facts and sources. Also, be sure you can rely on support from certain people.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't be pushed into renegotiating an agreement, even though it might help avoid a potential impasse. Get legal advice before you sign or agree to anything.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Helping others is what Aquarians do so well. But this time, someone wants to help you. Expect to hear some news that will both surprise and delight you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Things go so swimmingly that you're tempted to take on more tasks. Best advice: Finish what you have now, then enjoy a well-earned relaxing weekend.



(c) 2008 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your understanding of human nature helps you make wise decisions that are appreciated by all. You would make a fine judge.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Organist Guzasky in concert at St. Stephen's

St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset will be presenting organist G. Fredrick Guzasky in a recital at 3 p.m. on Sunday, May 11.

Dr. Guzasky is an Affiliated Artist at MIT in Cambridge, a professor at Bridgewater State College, and maintains a large studio of organ and piano students. The performance will feature music of Bach, Langlais, Brahms, and Rheinberger, as well as some of Guzasky's own improvisations – all played on the church's Aeolian-Skinner organ.

As a recitalist, he has performed in New England and the Midwest, as well as Russia, Latvia, and England, receiving the Boston University Outstanding Performance Award and the EMACT Award in conducting. Highlights of more recent seasons include tours of Russia and Latvia, with engagements at the Cathedral of Riga, the Kapella Concert Hall in St. Petersburg, Russia, as well as teaching master classes at the St. Petersburg Conservatory. Other venues have included performances at St. Paul's Cathedral, Holy Trinity Church in New York, and the Frank Lloyd Wright Home and Studio.

As a composer, he has to his credit several Masses, numerous choral anthems, including a series based on Russian Orthodox texts, and a number of instrumental works. Dr. Guzasky is also author of the "Gregorian Chant Handbook," and is known as a chant clinician in the Boston area. He is also director of the Slava Chorale, a Boston based group of professional singers that perform Russian and Greek music.

'Seventh Inning Stretch' at New North Church

New North Church, 1 Lincoln St., Hingham will welcome Dr. William Herzog, dean of faculty at Andover Newton Theological School and a devoted Red Sox fan, for a two-part examination of the connection between baseball and faith on Sunday, April 27.

Herzog will preach at the 10:30 a.m. service on "The Seventh Inning Stretch." Following the service, he will be joined by David Mehegan of the Boston Globe at an after-church luncheon for a discussion on baseball, faith and America's fascination with its national pastime.

The entire community is invited to this special event, which is the third in New North's Sunday Brunch Series. Previous speakers in the series were Melvin Miller, publisher of the Bay State Banner newspaper, and the Rev. Liz Walker, the former WBZ-TV broadcaster.

Herzog is respected for his Biblical scholarship, his teaching style and his commitment to justice. In addition to being a professor and administrator at Andover Newton, he is an author who has published three studies of the historical Jesus. He is fascinated by baseball and its place in the American psyche as an embodiment of the quest for faith. Herzog is co-author of "The Faith of Fifty Million: Essays on Baseball, Religion and American Culture."

'The Drowsy Chaperone' is fresh and different

Engel happy to be on stage

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Robert Dorfman and Georgia Engel star in "The Drowsy Chaperone" playing at the Colonial Theater in Boston through May 4.

Georgia Engel has enjoyed her biggest success with roles on television, in "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "Everybody Loves Raymond," but as long as she's in good company, the actress says she's just as happy on stage.

"It brings my own work up to be surrounded by great performers," explained Engel last week from Chicago. "Two times in my television career, I've had the chance to work with the best comic actors in the business including Mary Tyler Moore, Ed Asner and Betty White, and also Ray Romano, Peter Boyle and Doris Roberts. And, more recently, it was my great good fortune to work on Broadway with master comic actor Bob Martin in "The Drowsy Chaperone," which he not only starred in, but also co-wrote."

Engel originated the role of the absent-minded dowager, Mrs. Tottendale, in the original Broadway company of the musical which won five 2006 Tony Awards, including Best Book for a Musical and Best Original Score, and is now playing the role on the show's national tour which comes to Boston's Opera House Tuesday, April 22, for a two-week run, before beginning a one-week run at the Providence Performing Arts Center Tuesday, May 6.

"I've been with the show since it came to the U.S. from Canada," says Engel, who recalls quietly thinking she might be in a hit show during an out-of-town Los Angeles run prior to Broadway. "Our director, Casey Nicholaw was very strict with us from the beginning. He told us not to assume anything. We got raves in L.A., but Casey made it clear that we should not assume success in New York. We sneaked in under the radar two years ago and opened against five other major shows, all of which closed pretty quickly while ours ran for 674 performances."

Engel believes at a time when many recent Broadway shows ("Legally Blonde," "The Wedding Singer," "Young Frankenstein," to name but a few) have been based on movies, "The Drowsy Chaperone" offers something fresh and different.

"This is a very cleverly written and smart comedy," Engel said. "It is different, too, because it is not based on something else. This makes it so much more fun for theatergoers who enjoy the unexpected and like to have a fast-paced good time."

The good time is one being shared with the main character, a musical theater devotee known only as "Man in Chair," who chases the blues away by listening to his favorite cast album – a 1928 musical comedy by the name of "The Drowsy Chaperone." Just as soon as the needle is dropped on the vinyl, the musical comes to life with its over-the-top tale of a pampered Broadway starlet who wants to trade show business for marriage, much to the chagrin of her producer who stops at nothing to keep his star from walking down the aisle. With a cast of characters that includes the bride-to-be, her debonair groom, a ditsy chorus girl, a suave Latin lothario, not to mention a pair of gun-wielding gangsters who double as pastry chefs, the single-act show lovingly spoofs old-style Broadway musicals, a genre with which Engel, 59, is very familiar.

Georgia Engel

"I was studying at the University of Hawaii when I was locally cast in 'Hello, Dolly!' when it came through Honolulu, with Barbara Cook, on its Australian tour. I got my Equity card with that production and when I graduated from college a year early, I headed straight to New York. By late 1969, I joined the Broadway company of 'Hello, Dolly!' with Phyllis Diller who was replaced a few months later by Ethel Merman."

Engel was just 21-years-old at the time, but already well aware that Merman was the very biggest of Broadway stars.

"The whole company was thrilled to be working with Ethel Merman," Engel said. "Her reputation was very formidable, of course, but she was tremendously professional. And, as a performer, she was absolutely magical. About 15 years ago, someone sent me a bootleg audiotape of a performance of Ethel in 'Hello, Dolly!' The sound quality wasn't very good. You couldn't understand any of us, but Miss Merman you could hear very clearly."

What started as a professional relationship soon became a friendship that Engel fondly recalls to this day.

"I loved Miss Merman very much," Engel said. "At my mother's insistence, she even joined my family for Christmas Eve in 1970. My father, Rear Admiral Benjamin Franklin Engel, was the second-highest ranking person in the Coast Guard so we were living in a beautiful house on Governor's Island off of New York. My grandmother was a lovely woman, but unsophisticated. After dinner she turned to Miss Merman and said 'Ethel, now how about a song?' Miss Merman took it all in stride and said, 'I only sing when I'm being paid.' She did join us, however, when we sang Christmas carols."

From Broadway, Engel headed to Hollywood where, in 1972, she joined "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" as the shy and sweet Georgette Franklin, girlfriend of unctuously idiotic anchorman Ted Baxter (Ted Knight). In the 30 years since Mary Richards famously turned off the lights for the last time in the WJM newsroom, Engel has found continued success with recurring roles on the sitcoms "Coach" and "Everybody Loves Raymond."

"On one of my favorite episodes of 'Raymond,' I had the thrill of working one-on-one with Ray Romano," Engel said. "I loved doing that scene. It was like a perfect game of badminton."

Her earlier experience with another long-running CBS-TV series also left Engel with some lasting memories.

"Mary Tyler Moore and I took ballet classes together every day on the set at lunchtime, so when the time came she really wanted me to dance on the show," Engel said. "It was in an episode called 'Murray Can't Lose,' set at an awards show. Georgette danced in a very funny number set to 'Steam Heat.' The episode ran long, however, and my dance number was almost cut. Ted Knight didn't want to lose any of his lines, but both Mary and Ed Asner agreed to have some of theirs cut so I could do my dance number. To this day, Mary and Ed's generosity is very special to my heart."

Later this month, Engel will join Moore, Asner, White, Gavin MacLeod and other surviving cast members (Knight died of cancer in 1986) of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" in Chicago to tape a special reunion for this season's final episode of "The Oprah Winfrey Show." Engel is eager to be with her old friends.

"When we get together, we still finish each other's sentences," Engel said. "Betty White and I will fly back together from Chicago to Boston. I'll be in Boston with 'The Drowsy Chaperone' and Betty will be in town to film a movie. Betty is one of my closest friends as is Monica Horan who played my daughter, Amy, on 'Raymond.' Betty and Monica are both very, very special to me."

"The Drowsy Chaperone" will be at the Opera House, 539 Washington St., Boston, April 22-May 4. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-931-2787 or go online at broadwayacrossamerica.com. The musical will be at the Providence Performing Arts Center, 220 Weybosset St., Providence, R.I., May 6-11. 'The Letterman' are still going strong

Pop group to perform at Norwell's Company Theatre

R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

The Lettermen will perform this weekend at The Company Theatre in Norwell.

Before there were New Kids on the Block, The Backstreet Boys or 'N Sync, there were The Lettermen, the very first of the boy bands according to Tony Butala who, as that latter group's once and still lead singer, was the Justin Timberlake of his generation.

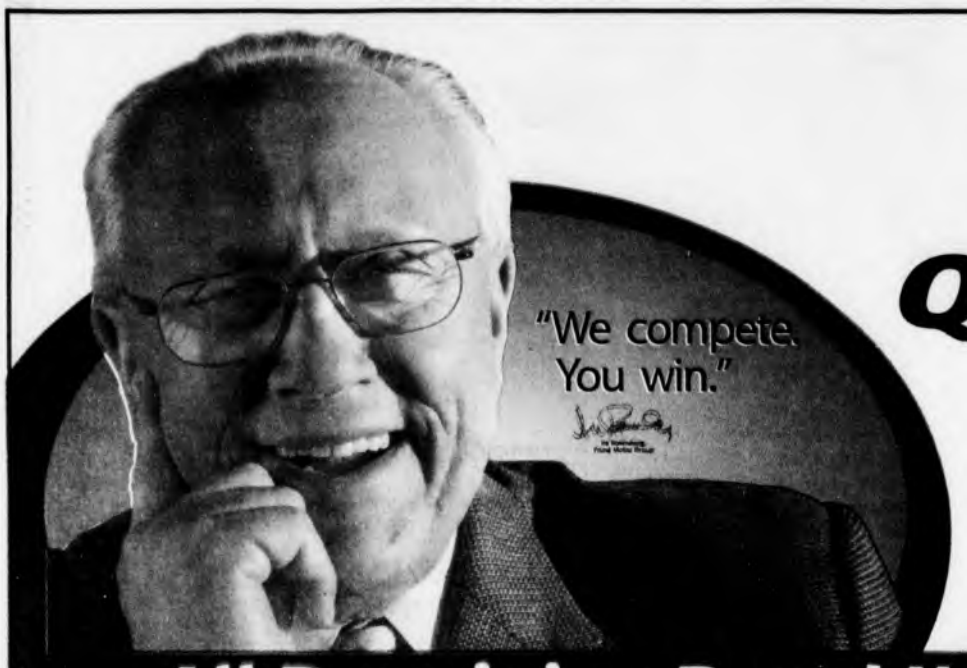
"I put together the first boy band when I formed The Lettermen in the late 1950s," recalled Butala by telephone from his Napa Valley vineyard last week of the group that will be at Norwell's Company Theatre for two shows Sunday. "I looked for the best singers and dancers and also the best-looking young men I could find. Mike Barnett, Talmadge Russell and I made our debut as The Lettermen in a revue called 'Newcomers of 1928,' which starred singer Rudy Vallee, silent film legend Buster Keaton, and big band-leader Paul Whiteman, which broke records at the old Desert Inn in Las Vegas."

In that production, Butala played the role of Bing Crosby, who had toured in the 1920s with Whiteman's orchestra. It was an interesting twist of career fate for the Pennsylvania-born Butala, who as young teenager had appeared with Crosby in the 1954 feature film "White Christmas."

By 1960, The Lettermen – with lead vocalist Butala now joined by Jim Pike and Bob Engemann – were signed to Warner Brothers Records and released their first singles, "Their Hearts Were Full of Spring," "When," "The Magic Sound" and "Two Hearts." When these early recordings came to the attention of Nic Venet, a young Capitol Records executive, the trio was signed to what would become a 25-year contract with Capitol. Soon, the vocal trio began climbing the charts with hits like "The Way You Look Tonight," "When I Fall in Love" and "Come Back Silly Girl."

When the Beatles-led British invasion reshaped the American music scene in the 1960s, Butala says The Lettermen held their own by remaining true to their musical style with songs like "Put Your Head on My Shoulder" and "Hurt So Bad."

"The Lettermen have never been a rock group, just a pop group," Butala said. "And as a pop group, we could work with Jack Benny, Bob Hope, Dinah Shore, and Jackie Gleason, when rock groups weren't getting those kinds of television bookings. We were regulars on 'The Red Skelton Show' and made many, many appearances on 'The Ed Sullivan Show,' too. And we toured with everyone from Jerry Lewis and Dean Martin to Jimmy Durante and Debbie Reynolds. We were recording artists first and foremost, but we were also entertainers."



While his fellow Lettermen have changed over the years – with current members Donovan Tea and Mark Preston joining in 1984 – the 68-year-old Butala continues to perform some 100 shows a year while also serving as founder and chairman of The Vocal Group Hall of Fame Foundation and Museum in Sharon, Pa.

"Even after all these years, I'm proud to say we're not a nostalgia or oldies group," Butala said. "Every year, we analyze what we've done and we set about creating a new, fresh show. We never wear last year's clothes and we never repeat last year's show. When we go on the road we're not making a comeback. Some of our audiences are making comebacks, but not us. We've never left."

The Lettermen will be at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, for two shows, at 3 and 7 p.m., Sunday, April 20. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787 or go online at companytheatre.com.

Cohasset middle-high students help with clean up

About 30 students showed up on Tuesday morning to join the clean up.

Mother Nature seemed to recognize Tuesday, April 22 was Earth Day and pulled out all the stops in celebration. The picture perfect spring day — sunny skies, temperatures in the high sixties and a brisk, salty breeze — made getting outside an easy choice.

Under the direction of Cohasset High teachers and members of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, high school students grabbed a pair of gloves and pitched in to make two tracts of land a cleaner place. About 30 students showed up on Tuesday morning to join the clean up.

Varsity lacrosse players of the boys and girls teams, community service students and just plain volunteers split into two groups. One group headed to upper King Street near the water treatment plant and the other group undertook the Conservation Trust's Giuggio Scenic Overlook off Jerusalem Road. Both spots, organizers said, were targeted because they are routinely used as dumping spots for cars passing by.

"We thought a project like this would be good because it gets kids involved in the becoming stewards of the town and helping to keep beautiful places (like Giuggio overlook) clean," said Cohasset Conservation Trust president Debbie Shadd. "They can enjoy the special qualities of the site while cleaning it up."

What the students found at Giuggio Scenic Overlook was bagfuls of trash. Soda cans, flower pots, beer bottles, tires, papers, plastic bags, pressure treated wood were just a few of the items found on the Giuggio scenic overlook.

At the spot on upper King Street, just beyond the water treatment plant, the high school students, mostly from the boys lacrosse team filled an truck bed full of trash in just 35 minutes.

In total over 30 bags were taken to the Transfer Center requiring two trips. A bicycle, pieces of telephone poles, twisted pieces of metal from cars and a cell phone.

The Giuggio outlook hadn't been cleaned up in years, said Shadd. The three lots spanning 348 feet of land along the east side of Jerusalem Road overlooking the salt meadow, Rice Island and Little Harbor beyond were donated by John and Barbara Giuggio in November 1993. The Conservation Trust owns the land. Its steep grade down to the marsh makes the spot an attractive place to dispose of litter because once it goes over the side of the road it is out of sight.

Jim Hamilton, a Conservation Trust director, was delighted with the high turnout of volunteers despite the nice weather and school vacation week.

"Many hands make short and easy work," said Hamilton. "(The Giuggio overlook) was long overdue for a cleaning."

Hamilton also saw the project as a way to begin to introduce youth to the conservation land right in their own town. "I'd like them to learn to take some pride in what they see."

Fire chief: Open-air burning suspended

Dry weather poses danger

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Both the police department and the fire department will be keeping their eyes out for residents burning without a permit.

This past weekend's warm temperatures and sunny skies provided a great excuse to get outside. Many took to the sidewalks for some exercise and other spent the day in their yards to get them in shape for the warmer months. If residents were planning on burning all that debris they gathered they'll have to wait for a substantial rain storm.

"Due to the extremely dry conditions, all burning permits have been postponed until further notice," said Fire Chief Bob Silvia on Monday. The suspension of permits follows a request made of local fire chiefs from the state Department of Conservation and Recreation and the state Fire Marshall after over 150 wild fires were reported over the weekend.

Burning was allowed over this weekend with no incidents, said Silvia. The postponement of burning permits is a precautionary measure. Both the police department and the fire department will be keeping their eyes out for residents burning without a permit.

As an extension, Silvia said residents should be extremely careful when disposing of smoking materials.

Open-air burning permits are issued on a yearly basis to town residents. Residents are required to come down to the fire station to sign in and take a copy of the burning regulations they must follow. The regulations inform the resident of what is appropriate to burn and when it is appropriate to burn. The open burning season runs from January 15 to (and including) May 1. Burning is allowed daily during that time period between 10a.m and 4p.m. A $5 permit fee is also required.

This year to date, the fire department has issued 230 open burning permits.

Although someone may hold a open burning permit, they still need to check in with the fire department on each day they would like to burn. If burning is not

Health Board tackles diesel

School buses a prime concern

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Board of Health is taking a tough stance on diesel fuel emissions and the pollution that goes along with it. With the start of the commuter rail there is a new source of diesel fuel emissions entering Cohasset's air and the Board of Health is looking to encourage small steps to keep the pollution at a minimum.

"The effect of diesel fuel is probably more than people believe."
— Steve Bobo, Board of Health

In a letter to the School Committee in late February, the Board of Health offered encouraged the schools to take steps to minimize the diesel fuel emissions from the school bus fleet.

"The effect of diesel fuel is probably more than people believe," said Board of Health member Steve Bobo in a phone interview, adding some studies have shown exposure to diesel emissions cause a high incident of asthma and other ear, nose, throat health problems.

The Board of Health suggested several efforts the School Committee could undertake to reduce the pollution load in the town. A state grant program, Mass Clean Diesel, retrofits diesel-powered school buses to reduce air pollution and respirable particulates. In addition, they requested the school enforce the state engine idling provision, which requires that engines idle no longer than five minutes and post signage in school parking lots and turnarounds to remind drivers of the requirement.

The response from the schools indicated to Bobo they were not going to take immediate action on the issue.

"We're still going to insist something be done, we're interested in doing a number of things to reduce diesel fuel emissions," said Bobo in a phone interview.

The school's response, written by business manager Dave DeGennaro, said there were several issues with Cohasset's eligibility for the state grant program.

Before Cohasset schools can quality for the grant, an analysis has to be completed to make sure the catalyst will fit on our buses and age, make and model are considered. The grant funding requires a commitment that any retrofitted bus stay on the road for at least three more years.

"This requirement may cause a dilemma for us…our buses range in age from three years to 14 years of age. Predicting the useful life of a school bus can be very difficult," stated DeGennaro.

DeGennaro stated the engine idling provision is strictly enforced with the bus drivers and a "rigorous preventive maintenance program" is in place to keep the bus engines running clean.

"We also meet or exceed the manufacturers recommended maintenance in other areas such as inspection for leaks of exhaust systems, windows, doors and gaskets to minimize exhaust inside our buses," states DeGennaro.

The suggestion of signage as a reminder to turn off engines, for both bus drivers and anyone picking someone up at the schools, was not addressed.

Bobo said the Board of Health discussed the letter at their Tuesday meeting and will request more information on the character of the buses from the schools.

The Board of Health plans to do some air quality testing down the line to see what the pollutant load from diesel emission is in the town.

Man airlifted after motorcycle crash

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

First arriving police officers found a 39-year-old Braintree man, lying in the road suffering from multiple traumatic injuries that he received as a result of rear-ending a car with his 2007 Harley Davidson motorcycle.

On Tuesday, April 22, at about 12:03 pm, the Cohasset Police Department's Emergency Dispatch Center received multiple calls reporting a motor vehicle crash involving a motorcycle on Route 3A near the intersection of Lower King Street.

First arriving police officers found a 39-year-old Braintree man, lying in the road suffering from multiple traumatic injuries that he received as a result of rear-ending a car with his 2007 Harley Davidson motorcycle. The vehicle that was struck by the motorcyclist was a 1996 GMC Jimmy operated by a 17-year-old Braintree girl.

The driver of the GMC Jimmy was uninjured. Cohasset Fire Department paramedics treated the motorcyclist on scene. He was subsequently flown to the Boston Medical Center by helicopter. His condition did not appear to be life threatening.

Route 3A had to be closed for approximately 30 minutes. This accident is under investigation by the Cohasset Police Department.

Thefts at CHS

Police are investigating the theft of electronic equipment from students' school bags at the middle-high school.

Chief James Hussey said there were three reports; the items taken included two iPods and one cell phone.

"We are working with the school administration to try and identify the culprit," Hussey said.

Trash dumping

Police have identified the address on the junk mail illegally dumped in a receptacle at Harborview Apartments off Elm Street last week and let the person know not to do that again, Chief Hussey said. Dumping trash in someone else's dumpster can result in a criminal complaint, he said.

Major gas leak

It appears that construction workers hit a gas main in a trench on Nichols Road last Tuesday (April 15) that led to the evacuation of some of the area homes, police said. The fire department conducted the notifications. There was a strong odor of gas in the area. Keyspan arrived on the scene and shut down the gas. Police helped with traffic.

Runaway

The administration at the middle-high school notified police when a female freshman fled the building at about 1:17 p.m. on Tuesday (April 15) and got into a blue Mustang. Police followed up and spoke with the girl's mother and as it turned out, she went home.

Chief Hussey said the school was concerned about the girl's safety.

Medical bag

A medical bag belonging to a Scituate resident was taken from her car while she was shopping at Cohasset Plaza, police said. The theft was reported at about 1 p.m. on Wednesday (April 16). Chief Hussey said the victim did not remember if she had locked her car, but there was no sign of forced entry. She was in the store about one hour, went home to Scituate, and then realized that the medical bag was missing. She returned to the plaza where police took the report.

Stop sign

A man who ran a stop sign at Elm and Margin streets last week will face the charge of driving on a suspended license and was cited for a stop sign violation. The 45-year old Hull man is being summonsed to court, police said. An officer observed the man go through the stop sign at about 3:15 p.m. on Wednesday (April 16) and pulled him over.

Underage

Four minors – meaning they are all under 21 – were arrested and charged with being minors in possession of alcohol following a report of reckless driving last Wednesday (April 16) at about 7 p.m. in the Sandy Beach Parking Lot.

The caller said the youths were drinking and urinating in public. Police identified the teens, two 19-year-olds from Hull, an 18-year-old from Hull and a 17-year-old from Quincy, and placed them under arrest.

Wood stolen

Police are working with their counterparts in North Attleboro in the hope of having some stolen wood returned. A Cohasset resident obtained written permission to keep the wood from trees the electric company had cut down at the front of the resident's property. The resident called police after seeing a pick-up truck pull in and pickup the wood and head south on 3A. The victim provided the plate that came back to a N. Attleboro resident. Chief Hussey said it has yet to be determined whether the victim, who would like the wood returned, will pursue charges.

Popped tire

A motorist, who believes his tire was blown due to water main work, was advised to contact the water department to make a claim, police said.

Window smashed

Police are investigating the vandalism to a car on Blackhorse Lane. The owner discovered the passenger side window of his 2001 Audi was smashed with a rock. The rock was inside the car.

The owner reported that neighbors heard youths around midnight and police are working with the neighbors to gather information. The incident was reported at 7:23 a.m. on Sunday (April 20).

Need information? Dial 211

Statewide phone number directs callers to essential services

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"...it is our hope that eventually the 211 number will be used by people who have questions about the town and the services available that are not police related."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Help is out there, but finding the right resources is often the most difficult part. A new resident looking for an after-school program, a struggling single mom who needs the assistance of a food bank, or a family having trouble paying the heating bill can now all turn to a statewide information hotline for assistance — 211.

Anyone in need of essential community services can dial 211 to be directed to the appropriate organization in the area. The 211 system has access to an extensive database system which lists all non-profit and governmental agencies that can help with myriad issues. A trained specialist assesses the caller's issue and directs them to the right place. They can field calls involving basic human needs to physical and mental health to employment services to family and child services to elder services to volunteer opportunities.

Mass 211 was created in response to the national 211 program. A collaboration between statewide local United Ways and the Alliance of Information & Referral Systems, a professional membership association that brings people and services together.

Chief dispatcher Tom Wigmore learned about the 211 service at a dispatch conference in Connecticut. When he returned to Cohasset, he organized an awareness campaign to get the word out about the service.

"I'm always looking out for things that will help the town and its residents," said Wigmore. Posters were placed in Town Hall and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. He recruited a representative from the United Way, executive director Paul Mina, to talk about the 211 system to a group of seniors at the Elder Affairs. Trained counselors at the 211 phone center can connect elders to appropriate agencies from Meals on Wheels programs to home health care to Medicare to transportation services.

"The program was excellent and the seniors understand what 211 is all about," said Linda Elworthy, Director of Elder Affairs.

Despite the similarity with the 9-1-1 emergency number, Police Chief James Hussey believes the system will cut down on non-emergency calls to the station and not increase accidental dialing of 911.

"The 911 number is well ingrained as the number to call for emergencies. We do occasionally receive non-emergency calls on the 911 line," said Hussey, adding as a reminder to residents police related non-emergency calls should go to 781-383-1212.

"We do get quite a few calls from both residents and out-of-towners looking for non-police related information and it is our hope that eventually the 211 number will be used by people who have questions about the town and the services available that are not police related," said Hussey. As Cohasset is typically a one-person dispatch operation, the 211 system will help reduce non-police related calls and keep the lines clear for emergencies, Hussey said.

"Now with 211, anyone in need of assistance can call and a counselor will be able to direct them to the right agency for their issue," said Wigmore.

Fire Chief Bob Silvia is of like mind, "anything that decreases the number of calls to 911 for other non-emergency services is a good idea."

Having a go-to source for information is an asset for residents as well, Silvia said.

According to their website, 211 currently reaches over 190 million people (approximately 65 percent of the total U.S. population) in 41 states and the District of Columbia, but in time the hope is to implement the system nationwide.

Someone is available to answer 211 calls from 8a.m. to 8p.m., Monday through Friday. Every call that comes in is treated confidentially.

In addition, to being a source for information, 211 will also serve as a resource during times of crisis, to field calls regarding the crisis and to direct callers to the services most appropriate for their needs. With the system in place, 211 is the logical platform for building emergency response communication capacity according to the Mass 211 website.

The 211 information line has already been used during emergencies in other parts of the country. In the wake of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita, hundreds of thousands of Louisiana, Texas and Alabama residents called 211 with a multitude of needs, including shelter, transportation, medical, food and water, construction materials, mental health, and questions about the availability of and application for federal, state, and non-profit assistance. Calls to 911 referred non-emergency calls to 211 freeing up 911 operators for life and death situations.

Residents can dial 211 or 1-877-211-MASS (6277) to get connected to the 211 information system. For more information on 211, visit www.mass211.org.

Cohasset has part in mock train crash

Sunday morning event in Hingham

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Sunday morning there will be a host of fire apparatus, ambulances and public safety personnel on Water Street in Hingham.

Officials hope that most residents will continue with their regular Sunday activities whether that means attending church or working in the yard rather than stopping by to see what all the fuss is about.

What will be happening starting at about 8:30 a.m. is a full-scale drill involving a mock commuter train-bus-car accident at the grade crossing on Water Street.

The street will be blocked off for about three hours and parking will be limited. There will be a place cordoned off for the press, photographers, and some spectators. Because of the train fences, viewing areas are limited.

Drill coordinator Hingham Deputy Fire Chief Robert Olsson said the purpose is to quite literally work out any kinks in safety procedures. Officials, like Olsson, believe that an accident on this scale is unlikely but they want to be prepared for any scenario.

"We will be testing our mass casualty plan," Olsson said this week.

Hingham Fire Chief Mark Duff was approached by the MBTA last year and asked to stage a mass casualty incident involving the train.

The mock crash will involve a car that hits a school bus that is stopped at the crossing and pushes the bus into the path of on oncoming train. The accident will be staged, meaning the vehicles will be put in place to show the aftermath of the crash. There will be a debriefing following the drill.

Public safety officials from Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Weymouth and Braintree and representatives from the Massachusetts Bay Commuter Railroad Co. will take part in the drill. Assistance will be provided by ambulances from Fallon, AMR, South Shore Hospital and Quincy Hospital.

Fire apparatus from area towns will be staged at the Bathing Beach; Hingham fire will be the first to arrive at the mock accident scene.

A command post and staging area will also be set up. There will be about 80 volunteer "victims."

Officials stressed that sufficient public safety coverage will be in place in the event a real emergency should occur while the mock train crash is under way.

Greenbush rail service between the West Hingham Station and Nantasket Junction will be temporarily suspended that morning, but bus service will be available between the two stations to accommodate commuters.

allowed due to weather conditions or other variables, a recorded message will inform the caller.

In addition to drought conditions, an overcast or low wind day may prohibit burning, Silvia said.

If there is low cloud cover, the smoke will stay in the area and not dissipate. "It's a health regulation as much as it is a fire regulation," said Silvia.

The DEP and fire department limit open burning for public health and safety reasons, according to the DEP's website. Open burning pollutes the air and can make it difficult for people with respiratory problems to breathe. In addition, when the air is stagnant, open burning can cause smoke and odor nuisances and pose health risks to nearby residents, particularly in densely populated areas. Open burning can also pose a safety risk when it is not adequately controlled.

Open burning permits are issued for the disposal of brush, cane, driftwood and forestry debris. The fire should be built as close as possible to the source of materials to be burned and situated at a distance greater than 75 feet from any dwelling. A safe area with no ground cover should be chosen and the fire should be attended until completely extinguished.

An open-air permit does not allow the burning of grass, hay, leaves, stumps or tires.

According to the DEP's website, there can be more environmentally friendly alternatives to open burning. Open burning releases large amounts of carbon dioxide, other gases, and solid substances directly into the air, which can contribute to respiratory problems.

The website states disposal of natural materials is never as good for the environment as using them again in a different form. Tree limbs, brush and other forestry debris can be chipped or composted into landscaping material.

For more information on burning, please contact the fire department on its business line at (781) 383-0616. More information can also be found on the Department of Environmental Protection's Web site at www.mass.gov/dep/air/compliance/burning.htm.

AROUND TOWN

SPECIAL BIRTHDAY

Hello Cohasset. Wow, we could not have asked for a better week weather-wise for a Spring vacation for many of the families in town. For everyone, whether you went away or stayed here in Cohasset, if you have any stories or photos to send in, please do so as we love to hear and see what everyone is up too. I know that in my family, we had a low-key week and enjoyed it all, especially my daughter Callie's 14th Birthday celebration. I cannot believe that she is one year older. Happy Birthday Callie, all of your friends and family love you so, so much!

THANK YOU!

This next piece is in relation to the Boston Marathon that was held this past Monday and several Cohasset residents were involved. Among them were two residents who were running for a cause that is near and dear to them and includes a thank you and a request if possible for more support financially.

"A big thank you to all the people in this amazing community who supported both myself (Mel Barrett) and Barbara Wipf, my fellow NF Marathon Team member, through Mondays Boston Marathon. It was brutal, but we made it, and are humbled by your support; not only financially, but your kind words, emails, phone calls and simple good luck wishes over the past couple of weeks. It means so much. Paul (Mel's Husband) and I have discovered that if there is a silver lining in having a child with a serious illness, it is that we are given more chances to see the good in people, and their extraordinary ability to help and care. Thank you for that. If you are interested in learning more about our truly amazing son Gaeb's journey, or to donate to our cause, please visit www.firstgiving.com/forth-eloveofgaeb

BOOKS IN BLOOM

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will present "Books in Bloom" from Wednesday, May 7 to Friday, May 9, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Garden club members will create floral interpretations of book selections using arrangements of flowers and fresh plant material. This is not a standard flower show as it will not be judged according to National and Federation rules. Instead, the public will have the opportunity to select the winners in different categories such as the most beautiful, the most creative, and the most whimsical. The show is a unique opportunity for all members to display their creative talents without being judged. The club is especially proud that members of the Junior Gardeners will also participate. This event will be free and open to the public. Please plan to come and enjoy!

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its annual Spring Plant Sale on Saturday, May 17, on the grounds of the Cohasset Historical Society from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Perennials that have proven their hardiness and merit in the Garden Club members' own gardens will be on sale and experienced gardeners will be on hand to answer questions and offer advice.

Many plants both perennial and annual will be on sale. Some are heirloom plants that are no longer sold at local nurseries. Also available will be copies of the garden club's most recent publication, "The Eclectic Gardener", a collection of gardening information, recipes, and nature notes of local interest. The event will be held rain or shine. Come early for the best selection. Proceeds from the sale of the plants and books will support the Community Garden Club's projects, which include maintenance of the gardens at the Lightkeeper's Cottage, Constitution Park, and the Pratt Building, a garden therapy program at Golden Living Center, Junior Gardeners, scholarships, and Arbor Day plantings. The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is a member of the National Garden Clubs, Inc. and The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc.

Harriot Pratt provides 'munificent' gift

Endowment Wall honors library donors

The Cohasset Library Trust has recently installed an Endowment Donor Wall at the entry to the library. It honors the more than 20 persons who have, over more than 100 years, made significant gifts to the library. These gifts have created the library's endowment. Some gifts have been as bequests in a donor's will. Others have been gifts from friends or family to memorialize or honor individuals.

From time to time, the Library Trust plans to offer short sketches of the persons whose names are on the Donor Wall.

In 1898, Miss Harriot Eustis Pratt died and left half her estate to establish a public library building in Cohasset in memory of her father, Paul Pratt. At the time, the Cohasset Free Public Library was crowded into two rooms in Town Hall.

Paul Pratt was a descendant of Phineas Pratt and was born in Cohasset in 1788. As a young man he apprenticed to a house carpenter in Boston named Joseph Eustis. Paul married Anne Eustis, Joseph's daughter, in 1809 at the age of 21. Their children were born in Boston where Paul worked as a house carpenter. The Pratts moved to Cohasset in 1831, because of his daughter Harriot's illness, and he apparently opened a store on South Main Street. He was a founder and president of Cohasset Savings Bank in 1845, a member of the school committee for several years and served on a three-man committee that recommended the construction of Cohasset's first high school. He died in 1853 at the age of 62.

Miss Harriot and Miss Sarah Pratt were two of Paul and Anne Eustis Pratt's four children to reach adulthood. Neither daughter married and when their father died in 1853 he left their house on South Main Street (number 190) to his daughters, as well as a sum of $20,000. Their mother died in 1868. Miss Harriot's estate of $70,000 in 1898 must attest to both wise investments and simple living during the 45 years after her father's death.

Miss Harriot's gift was described by contemporaries as "munificent." It provided a successful conclusion to an increasing interest in Cohasset by growing numbers of citizens for all the benefits that access to books and magazines would provide. A few Cohasset citizens had established two very small private libraries, one in 1792 and the other in 1828, for the benefit of their subscribers. In 1878, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts passed enabling legislation for towns to establish public libraries. Rev. Joseph Osgood, the Superintendent of Schools, made a strong plea for a public library in Cohasset in his 1878 annual report. The next Town Meeting voted to have a Committee study this matter.

This Committee doubted that more than 10 percent of the people in Cohasset would use the library, so warily suggested to Town Meeting that $300 be appropriated for a library, if $300 could be raised privately. The money was raised, books were bought, a librarian was hired and the Cohasset Free Public Library was located in a room in Town Hall.

Miss Sarah Pratt, Miss Harriot's older sister, was one of the original library trustees and remained one until her death in 1896. In addition to her sister's direct involvement in the library, Miss Harriot was obviously aware of the impressive use, support and progress of the library in its first years. When the schoolroom in Town Hall was vacated in 1891, the library expanded into this room and the book collection continued to grow. Miss Harriot's gift was not only the library's first gift, but was remarkable for its appreciation of Cohasset's need and indeed munificent in its generosity.

The Cohasset Library Trust was established to increase and prudently manage the Library's Endowment. Tax support of the Library has been declining as a percentage of Cohasset's budget for at least a decade. New gifts to the Cohasset Library Trust will join old gifts to assure the continued quality of this town treasure. A gift of $5,000 to the Library Trust earns listing on the new Endowment Wall in the Library Entry.

These are just a few of the many auction items that will be available during the second CEF spring benefit that will take place May 3 at Cohasset Golf Club.

The theme for this year's benefit is Reach for the Stars! Community support for the CEF has enabled Cohasset students and teachers to do just that, with more than $150,000 in grants awarded this year in the areas of technology, engineering and enhanced curriculum offerings.

Proceeds from the benefit will go to support the CEF Project and Endowment Funds, which support excellence in the Cohasset public schools today and in the future.

Ten questions with Jack Worley

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For over 30 years, Worley has been a fixture in the town. He has overseen hundreds of programs and, with a painstaking attention to detail, led them to success and growth. During his tenure, Worley has been ever present, nearly always the first one to arrive at Town Hall and the last one to leave.

Town Manager Bill Griffin describes Worley "as one of the most dedicated and professional public servants I have ever had the pleasure to work with."

When Worley first came to Cohasset in October 1976, the town was anxious to have him on board and launch the department. So anxious they hired him without having any money in the budget to cover his salary. He had to wait for one month before officially starting his new job while the town figured out how it was going to pay for his position.

In the early years, Worley went about his business with just the bare essentials. He set up his office with used furniture from the dump in the ticket booth off the auditorium in Town Hall.

Worley persevered through the lean times and, under his leadership, the Recreation Department has grown in leaps and bounds.

"I've been very fortunate to always have good support from the elected Recreation Commission and the town," said Worley. "With Ted (Carroll, incoming Recreation Director) coming on and the Commission we have now, I feel like I'm leaving the department in good hands."

As of Wednesday, April 30, Worley will hand over the torch as recreation director, but he hopes to continue to help out where he can.

The Mariner sat down with Worley in the waning days of his tenure to reflect on the past three decades, what he has offered his successor as advice and what plans he has planned for retirement.

• What is your most memorable day?

I always look forward to the annual cookout in the summer (for the playground program). Kids, parents and sometimes siblings come out for the night; we usually get a good response. I cook about 1000 hot dogs in a big pot. The ones that break from being cooked too long, we take out and call them hors d'oeuvres. I'm sure I'll have to show Ted (Carroll, incoming Recreation Director) how to do it.

• What will you miss the most?

I think the daily routine of things and the structure this job provides. This job is a six-days a week minimum and there are a lot of early days and late nights. Almost all my waking hours have been applied to this place. Now, I'll have a lot of hours to fill. With a life so structured I didn't have to worry about what to do.

• What do you hope will be your legacy?

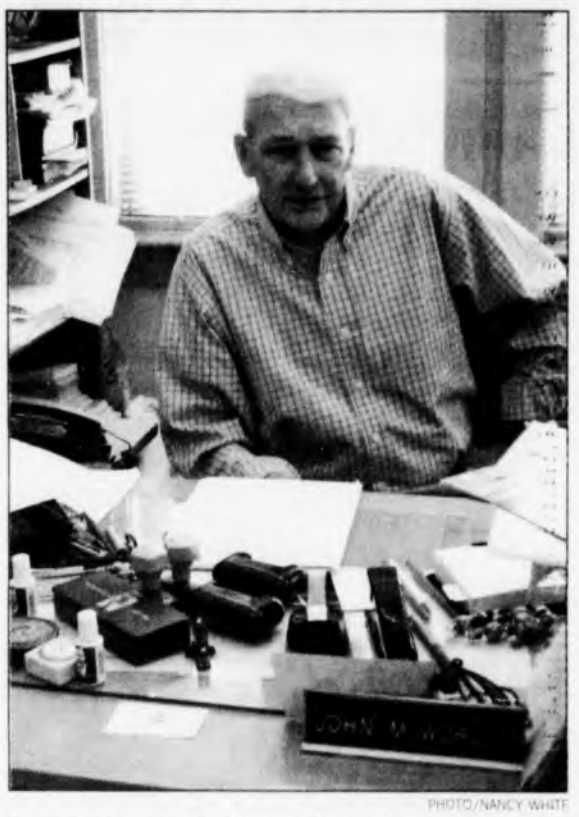
When I came here I was the first full-time director and for years, and still, recreation is considered a non-essential service. Now, I hope I've built it up to the point where residents realize as much as they need fire, police and schools, they need recreation…

Kids need to have constructive outlets for leisure. I've seen three generations of kids who are more apt to seek out recreational opportunities than prior generations.

• What has been your motto?

"If there's a one percent chance of something going wrong, there's a 95 percent chance it will." It's important to always to stay ahead of curve and expect the unexpected.

• What's the best piece of advice you have given to incoming Recreation Director Ted Carroll?



Stay fluid. Recreation is a dynamic field. You have to keep your ear to the ground and respond as necessary to new ventures.

• What makes Cohasset a special place to work?

It's the people. It's the residents' willingness to pitch in and get involved. Some say it's the harbor or the ocean, but, to me, it's the people that make this place special.

• What are your plans for retirement?

I'd like to stay relatively active

Recreation Director Jack Worley reflects on his years in Cohasset.

(in the Cohasset Recreation department), but with very cut back hours and without the stress. I have four grandkids, ages three to eight that I'd like to spend time with. I hope to travel a bit as well. (His kids have given he and his wife, Mary, a trip to Bermuda in June.)

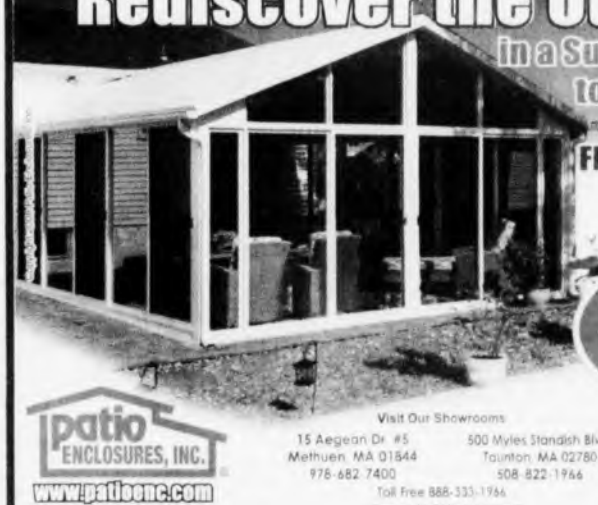
• What do you think is your greatest accomplishment as Recreation Director?

Holding the department together through some very thin, lean financial times and making (the recreation department) an almost fiscally self-supporting department. When I came on programs were being offered free of charge, as time went on we had to figure out how to get more revenue. We're getting up close to being fully self-sufficient.

• When you started over 31 years ago, did you every think you would make it this far?

Before I started in Cohasset, I spent three years as the first recreation director in Marshfield. I liked the idea of building something up so that's why I came to Cohasset. But, then I just fell in love with Cohasset and that was it…

With the financial situation over the years, (the job) remained challenging. There was a new way of doing things financially. I had to become creative. I mean really creative, which has kept me interested through the years.



• What do you think has changed the most in Cohasset over the last three decades?

The opportunities for formal youth sports have grown dramatically. More youngsters are now involved in some sort of organized sport. When I started in 1976, two other guys and myself were trying to run a little soccer program in the fall, now there is two seasons and a board of directors to run the whole thing. There was no basketball program and just a small little league program. Parent, too, are much more involved, they are the coaches, the referees, the organizers. Everything is much more formalized now.

For the discerning, sophisticated woman...

Jewelry designer to show her collection

By Mary Jane Hanron
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Now that the season of spring social events is here, it can be a dilemma to brighten a wardrobe while simultaneously making a wise investment. The secret to a fresh, elegant and timeless look, long has been known to Cohasset's Maryann Englander, fine jewelry designer. Her answer may be surprising, but the result is a hand crafted, one-of-a-kind design inspired by some of the earliest art forms known to man.

Englander's original and sophisticated style is evident in the pieces she creates using precious metals, gems of dazzling color and shape and a combination of intricate techniques. She will be showing her "Dragonfly Studios" collection at King Jewelers, Inc. on Thursday May 1st from 9:30a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The fine arts graduate from Wheaton College has been honing her skills for some time and has developed her concepts from a variety of pursuits. According to Englander, "My work combines my fine arts education, my background in printmaking and my avid interest in medieval history, ancient civilizations and mythology."

Hand knotting and chain design, both ancient techniques are the two primary methods found in her work.

"I hand knot because the pieces fall on the body with grace," Englander says. She even dyes her own silk for knotting which exemplifies an intricate attention to detail almost non-existent in jewelry made today.

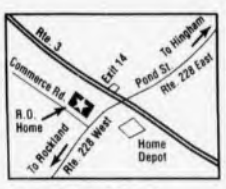
Maryann Englander of Cohasset will be showing her "Dragonfly Studios" collection at King Jewelers, Inc. on Thursday May 1st from 9:30a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Englander's collection is intended for a discerning and sophisticated woman. This focus is compatible with a continuing trend in which females purchase their own pieces of fine jewelry. Of course, a gentleman's selection of a gift remains a traditional and well received practice, especially for many upcoming spring holidays, celebrations and anniversaries.

According to Englander, she makes only one or two pieces per style of jewelry. This emphasizes, "Individualism and design evolution," while ensuring that a woman's selection will not be seen on others or become a fashion whim.



Among the details seen in Englander's artistry are: "Chain designs embellished with wire-wrapped stones....fine quality precious and semi-precious gems and 22k and 18k gold accents." Blue topaz, tourmaline, peridot and quartzes are but a few of the stones used in a variety of shapes and cuts. A glance into a case displaying the collection reveals smooth soft surfaces of stones interspersed with those of feminine, faceted ones such as tear shaped briollettes. She is resolute in her desire to maintain the integrity and quality of the design and the materials within, ensuring its timelessness.

The jewelry collection makes its Cohasset fine jewelry store debut as a desire for traditional and heirloom pieces with an innovative flair reaches a new height. Englander's creations would be as appropriate worn to a red carpet event as on a summer porch overlooking the Atlantic. This New England town, which brims with tradition and quiet elegance, provides a fitting place for the designer to work as well as to call "home."

"My work combines my fine arts education, my background in printmaking and my avid interest in medieval history, ancient civilizations and mythology."

— Maryann Englander, jewelry designer

To indicate the influence that lore, history and ancient teachings have on her visions, Englander explains the name for her company. "The word, 'Dragonfly' came from my fascination with the cross shape. I love that shape and incorporate various old world versions in my designs. A Navajo jeweler friend and former teacher showed me some cross shapes in Navajo weavings which reminded me of dragonflies. 'Dragonfly Studios' evolved from that."

Englander chats with ease and enthusiasm while telling a tale of a Greek god and goddess or a Celtic legend and how it inspired one of her baubles. She is able to suggest pieces compatible with interests or background of a client or relate an anecdote that sparked an idea for a particular jeweled ornament, making it a conversation pieces as well as part of a wardrobe.

The designer hopes her art will evolve as she expands her command of various jewelry techniques, including "Repousse, chasing and gold granulation. My ultimate goal," she continues, "is to make each piece in its entirety by hand."

Come to the fifth Taste of Hingham celebration!

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Good food, live music, art, a fashion show, horse-drawn hayrides, and kids' crafts all add up to an afternoon of fun during the annual Taste of Hingham celebration.

The event, now in its fifth year, is planned for Sat., May 3, from noon to 3 p.m. The rain date is May 4.

North Street (between the Stars and the old Settles Glass building) comes alive during this street fair, which attracts thousands of area residents and visitors to historic downtown Hingham.

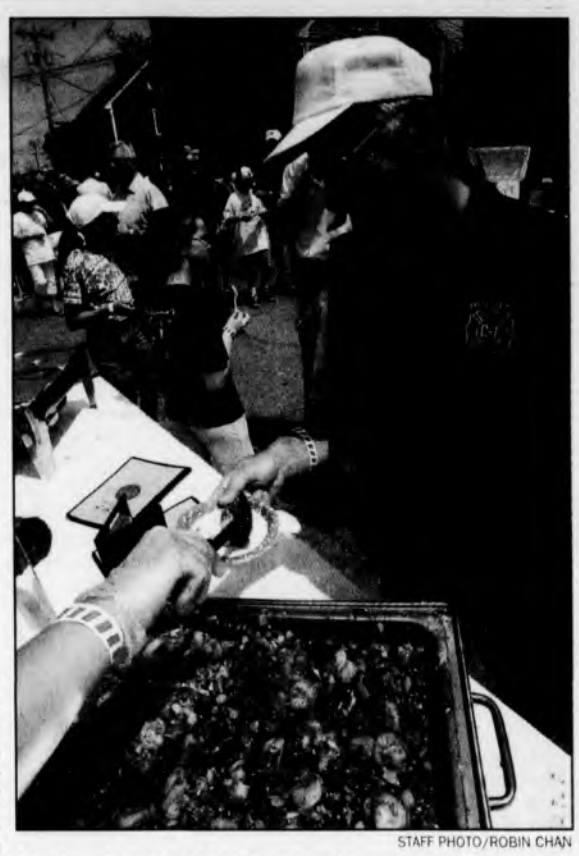
The event is a joint effort of the Hingham Congregational Church, the Hingham Downtown Association, and Eat Well, Inc. and raises money for 20 South Shore charities. These include Adult Day Service (Salvation Army), Amaryllis, Amego, Asaprosar, the Diane DeVanna Center, DOVE, Father Bill's Place, the Foundation for Children of Haiti, Habitat for Humanity, the Heifer Project, the Hingham Interfaith Food Pantry, Hospice of the South Shore, Interfaith Social Services, the Mary Martha Learning Center, the Pine Street Inn, the Quincy Crisis Center, Quincy Teen Mothers, the South Shore Women's Center, Sharing, and Wellspring Multi Service Center.

"In a short time, this has become a wonderful tradition, bringing everyone outdoors for a celebration of all that Hingham offers."
— Judy Sneath, Hingham Downtown Association

The Taste of Hingham offers a wide variety of cuisines and experiences – chowder, signature dishes, and sweets — and the opportunity to sample from the best that more than 20 of Hingham's finest dining establishments have to offer. Then it's time to cast a vote for "Hingham's Favorite Chowder," "Taste of the Town" best dish, best accompaniment, and most delicious ice cream.

"'Taste' regulars know that this is the day when sampling several seafood chowders, grilled steak tips, Italian specialties, Asian entrees, cakes, breads, coffee, fruit, chocolates, ice cream from four different shops, and lots more is possible without leaving North Street," said Hingham Downtown Association Executive Director Judy Sneath. "The food is fabulous, but the ambiance makes the afternoon memorable."

A fashion show, free to all 'Taste' ticket holders, showcases the spring and summer collections offered in downtown Hingham shops.



There will be plenty of live music up and down North Street – Stars is presenting the Smoking Jackets, and the Snug, Hogan's Goat Irish Band.

Fun galore is in store for the entire community. "On the sidelines of sports events, I hear people talking about the upcoming 'Taste,'" Sneath said. "In a short time, this has become a wonderful tradition, bringing everyone outdoors for a celebration of all that Hingham offers."

BackRiver Townhouses, Drohan, Tocchio & Morgan PC, Noble's Camera Shop, and Sovereign Bank also provide support for this event.

The celebration runs from noon to 3 p.m., but there is even more to do in downtown Hingham that day:

- Old Ship Church hosts its annual May Breakfast and Plant Sale from 7:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.
- This year's Spin-a-thon to benefit the Pan Mass Challenge will take place under the clock at the corner of Main and North streets. Fifteen stationary bikes will be set up for spinning from noon to 5 p.m.

Coffee with the Authors on May 13 at Atlantica

Buttonwood Books & Toys will host its semiannual Coffee with the Authors from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m., on Tuesday, May. 13, at the Atlantica Restaurant on Cohasset Harbor. This event is an opportunity to relax among friends and listen to three authors. Authors will be Michael Kodas, Mameve Medwed and Deborah Weisgall.

Kodas will discuss "High Crimes: The Fate of Everest in an Age of Greed," his account about what happens when climbing Mt. Everest. He tells the story with a reporter's eye for clarity, detail and objectivity.

Medwed is at her comedic best in "'Of Men and Their Mothers." She is able to transform the every day – the overbearing mother-in-law, Goth girlfriend of an only son – into the poignant and the funny.

Weisgall writes about love in her new book, "The World Before Her." She tells two stories about two women, one a famous figure from the past and the other a contemporary. Their thoughts and ultimate choices are revealed in parallel stories written in alternating chapters against the backdrop of Venice.

Reservations and tickets, which cost $15 per person, are required. Tickets may be picked up at Buttonwood or send a self-addressed stamped envelope with a check to Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, MA 02025. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to reserve or order a signed copy if unable to attend.

'Taste of Hingham' raises money for local charities

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

The annual Taste of Hingham celebration, which welcomes spring and raises money for 20 local charities, attracts thousands of visitors to downtown Hingham.

This year's event is scheduled for Sat., May 3, from noon to 3 p.m. The rain date is May 4.

'Taste' is a joint effort of the Hingham Congregational Church, the Hingham Downtown Association, and Eat Well, Inc. on North Street.

George MacKay, one of the Taste of Hingham founders, recently looked back on how this popular event came to be.

"Adversity brings change, and good things can happen," he said. He recalled that in the Fall of 2003, as the economy was recovering from the "dot.com" recession, the Hingham Congregational Church men's group was trying to decide what they could do to help solve two problems in the Hingham community.

"Greenbush construction was decimating downtown Hingham, and merchants were hurting," MacKay said. "Local charities were also having difficulty, and we needed to decide what could be done to raise more money."

Ideas were discussed, leading to a suggestion by fellow men's group member Doug McCaig to hold a Chowderfest. The idea was well received, and soon recently retired MacKay was named chairman.

The next questions was: How does one put on such an event?

"Some 30 restaurants and food purveyors are planning and preparing their delights, and merchants their wares."
— George MacKay, Taste of Hingham

"Help was sought. Greg Acerra, a partner in Eat Well, Inc. on North Street and a 'survivor' of many chowder competitions through Stars on Hingham Harbor, volunteered to join the effort," MacKay said. As a result Eat Well agreed to sponsor the event with the church, and Tosca, Stars, and Caffe Tosca also signed on.

After several false starts on a third co-sponsor, Richard McManus, who had recently been elected president of the Hingham Downtown Association, enthusiastically supported holding the event in downtown Hingham. Hosting an event of this kind was something he had always wanted to do, he said at the time.

During the first year, the newly formed Friends of Downtown Hingham helped run the 'Taste' celebration.

The first event was held the last weekend in April, 2004. More than 2,000 people attended. All profits went to local charities. "Prior to this no one had dared to call the event 'annual,' but it was such a success that the sponsors agreed that should be the case," said MacKay.

Taste of Hingham 2005 was the first test on the weather front. Whereas in 2004 the trees and flowers along North Street were in full bloom, 2005 was a cold winter, with not a leaf in sight. "And then – the forecast included the possibility of rain," MacKay recalled.

MacKay and McManus spent the Thursday before the event calling weather stations.

The deadline for deciding whether or not to cancel was 3 p.m. that day in order to notify the restaurants before they began their chowder making.

At 2:30 p.m., Barry Burbank of WBZ returned their call, confirming that Saturday's weather would be less than perfect and asking if they had a rain date. They did — for the next Saturday — but Burbank predicted even worse weather conditions that weekend.

"The prediction was that the first Saturday would be damp with some mist and that a shower would come close but miss us," MacKay said. "We decided that Hingham would be okay and proceeded with our plans. Attendance was down slightly, but New Englanders, [who are used to all kinds of weather,] had a good time despite some rain. Merchants and restaurants were praised (under their umbrellas!)"

More than 2,000 people showed up for the 2006 'Taste,' which fell on a beautiful, sunny day.

By the following year, word of mouth for the most part brought nearly 3,000 people to the downtown Hingham event.

This year, a good crowd is also expected. "Some 30 restaurants and food purveyors are planning and preparing their delights, and merchants their wares," MacKay said.

Tens of thousands of dollars have been raised so far to benefit local charities.

Excitement about the upcoming event is building. Last year, 23 food purveyors participated. This year, more than 30 restaurants and food shops will line North Street between Station Street and Rte. 3A to offer samples to ticketholders.

"What began as a chowderfest has become a sensory extravaganza," Hingham Downtown Association Executive Director Judy Sneath said. "Free horse-drawn hayrides, artists' exhibits, crafts for kids, armchair massage, fashion, and the opportunity to learn about the latest news from local shops and civic groups, make this a fun way to spend the afternoon with family and friends. And you always bump into lots of people you know there."

Tickets are $15 ($12 in advance) per person and $30 ($25 in advance) for families. Advance purchase is available after April 24 at Noble's Camera; La Petite Maison, Hingham Gift Company, and Puopolo Candies.

Let the sunshine in

More needs to be done to make sure government officials on all levels are conducting business above board. In this age of e-mail, text messaging and instant messaging, the growing fear is that government, especially town government, is being conducted in a vacuum.

Town officials everywhere seem more concerned about talking to the video camera each week to make sure the cable viewers sitting at home are getting a good show. But this isn't show business; this is the town's business. And with that comes the responsibility of spending taxpayers' hard-earned money and keeping the public adequately and appropriately informed.

There are some town officials who might argue that they know what's best and the public doesn't need to know everything that's going on behind the scenes — that it's best to provide residents with information on a need-to-know basis.

As noble as that may sound, we'd like to have the information so we can decide for ourselves, thank you very much.

That's where the Open Meeting Law comes into play.

The law was established to make sure citizens had access to all town government meetings. Beyond just allowing residents to sit in the same room as elected officials and listen to their discussion, the law was also intended to make sure decisions were discussed and made in an open, public setting. In other words, members of the board of selectmen couldn't call each other on the phone or send out e-mail the night before a big meeting and iron everything out so they were ready to vote once they got to the board room.

Last week, the State Administration and Regulatory Oversight Committee gave its initial approval for changes to the state's Open Meeting Law, increasing fines and penalties for those who violate the law.

While on the surface it may look like some actual teeth is being given to the law, supporters of a tougher version may think of this proposal as having false teeth.

The Massachusetts Newspaper Publishers Association has raised several concerns about the diluted bill that was voted on favorably last Thursday (April 10) by the legislative panel. At issue seems to be the lack of penalties for individuals who participate on a town board that violates the law. For example, if a town official on a public board, commission or other entity violates the law, the board as a whole would have to pay a $1,000 fine, rather than the individuals. In the original proposal discussed last June, penalties would have included a $1,000 fine to a government body for not abiding by the law and $500 for each member who attended the meeting.

That type of financial penalty would certainly make town officials think twice about taking an illegal vote or going into an executive session for the wrong reason. But the new, watered-down version of the bill would only penalize the public body, forcing the taxpayers, not the people actually responsible, to foot the $1,000 fine. While a violation may cause the members of that particular board some embarrassment, there would be no real personal accountability for a violation, as someone else would be left to pick up the tab.

According to the Massachusetts Newspaper Publishers Association, the bill also fails to recover attorney fees for private citizens who challenge public entities for violating the law, and it heightens the standard of proof to ensure that a violation was intentional.

The reason the bill is watered down, according to committee co-chairman Rep. Antonio Cabral, is because lawmakers would have opposed the bill if it contained stricter provisions. So it's hard to say this proposal is a real step forward to what's already in place as there is no real accountability, especially from a financial standpoint.

More needs to be done from a local, state and national standpoint, which is where the Sunshine campaign comes in. Sunshine Week, which was held in March this year, is a national initiative to open a dialogue about the importance of open government and freedom of information. While the campaign sets aside one week a year to bring this issue to the forefront, it's one that we should be paying closer attention to throughout the course of the year.

It's encouraging to see the Legislature take the lead in this area, but if the latest proposal is any indication of what reaches the House floor for an eventual vote, it won't carry much more weight than what is on the books now.

Cohasset shines through the clouds for MS

TO THE EDITOR:

In spite of the dreary weather on Saturday April 12, the MS Lifelines Walk in Cohasset was a beaming success. Over 330 people defied the weather and walked the Road Race route around town. According to the National Multiple Sclerosis Society chapter office in Waltham, the 330 Cohasset walkers are on track to raise over $140,000 to support the MS Society's missions of caring for those who live with the disease, and supporting research to find a cure. Cohasset has a long and strong relationship with the Society.

In addition to being one of the Spring walk sites for over 15 years, for the last several years, four Cohasset residents; Woody Chittick, Anthony Everett, Neal Finnegan, and Dan Rattner; have been members of the Board of Trustees. Dan currently serves as the Chapters' Board Chairman. This year, the Cohasset connection was deepened when the Cohasset Home Center Sotheby International Realty office decided to morph itself into an art gallery and host the works of Cohasset artists, JoAnne Chittick, Lisa Marder, Anne Musto, and DeeDee Rousseau. The artists generously donated 30 percent of the sales proceeds from the first week of the exhibit to the MS Society.

On a personal note, I would like to add my thanks to Gail Bell, Millie Mittman, all of the folks at Sotheby's, and the four wonderful local artists for opening their hearts and talents to a cause that means so much to us. I would also like to thank the Cohasset-based "Green Team" walkers; Woody Chittick, Anne Czerkawski, Jane Forrer, John Flanagan, and Trish Morse; and the local Corporate Sponsors, Jake's Seafood and Lobster Pound, Adrian Morris Salon, Strecker Eye Center, Hingham Dentistry, Stone & Company, Beacon Investment Management, James F. Kearney & Company, Karen Kirkendall Realtor, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, Edward Jones, and Ports & Company, for their personal and financial support. Finally, to all of our friends and neighbors in Cohasset who contribute to the Green Team or any other fundraising effort connected to the MS Society; thank you, thank you, thank you!

Earth Day cleanup

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, I would like to thank the 30 Cohasset High School students, including many members of the boys and girls lacrosse teams, who volunteered on April 22 for an Earth Day Cleanup of two local conservation areas, the Trust's "Giuggio Overlook" on Jerusalem Road and a Water Department property on King Street.

Supervised by trustees from the CCT, CHS Community Service teacher Jack Buckley, and several parents, the students picked up over two truckloads of debris from the two sites. We are grateful to Mr. Buckley for helping to publicize the cleanup at the high school and to the parents, and Mr. Buckley, who helped out at the sites. Finally, thank you to Tara Tradd of the Cohasset Board of Health who supplied the student volunteers with safety vests and trash bags.

The group effort left these properties cleaner than they have been for years. We hope this will become an annual event in town, and that other conservation areas will benefit from future Earth Day Cleanup projects. Thank you again to all who participated!

Union: aging cruisers a concern

COMMENTARY

JERRY FLYNN & SEAN MCARDLE

On behalf of the members of the New England Police Benevolent Association's Cohasset Police Association Local 66, we want to express our deep concern for the safety of the citizens of Cohasset and of our union members due to the police department's fleet of aging police cruisers.

Local President, Officer James P. McLean, brought this public safety issue to the attention of the Chief of Police over a year ago and to Town of Cohasset's Board of Selectmen nearly two months ago, the outcome of which resulted in the purchase of exactly one cruiser at last fall's special town meeting.

The critical fact is that as of this writing the mileage on all of the department's front line cruisers is over 100,000 miles with several over 125,000. Due to the nature of the use of these cars, equipment malfunctions and failures have a higher probability of occurring with this amount of mileage. Although the vigilant maintenance being performed on the cruisers may extend the life of them, they are at the point of being unsafe to drive.

The caring and professional men and women who make up the Cohasset Police Department want to provide the best possible service to the individuals, families and children in the Cohasset community but how can they perform their job to the highest standards if the tools they are given to work with are substandard?

Almost on a daily basis, at least one police cruiser is out of service being repaired. How safe is the community of Cohasset if the vehicles needed for police officers to respond to an emergency are in the shop? What needs to occur before a meeting of the Board of Selectmen is called to address this gaping issue?

Equipment failure can occur at any time but during an emergency response it endangers not only the safety and lives of the officers operating the cruisers, but the public on the roadways as well as the citizens of Cohasset waiting in need of emergency police services.

We urge the Capital Budget Committee, Advisory Committee, Town Manager, and Board of Selectmen, to truly support the fine efforts of the Cohasset Police Department by addressing this public safety concern and taking the necessary steps to provide emergency funding for new front line cruisers.

Jerry Flynn, Executive Director, and Sean McArdle, Regional Director, New England Police Benevolent Association, I.U.P.A. Local 9000, AFL-CIO.

In construction, nothing is for sure

MAKING TRACKS

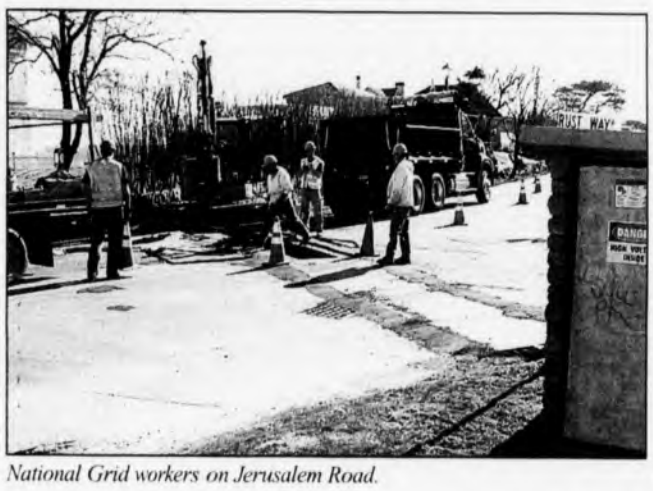
TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project – Last week we had a chance to attend a status meeting regarding the Little Harbor Project with the contractor. A copy of the latest Short Term Schedule follows.

Important Scheduling Caveats – Please keep in mind that in construction nothing is for sure, especially schedules. When a contractor offers a schedule it is only his best estimate based on known conditions. However, a construction contractor constantly deals with the unknown. The amount of ledge they will find and its hardness is unknown. Underground utilities that have never been recorded are unknown. Ground water intrusion into the work area is an unknown. The weather is clearly an unknown. So, you get the picture. Any of these unknowns can throw the schedule for a loop. Generally, these unknowns are not catastrophic. They are just a part of the construction process. But, they do cause delays as the contractor figures out how to deal with each unknown as it appears.

Jerusalem Road and National Grid – Some time ago we wrote about the project accidentally nicking a high voltage supply line in Jerusalem Road near Rust Way. This past week National Grid had their subcontractor on Jerusalem Road doing some preventative work while the road is under construction. The contractor installed a new conduit across Jerusalem Road from their underground high voltage supply line to their sub-station. In the event that a new cable is required, it can be pulled through the conduits without the need to reopen the road. In the accompanying picture you can see the trench for the conduit. The small building housing the substation is located on the far right at the edge of the road.

And, speaking of unknowns, who would have guessed that the trench they are digging at this relatively high spot on Jerusalem Road would fill with ground water. Yet, that's exactly what happened. So, even this relatively simple trench and conduit job is delayed a bit as National Grid deals with a trench full of water.



This week the final connection was made from the new sewer line on Beach St. to the main trunk line on Atlantic Avenue as shown in the accompanying photo.

Additional work still needs to be completed back on Beach Street, including reconstruction of the culvert over the tidal marsh. This culvert cannot be started until August or September, which is the normal "dry season" which minimizes the chance of having to deal with significant runoff from the surrounding land.

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

A few years ago, when the hockey team from Montreal sported three All-Star defensemen in Serge Savard, Guy Lapointe and Randolph's Larry Robinson, they were handling the Bruins with little trouble in a playoff series.

"Bruins Seek Chink in Montreal Defense," read a headline in The Boston Globe.

Wouldn't you know it, Fran Rosa, the Globe hockey writer then in residence, told me he received a couple of letters from readers chastising him for racism and pointing out that the correct words should have been "Chinese man."

I was reminded of Fran's problem with the Globe's politically correct readership the other day when I learned that Joe Groh is having a similar dustup with the Great Philadelphia Organization of Chinese Americans.

Joe is the proprietor of a popular Northeast Philadelphia restaurant that is called "Chink's Steaks" and has been for the past 59 years.

Sam Sherman, who was nicknamed "Chink" as a 6-year-old when someone thought that his eyes had a slant peculiar to Asians to them, founded the restaurant in 1949.

Joe kept the name when he bought the eatery from Sam and the business is so good that now he wants to open a second Chink's Steaks in South Philadelphia. That's when the cheese steak hit the fan.

The word, Tsiwen Law, general counsel for the Greater Philadelphia OCA, told The Washington Post, is a "racial slur" every bit as much as the notorious N-word, one used to demean African Americans.

Thus another word moves to the brink in the American lexicon. You have to be very picky with your words these days.

The PC police are parsing your every sentence.

A short while ago, a friend of mine happened to use the word "Paddy wagon" to describe the vehicle in which the police place miscreants to take to the jailhouse.

Little did my friend, who is Irish from her well-coiffed noggin to her red-tipped toes, realize that she had slurred a whole race of people of which she is part.

"Paddy," a reader informed her, is a nickname inflicted on the Irish by the Brits because so many are named Patrick and the Paddy wagon was the police vehicle that picked up drunken Irishmen and took them to jail.

Some of the worst racial slurs began innocently. "Kike," for example, an offensive term for a Jew, started among Jews themselves.

Uneducated Jews from Eastern Europe, who emigrated to America in the early 20th century, often could not write. When it came time to sign papers at Ellis Island, rather than sign on the dotted line with a cross, they signed with a circle.

The Yiddish word for circle is "kikle" (I'm guessing at the spelling here). Educated Jewish immigrants looked down on their less schooled brethren as "kikles" and others whose first language was English took it from there.

Or so I've been told.

Dysfunctional family road trips

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

Long road trips with children are a bit like giving birth to children in the sense that future trips depend on your forgetting how agonizing the last one was, especially near the end with all the pushing and the yelling and placentas flying around in the back seat. The last time our family drove beyond Quincy I kissed the driveway on our return and vowed never to make that mistake again. But in a house where yesterday's drama is soon overshadowed by tomorrow's trauma, vows like that are easily forgotten, and last Monday I found myself pinned on the New Jersey Turnpike between a concrete barrier to my left, a line of 73 semis to my right, and three hungry children to the rear, all fighting over who would get to kick the back of my seat next.

It's not as if they were lacking for entertainment, either, by 1974 standards. We didn't even have the WalkMan yet, let alone the iPod and the portable DVD player — a device that should have earned its inventor the Nobel Peace Prize. The only travel activities available to me and my sister were My Car/Your Car and MadLibs — games so pathetic we would never have played them had we not been incarcerated in a Fairlane. In fact I recently paged through a book of car games from that era and realized that with only minor tweaking it would read like an issue of Prison Fun Magazine:

Game 1. "Count The Roaches"
Game 2. "To What State is This License Plate Going?"
Game 3. "I Spy A Lifer"
Game 4. "How Many Days Left?"
Game 5. "Count The Roaches Again"
Game 6. "Where's Warden?"

In the early 70s we did have more freedom of movement in the car, though, since apparently the idea that an automobile might stop suddenly had never occurred to anyone. As a four-year-old I routinely sat in the back of our seatbeltless VW beetle while perched on a scooter, aimed directly at the windshield. I'm pretty sure the only way to make that setup more insanely dangerous would have been to strap a jet pack onto my back. But like many boyhood dreams this idea was dismissed by my mother as too expensive.

Despite the odds we did make it over the George Washington Bridge and eventually inside the Washington Beltway Monday evening after about nine hours of bathroom stops, snack stops, strapping things back onto the roof stops, and even a bit of driving. The great thing about Washington is they have a free museum for everything: air, space, earth, wind, fire. Say you're thirsty. Why not check out the Museum of Modern Moisture? Like wearing pants? Head over to the Chinos Museum, sponsored by J. Crew. Curious about why children become exhausted the minute they enter a museum? Go to the Museum of Why Children Become Exhausted the Minute They Enter A Museum Museum.

In fact we're all geared up to see the Spy Museum this morning, but we're having a lot of trouble finding it, so I'll have to cut my article short this week. I'll leave you with my latest revenue-generating idea for Cohasset: The Museum of Saltmarsh Restoration Projects. I bet we could kill a few birds with one stone that way.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, which is a nine-hour drive up the Turnpike from where he is now, but he figures it can't be as bad as the trip down.

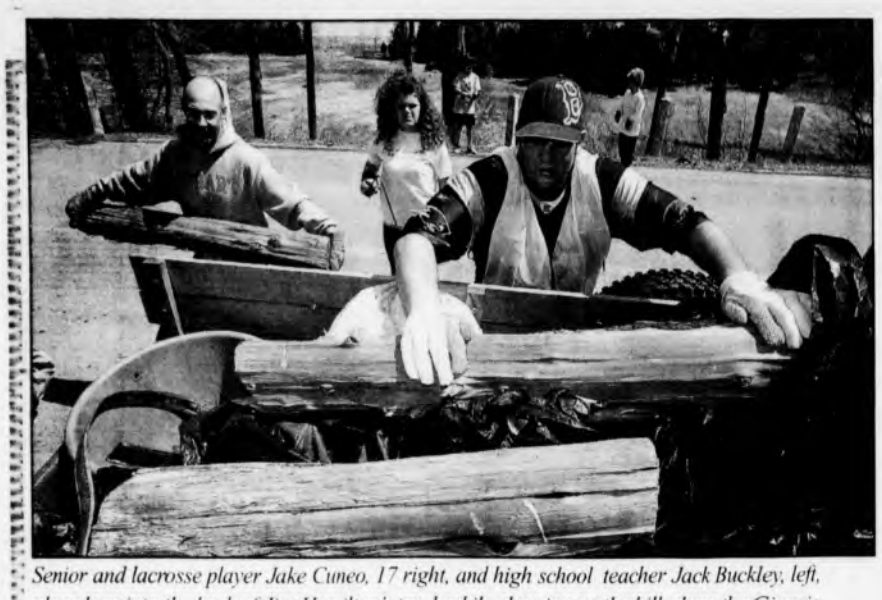
Pitching in on Earth Day

FROM EARTH DAY, PAGE 1

Jack Buckley hopes the students will take away more than just trash. ""I think doing an service like this is makes everyone participating in the clean up think twice about littering," said Buckley. "After cleaning up other people's trash, you remember that next time you need to throw something out."



The students seemed to agree.

"We thought helping to clean up great spots like this would be a good way to spend Earth Day," said Mike Grimm, a senior and varsity lacrosse player.

"Earth Day is a day to appreciate the earth and to take care of it," said Stefi Belz.

Will they be back next year to clean up?

"Hopefully we won't have to because it will be kept clean," said CHS senior Jake Cuneo.

Senior and lacrosse player Jake Cuneo, 17 right, and high school teacher Jack Buckley, left, place logs into the back of Jim Hamilton's truck while cleaning up the hill along the Giuggio Overlook Conservation Area. Junior Madeline Leahy, 17 center, brings over a metal rod to the back of the truck.

Small steps turn into big strides

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Each of us can do something to help the planet.

Well, Cohasset celebrated Earth Day in its own characteristic fashion. Jim Hamilton, Frank Moody, Megan Connolly, Debbie Shadd, Allison Callahan's Girl Scouts , Jack Buckley's crew and lots of others including the High School Lacrosse coach made it an event which has received not a little comment. Lily Pond, King Street, and the "Giuggio Vista" on Jerusalem Road overlooking Little Harbor all received attention. Apparently, the boy's Lacrosse Coach gathered his disciples and told the team something to the effect that they were getting a reputation as party animals, and it was time to do some outreach work for the town. Having run into lacrosse players this year, myself, I know them to be a high-spirited group. Tara Tradd, mainstay for the Board of Health, provided reflective vests and other equipment and Carl Sestito's DPW brought out signs. In all, to use a phrase from Pearl Buck, it was a Good Earth day.

In the face of so many observations that the world is headed for perilous times, financial chaos, the environment, the war, all seem to be creating shadows over our lives. But we are also in the midst of a burgeoning of remarkable discoveries in health science, communications technology and many other fields of endeavor. So now we have taken time to honor this original and unique celebration. Earth Day was founded by Gaylord Nelson, a U.S. senator from Wisconsin, in 1970. He wrote he wanted to "infuse the student anti-war energy into the environmental cause." Now, corporations, governments and individuals pitch in.

Each of us can do something to help the planet. Here are some of the things that happened elsewhere this week on Earth day. This year on Tuesday, the 38th anniversary of the environmental holiday, celebrants fixed trails, picked up trash and talked recycling at parks, workplaces and schools across the nation.

•In Washington state, 18 volunteers repaired winter snow damage on the north side of Mount Rainier National Park, said Lauren Braden of the non-profit Washington Trails Association. "We've had record snowfall, so most of our work parties are working on lower elevation trails," Braden said.

•In Weyers Cave, Va., Blue Ridge Community College students made a statement with a huge display of trash, with recyclables sorted.

•In Albany, N.Y., the Office of General Services announced it is replacing foam polystyrene plates and cups with biodegradable products made from bamboo and grass at cafeterias that serve 9,500 state workers and visitors daily.

•In the nation's capital, Metro riders received free chocolate bars for saving 20 pounds of carbon emissions by riding the subway on Earth Day. The government on Tuesday released a proposal to raise fuel efficiency standards for new cars and trucks, putting the nation's fleet on track to reach 35 miles per gallon by 2020.

•In downtown Indianapolis, companies jumped at the chance to get rid of old computers, monitors and mice at the nation's first Million Square Foot Recycling Event, which collected more than 25,000 pounds of electronics.

•In Sioux Falls, Kali Drewes, 18, bagged trash with employees of the wireless company Unicel at Sertoma Park. "It's sad it takes Earth Day to get out and clean up," Drewes said.

And so, in the midst of today's chaos and uncertainty, it's well for us to have taken some time off to have a national day where we straighten up a bit.

Community Reads Together support appreciated

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Board of Library Trustees and staff members of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, I would like to thank all the members of the Cohasset community who helped to make our second annual community reading program, Cohasset Reads Together (CRT), a great success.

We are extremely grateful to Friends Outreach Coordinator Marjie Murphy for inspiring fourth graders and senior citizens to write their own original poetry and for bringing the two generations together for the CRT Poetry Slam. Our thanks go out to fourth grade teacher Suzi Corkhum and to Linda Elworthy, Cohasset Elder Affairs Director, for being such great collaborators and to Julie Laugelle, director of Our World Global Discovery Museum, for providing program space. It was such a pleasure to collaborate with so many members of the Cohasset school community. Cohasset Middle/High School library teacher Theresa Conroy was, as always, the perfect liaison. Elementary schools' librarians Leslie Diminnie and Charlotte Hill, Osgood principal Mrs. Janet Sheehan, Deerhill principal Dr. Jennifer deChiara, grade six teacher Susan Horigan, and Read-a-thon chairs Suzanne Jackisch and Tracy Thomas encouraged 400 students to read CRT companion books about Henry David Thoreau. Guidance counselor Ed Leonard, grade seven support staff member Nancy Creighton, and teachers Jack Buckley, Bill Fish, and Al Galotta read our CRT selection "A Walk in the Woods" by Bill Bryson with their students.

Our CRT logo was created and donated by Ronnie Goodwin of Goodwin Graphics, who has been a generous supporter of our two annual community reads. Friends volunteer Linda Fechter shared her marketing skills and donated a lot of time to CRT, and, as always, the Friends of the Cohasset Library supported the program with their time, talent and funds. We greatly appreciate the excellent reporting of Cohasset Mariner's Nancy White and photographer Robin Chan.

We extend special thanks to all of our valued library patrons who read the book selections and attended programs and who make it so rewarding to serve the good citizens of Cohasset. We look forward with anticipation to next year's community read!

Ya had to BEE there!

To the Editor:

What do you get when you put teachers, a police officer, librarians, selectmen, parents, school administrators, a town manager, TV hosts, a firefighter, School Committee and Advisory Board members, a school business manager, and 160 kids together in one place? A Spelling Bee, of course! It was truly a community event we should all be proud of.

The Cohasset Education Foundation expresses its sincere appreciation to the Spelling Bee Committee. Your hard work and the support of parental volunteers, school department employees and community members who volunteered as MCs, judges and timekeepers made Sunday's Bee a true success.

A special thanks to our

Support 'Healing Field' on Memorial Day

The effort should result in hundreds of American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets. The island faces Veterans Memorial Park where the annual Memorial Day observances are held.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces. (Those who purchase flags will be able to pick them up after 10 days).

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post and at both branches of Pilgrim Bank. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

May is Older Americans Month

"Across the nation May is celebrated as Older Americans Month. President John F. Kennedy designated May 1963 as Senior Citizens Month, asking the nation to pay tribute in some way to older people across the country. In 1980, President Jimmy Carter changed the name to Older Americans Month as a time to celebrate older adults through ceremonies, events and fairs." United States Census Bureau.

Many people are working together to make May very special in Cohasset. At the Selectmen's Meeting on Monday April 14, Town Manager, Bill Griffin, presented a Proclamation to the Selectmen which they signed proclaiming May as Older Americans Month in Cohasset. The Friend's of Cohasset Elder Affairs, Mary Ford and Nancy White from the Mariner, with the help of photographer Jeri Herman, are planning some special features honoring seniors during Older Americans Month. A final note, as of April 8, 2008, 1,688 of Cohasset's 7,588 residents are 60 years or older, and of that number 408 are 80 and above.

On May 7, at noon, please join us as we honor all Mothers with a Mother's Day Brunch at the Cohasset Senior Center.

Rain barrel conservation program offered

Aquarion Water Co. of Massachusetts announces it is offering Hingham, Hull and north Cohasset residents the opportunity to purchase rain barrel water conservation materials at the discounted price of $66.50, a 25 percent saving off the retail price. Aquarion Water has teamed up with New England Rain Barrel Co. to offer these rain barrels to help residents conserve.

According to Larry Bingaman, Aquarion senior vice president, the average homeowner uses approximately 40-percent of water for outdoor use.

Bingaman said, "A 1-inch rainfall on a 1,200 square-foot roof will yield over 700 gallons of water. Using a rain barrel is an excellent way to conserve some of this water.

"A quarter-inch run-off from an average roof will easily fill the barrel," Bingaman said. "If you have five storms a season, that equals 275 gallons of free water.

"A quarter-inch run-off from an average roof will easily fill the barrel. If you have five storms a season, that equals 275 gallons of free water."

— Larry Bingaman, Aquarion senior vice president

"Rain barrel use reduces the stress on municipal water systems during the summer months and improves storm water management.

"We are pleased to once again partner with the New England Rain Barrel Co. to offer this water conservation tool to our customers," Bingaman said. "We look forward to greeting our customers at our annual open house on Saturday, May 10, at which tours and refreshments will be available."

The rain barrels are made from 55-gallon blue plastic recycled containers. The top does not come off, so no children or pets can get in the barrel. It has a 6-inch diameter inlet opening covered with a screened louver to keep insects and debris out. The barrels have two brass spigots, one to allow a connection to a hose for watering, and one for overflow. By connecting a hose to the overflow spigot, water can be redirected away from a home. Each barrel comes with a 5-foot hose with a shutoff valve so that multiple barrels can be joined for additional capacity.

Orders may be placed through May 7, and be picked up on Saturday, May 10, during the water company's annual open house from 1 to 4 p.m., at its facility at 900 Main St., Hingham.

CMI Fun Run to honor Jack Hubbard

Race set for July 19

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"He was instrumental in founding CMI in the early 90s and we are grateful to him."
— Michael Dick, Cohasset Maritime Institute

The Cohasset Maritime Institute will be taking its efforts off the water and on to the streets of Cohasset one Saturday morning this summer.

The rowing center will be hosting the first 5K Jack Hubbard Fun Run on Saturday, July 19. The Fun Run will culminate with the dedication of their brand-new 28-foot ocean rowboat being named in longtime Cohasset resident and ocean environmentalist Jack Hubbard's honor.

"Jack Hubbard was a committed steward of the environment, a vibrant participant in Cohasset affairs, and an avid ocean rower," said Mike Dick, a member of the CMI Board of Directors. "He was instrumental in founding CMI in the early 90s and we are grateful to him."

Dick and George Baumgarten of CMI presented their fun run to the Board of Selectmen last week. CMI recently completed a fundraising campaign to add a third boat to their fleet. The boat will be named "Jack Hubbard." Their two other boats are named after the two assistant lightkeepers who lost their lives in the destruction of the first Minot's Ledge Light in 1857 — Joseph Antoine and Joseph Wilson.

"We feel that naming a boat for him is an appropriate way for us and future generations to remember him and the influence he had on protecting and preserving Cohasset's shoreline and bays for the public's benefit," said Dick, in an e-mail.

The CMI Board of Directors wanted to have a special event to coincide with the christening of the boat — and that's when the fun run was born.

"We want to bring everyone together, get some exercise and run a route along the harbor," said Dick, as well as raise awareness of for their rowing and maritime education programs. The harbor route is fitting because of CMI's close connection with the sea, Dick said.

At the finish of the race, Dick hopes to gather the participants, their families and other interested residents on the common for a ceremony to christen the Jack Hubbard. The boat itself will be placed near the flagpole on the common. The ceremony will take place immediately following the race, around 10:30a.m.

CMI is hoping to bring as many as 200 to 250 participants out for the fun run. If the inaugural fun run is successful, the CMI Board would consider making it an annual event during the winter off-season.

CMI representatives have been working closely with Police Lieutenant Bill Quigley to iron out the safety and route details.

"We want to have the least effect on the town," said Dick. In that vein, the proposed course was altered eliminating the loop to Sohier Street, Ripley Road and Depot Court.

The starting gun will begin at 8:30a.m. and the CMI board members expect the race to be over by in about an hour and a half.

The route will start and finish at the Cohasset Common, with the finish taking two laps around the common to complete the five-kilometer course. From the common, runners will head toward the village and take a left at Elm Street. Keeping the harbor at their right, the runners will continue toward Atlantic Avenue. At Beach Street, the course takes a left to bring runners back to the common and Highland Ave. The five-kilometer course translates to about 3.2 miles. Police officials and CMI believe the roads will have to be closed no more than an hour.

Selectman Paul Carlson had some concerns about the racecourse itself being ready for the scores of runners due to the ongoing Little Harbor water and sewer project.

On hand to address the concern was Water Commission chairman Glenn Pratt, who said at the time of the event the trouble spot will be North Main Street. Pratt said the issues were being talked out extensively between the water and sewer commissions and the police and fire departments to ensure a safe course for all.

Although the date has been set for July 19, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer suggested the CMI members check with other organizations, particularly the yacht club, to ensure there isn't a conflict.

CMI was founded over 10 years ago by a group of Cohasset residents, who successfully petitioned the town to save the former Hagerty boathouse for re-use as a maritime center for public access to the water. CMI strives to keep alive the tradition of "open water ocean rowing" in recognition of Cohasset's legacy as the birthplace of the first lifeboats in America.

At the meeting, CMI board members said they were willing to pay for all necessary police details for race day.

The Selectmen supported the addition of the race to the 2008 Cohasset event calendar with a unanimous vote.

"I hope you have great weather," said Carlson.

Offense sputters in Cowda' Cup final

Two rivals in another heated battle capped off the First Annual Chowda' Cup Memorial tournament, Saturday afternoon.

This time, the Skippers played second to the Sailors in a 10-6 loss. It's the first time Cohasset lost to its neighboring town rival in six games.

"We never got on track, we were always a man down the entire game," Cohasset boys lacrosse coach Stew Curran said. "Our guys were a little aggressive for the crew officiating the game.

"You're handcuffing your offense when you play a man down at the wrong end of the field."

The tournament, held in Scituate, honored former lacrosse and hockey players from Scituate and Cohasset who have passed away, including Tim Mahoney, Ryan Flannery, P.J. Trendowicz, Justin Lang-ham, and Bourke Corcoran.

The tournament proceeds went to scholarships at all four participatory schools including Scituate, Cohasset, Marshfield and Sandwich.

"I think it's a great idea, those games belonged to the kids," said Curran. "It was a special day. A lot of good kids got to play a game they like to honor kids that came before them."

Scituate coach Rick Bagby agreed with Curran about the tourney's impact.

"It's an important memorial," Bagby said. "There were good teams, good competition and great games."

Scituate (7-2) opened the tournament Thursday with a 13-6 win over Marshfield. Cohasset narrowly defeated Sandwich13-12 in its opening round game. That set up a date in the championship between two schools that competed for the last two Div. 3 state titles.

"If we continue to play the way we have and stay with the fundamentals our goal will be to finish .500 or better and make the tourney."
-Rob Spofford

The schedule isn't easy and East Bridgewater is a really good softball team. The resulting 15-0 loss to the Lady Vikings isn't a reflection of Cohasset's game.

They're not a bad softball team.

Once you start traveling down Route 18 or Route 44 you are entering a hotbed for high school girls softball. Taunton, Bridgewater-Raynham, East Bridgewater, West Bridgewater—all dominating softball teams.

Nicole Eisenmann threw a no-hitter with four strikeosuts for East Bridgewater. She is also very good. Cohasset (1-6 overall, 1-2 in the South Shore League) just doesn't match up with the Vikings.

But the Lady Skippers have proved they can play with some quality teams this year, taking on Rockland, Quincy and Hingham, making a game out of whichever team they play.

"I'm still confident," said Cohasset coach Rob Spofford. "We play a tough schedule. I'm also cautiously optimistic as we head into the meat of the schedule. If we continue to play the way we have and stay with the fundamentals our goal will be to finish .500 or better and make the tourney."

The long bus ride to EB ended in a six inning shellacking, but Spofford wants his girls to leave it.

"I said to them when they got on the bus 'forget about it, don't dwell on it and lets move on from here.'"

Cohasset is a relatively young team.

Anna Haggerty (Sr.) is the team's lone impending graduate. She is also playing a great third base. Haggerty and Carly Salerno (Jr.) at shortstop play strong on the left side.

"They have played absolutely terrific ball," Spofford said. "There is pressure on them because a lot of ball are put into play."

Marissa Tangherlini is showing a nice glove in centerfield. Lindsay Davis (Fr.) is showing a lot of promise as the season progresses according to Spofford.

The junior varsity team continues to chug along at 7-0.

"The future is bright," Spofford said. "I'm pleased. No one likes to lose. What I like is what we are doing. Besides the EB game we have been in every game."

Team remains focused heading into weekend action

With a little over a week off between baseball games Cohasset will hit the diamond Friday and Saturday. The Skippers will play Cardinal Spellman, April 25 at 10 a.m. and Archbishop Williams, April 26 at 10 a.m.

Both games are at home.

Head coach Al Gallotta understands how important it is for his team to see live baseballs over the school vacation week. The Skippers last game was a 4-0 win at East Bridgewater, Thursday, April 17.

"Playing over vacation is very important," Gallotta said. "You can't come back 10 days later and expect to pick up where you left off. Especially after a huge win like (East Bridgewater) you want to get back at it quickly."

Gallotta admitted that an eight day layoff isn't much better, but the Skippers planned on working out Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday to get ready for the two non-league games.

"Hopefully we can pick up where we left off," Gallotta said. "The arms are rested so hopefully that will have a positive effect."

The pitching staff will not get much breathing room over the remainder of the season as the number of games start to increase. The Skippers are scheduled to play 10 games in May.

"It puts more burden on the pitching staff," Gallotta said. "We will find out what kind of team we are. Right now, just playing two games a week, we haven't taxed our pitchers or gone too deep into the staff."

A good start to the season has the Skippers at 4-2 overall and 3-1 in the South Shore League. Their win over East Bridgewater wasn't an upset by any means; the Skippers are a talented and experienced team. But the Vikings are loaded and many picked them as a pre-season favorite in the league.

The Vikings returned three league all-stars from a year ago.

"They have a strong nucleus of very talented players," Gallotta said.

Brian Hill (Sr.) pitched masterful in the win. He threw a complete-game two-hitter, striking out 11 batters without surrendering a walk. He didn't go to a three ball count on a single batter.

"In 33 years of coaching that was one of the best performances I have ever witnessed," Gallotta said. "He had total command that day."

Hill plans on attending Eckerd College in St. Petersburg Florida next year to study and play baseball. He currently is 2-1 with a 0.33 ERA to go with 28 K's and 5 walks. His only loss of the season came on Opening Day in a pitchers duel with Scituate's Blaine O'Brien.

O'Brien has accepted a full scholarship to the University of Georgia, but awaits the Major League Baseball draft where he could be a high pick.

"(Hill) loves baseball," Gallotta said. "He is a very committed player that plays year-round."

Alex Goetz (Sr.) sparked the offense against the Vikings with an RBI triple in the second inning. Chris Rose (Sr.) followed up with a RBI double.

Cohasset held to a 2-0 lead until a David Snowdale two-run RBI single in the sixth.

"In 33 years of coaching that was one of the best performances I have ever witnessed."

—Al Gallotta

"Timely hitting and good defense didn't hurt in that game either," Gallotta said.

Brendan Doonan (So.) leads the team batting .444. Pat Doonan (Sr.) is second with a .333 average. Kyle Pinkus leads the team with four RBI. He is also playing a lead role on defense at the catcher position.

"He has been calling the game back there for three years," Gallotta said.

With the warm weather here and talk of graduation on the way, Gallotta is adamant that his seniors will stay completely focused with the bulk of the season on the horizon.

Focus, he admits, has never been an issue for his guys.

"This is my sixth year in Cohasset and that has never been an issue," he said. "The kids are committed to the program. I am lucky. It's a tribute to the kids in Cohasset that they are committed. Whether we have had good or bad season, they have always given their heart and soul."

Laxers fall short in final

the second week of this season, but couldn't get anything going offensively during Saturday's 10-6 loss. Penalties kept the Skippers on the defensive for most of the game.

"We were on the defensive end of the field way to much," Curran said. "Scituate moved the ball well and found the open guys on transition all game long."

"The faceoff play by (Scituate's) Wes Hawkins was spectacular as well."

Scituate went to a Tiger Zone set in a successful attempt to slow down Cohasset's Mike Grimm and Mark Flibotte. The pair combined for eight goals in the first meeting of the season but was held to just two, Saturday.

"We totally changed the set-up and shut them (Grimm, Flibotte) down," Bagby said. "We had to do something different against them."

The Scituate long poles, including Ryan Woodford, Chris Yuknis, Alex Cuomo and Paul McInerney, as well as goalie Jake Gray, all played outstanding.

Compared to the first meeting with Cohasset, the Scituate defense, "played a lot more aggressive," according to Bagby.

Scituate led 7-6 after three quarters and broke the game open with three unanswered to start the fourth.

Scituate's Greg Reynolds had five goals in the final and 13 for the tournament. His stellar play earned him the tourney's MVP award. Flibotte, Will Wise, Pete Ernst and Dana Valentine received all-tourney honors for Cohasset.

P.J. McCaw led Cohasset with three goals. Flibotte, Ernst and Grimm each had one.

Both Bagby and Curran like what they see whenever these teams get together to play.

"It's a pretty healthy rivalry," Bagby said. "It's an intense rivalry but typically well-contested and clean. There is no cheap stuff, just high quality lacrosse."

"We have a healthy respect for each other," Curran said. "It's a good chance to match wits, it's fun and at the end of the day, you hope the kids take from it and treasure the moment.

"We would have liked to win, but I told them winning today isn't what's important, winning June 10 is."

"A lot of good kids got to play a game they like to honor kids that came before them."
—Stew Curran

June 10 is the tentative date for the Div. 3 state final.

Lacrosse Notes

Cohasset is 5-2 overall and 2-0 in the South Shore League. It played Dover-Sherborn, Thursday, after the Mariner went to press. The Skippers play next at Hull, Friday at 11 a.m.

Cohasset 13, Sandwich 12

Cohasset got more than it bargained for in the first round of the Chowder Cup at Scituate High, Thursday afternoon as a spirited and disciplined Sandwich team with a standout goal keeper tested the Skippers to the limit. Fortunately, Cohasset improved its record to 5-1 thanks in large measure to a tremendous save by senior goaltender, Nate Porter, with less than ten seconds remaining. With a Blue Knight attacker unmarked less than five yards off the crease, Porter gobbled up the low, hard bounce shot to ice the victory.

The Skipper offense sputtered at the beginning as they hit two posts, missed the cage high and wide, or hit the goalie in the head, chest, or stick with their shots. Sophomore Will Wise finally got Cohasset on the board after picking up a loose ball on a scramble in front.

Sandwich responded with a fast break goal after a quick clear before the Skipper defense could get settled. Porter made some great saves to keep the score tied at the end of the first quarter. At the start of the second, Mike Grimm found junior Andrew Smith alone in the slot.

Smith was checked hard as he shot but still managed to find the back of the net with a delayed, "slow motion" bounce shot. Sandwich ran off four unanswered goals to take a 5-2 lead.

Coach Stew Curran called a time-out to settle his charges down. Whatever the Coach said seemed to work. Immediately after the break, Mark Flibotte found the top corner with a bullet after a feed from Wise. Wise then passed from behind to a hard cutting Peter Ernst for a goal. Chuck Czerkowski won the ensuing face off cleanly and then found Wise on the crease who quickly tied the score. After a Sandwich goal on the man-up, Grimm beat the Sandwich goalie down low with an underhand shot along the ground to tie the score at halftime.

Flibotte scored in the first minute dodging from behind. After Jake Cuneo knocked down a Sandwich pass, Anderson Lynner scooped up the ground ball and started the fast break ending in a quick pass from Wise to Flibotte for the score. Wise next found Johnny Wade on the crease for a quick stick and a three goal Cohasset lead. But the Blue Knights would not go away and quickly answered with a goal. Grimm beat his man cleanly from behind on the Skippers next possession finding Wise alone on the crease who ripped a shot to the back of the net. Sandwich scored again with the man advantage with some nice ball movement and a quality shot from the middle.

At the start of the fourth, the Blue Knights scored again on the man-up to climb within a goal. Flibotte dodging from behind got that one back unassisted. After still another Sandwich goal, Flibotte took the ball away from his defender on the ride, raced straight to the restraining line, and buried the shot high to low. But Sandwich scored again. Grimm then found Flibotte alone on the crease with a pass from behind which Flibotte leaped in the air to grab, shoot, and score what turned out to be the game winner. Sandwich scored with less than a minute to go to make it a one goal game again, setting the stage for Porter's late game heroics.

All American Mark Flibotte led Cohasset scorers with six goals and one assist. Will Wise added three goals and four assists in a break out game for him and Mike Grimm had one goal and three assists. Nate Porter had nine saves but none bigger than the one he made to close the game.

Beijing readies for the Olympics

By Fran Golden
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

The clerks at the Silk Street Market are experts at negotiating.Beijing readies for the Olympics

STAFF PHOTOS BY FRAN GOLDEN

The Beijing Olympics slogan "One World, One Dream," is everywhere, including at The Great Wall.

BEIJING -

On a recent visit to China, I was standing on the Great Wall, with the little voice in my head saying, "WOW, I AM STANDING ON THE GREAT WALL OF CHINA." I was so excited I text-messaged a friend to tell him where I was.

"Is it great?" he responded.

I should have quoted Richard Nixon. "I think that you would have to conclude that this is a great wall" (1972). Instead, my mind blanked and I just said, "Yeah."

I'd come to China to check out the preparations for the Beijing Olympics. Despite recent protests over China's human rights abuses, the games are very much set to get under way on Aug. 8.

Despite the thrill of walking a bit of the Great Wall, being here I found myself most surprised by the fact Beijing has been so modernized - literally, neighborhoods are being demolished (and longtime residents uprooted) to make way for both Olympics sites and newfangled high-rises, created by international teams of architects.

China is clearly preparing to make the point to the world viewing the Olympics that this city is the showplace of a modern economic superpower.

Olympics preparations

In the north of Beijing, buildings are emerging on the Olympic Green, and like at a Chinese banquet, everything is over the top.

Already the talk of the town is the brand new National Stadium, which boasts steel laced together into what looks to some like something a bird would create, hence the building's nickname "Bird's Nest." To others, me included, the place looks more like a Martian space ship. The facility will host 91,000 spectators for the opening and closing ceremonies of the Beijing Olympics. Many of the track and field events will be held there. A membrane inside the steel shell will keep everyone dry, though not necessarily protected from the city's legendary pollution, which tends to be a problem more in the summer than other times of year.

Next door the National Aquatics Centre looks like a giant grouping of blocks of ice - it's been given the nickname "Ice Cube." Inside the translucent blue membranes are five swimming pools that will benefit from natural light (some have complained the plastic structure may let in too much natural light). This building would not be out of place on, say, the moon.

Also under construction and set to be completed soon is the Olympic Village, with apartment housing for 205 athlete delegations. Plantings are going into the ground in a new park nearby.

In the same area, several huge hotels and a shopping center are being readied. A TGI Friday's is already open at one hotel.

All over the city and in its environs, too, are Beijing Olympics signs, with the slogan, "One World, One Dream."

There is clearly excitement about the upcoming onslaught, and a little trepidation, too. "My government says we are ready," opined one guide.

Exploring Beijing

In the center of the city, skyscrapers gleam and highways are packed with cars including highly prized Audis. To catch a glimpse of an old temple or peaked roof, you'll have to look hard. The imperial city is now a concrete jungle.

You can find history, of course, at the major sights: The Forbidden City and Tiananmen Square, the Temple of Heaven and, outside the city, the Summer Palace, Ming Tombs and the Great Wall (parts reachable in about an hour from north Beijing). All are reminders of a time when emperors ruled the universe, or so the Chinese believed.

Most of the sites are in the throes of a pre-Olympics facelift - parts of the 15th century Forbidden City, home to emperors for generations, are now downright sparkling with fresh paint.

While capitalist-Communists are now in charge, Chairman Mao stands guard, his giant portrait on display on the gates to the Forbidden City, at the edge of Tiananmen Square, China's political nerve center. On the western side of the square there's an electronic billboard counting down the time until the Olympics.

If you're searching for Old China, you'll want to visit the hutongs, mazes of ancient alleyways with traditional courtyard houses. Although many of these neighborhoods have been demolished, in the remaining ones you will see signs of life like people attending prayer services at Buddhist temples, hanging laundry on clotheslines and cooking on outdoor hotpots - and rickshaw drivers aggressively selling tours. That's as un-Westernized as you'll find in this ultra-modern city.

The Great Wall stretches more than 4,100 miles across China and has a history dating back more than 2,000 years, but at the popular viewing spot at Badaling, there's a new distraction - a giant billboard with the slogan, "One World, One Dream." The "great" that people are supposed to be thinking about in coming months clearly has to do with Olympic gold.

Peking Duck and other taste delights

Eating is a pleasure in Beijing, and you can choose from all kinds of Chinese cuisine or go for the city's famous duck. We know it as Peking Duck, reflecting the city's historic name, but here it's known as Beijing Duck and there are even restaurants, such as Da Dong Roast Duck Restaurant (22 Dongsishitiaolu, Dongcheng; dinner for two about $50) that specialize only in that dish. Developed for the emperors, the dish involves pumping ducks full of air to separate the skin, air drying and then roasting in a wood-fired oven. The duck is served with thin pancakes, scallions and a sweet sauce. The crunchy skin is the best part.

There is, of course, other cuisine, from McDonald's to very top-end restaurants serving French, Italian, Japanese and more.

My favorite meal was at South Silk Road (19A Lotus Lane), which specializes in spicy Yunnan cuisine. The restaurant is owned by an artist and has a hip vibe. I sat in one of the deep, cushioned green chairs and perused a menu that, thankfully, had English translations but not at all a Western perspective. I decided I was not feeling adventurous enough to try the pot-roasted bullfrog. Nor did the fried bamboo worms sound enticing. I settled on a stewed chicken with Yunnan sour papaya, spicy sauce and rice noodles. And because you don't order just one course in a restaurant in China, also had a dish of broad beans and corn. It was a delicious meal - the tart papaya was particularly intriguing and the chili in the stew had just the right bite. And I was proud that I have become adept enough at using chopsticks I can now pick up a single kernel of corn. Total cost about $13.

IF YOU go...

Getting there: You'll probably need to do a connecting flight. A good option is to fly on British Airways (www.ba.com) through London, a route that takes you over Russia. Connecting through Heathrow is easy and if you are in Club World business class or first class you can even grab a shower at a lounge in between flights. The total flying time is about 16 hours. British Airways recently opened Terminal 5 at Heathrow, which features cool new offerings like a runway-view restaurant called Plane Food, created by Michelin-starred British chef Gordon Ramsay, designer shops including an outpost of Tiffany's and a Denim Bar operated by Harrod's. Be aware you need a visa to visit China; find information at www.china-embassy.org.

Staying there: Beijing is well equipped with hotels reflecting the city's modern spirit. Two of the best are the Shangri-La Hotel in the western part of the city and the China World Hotel in the central business area. Both boast a variety of restaurants, top-flight amenities, concierge floors (the Shangri-La has a whole new concierge wing with a CHI spa) and excellent personalized service. Special four-night, pre-Olympics packages let you view the city before the crowds get there, and include airport transfers, privately guided tours and activities and select meals. Priced from about $2,808 for two at the Shangri-La Hotel, from $3,493 at the China World Hotel (also available at other Shangri-La Hotels and Resorts properties in Beijing), through June 30. Contact your travel agent, call 866-565-5050 or visit www.shangri-la.com.

Olympics packages: Tour operators offering packages to the Beijing Olympics with tickets to events include Sports Traveler (www.sportstraveler.net) and Road Trips (www.road-trips.com).

Family Fun on I-93

IN NEW ENGLAND

Barbara Rogers and Lura Seavey
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

SALEM, N.H. - Interstate 93 draws a line through the center of New Hampshire. The highway crosses into the state near Lawrence and follows the Merrimack River through Manchester and Concord before passing the Lakes Region and traveling through the scenic heart of the White Mountains.

Even if you're using I-93 as a fast route to a destination you've already chosen, stop to enjoy family attractions and experiences, just minutes from the highway.

Begin at Exit 2 in Salem, at Canobie Lake Park, a century-old amusement park where dozens of rides are designed for all ages and thrill levels (603-893-3506, www.canobie.com).

Stray off at Exit 11 to Bear Brook State Park, where the low-key Museum of Family Camping and Snowmobile Museum join picnic sites and hiking trails as the large park's attractions (603-485-9869, www.nhstate-parks.com). In Concord, Exit 15-E leads to the Christa McAuliffe Planetarium, with astronomy shows in the 40-foot domed theater (603-271-7827, www.starhop.com).

A turn west at Exit 20 leads to downtown Tilton, and the impressive Tilton Arch, a 55-foot granite replica of the Arch of Titus in Rome. To the east, Weirs Beach, on Lake Winnipesaukee, takes on a lively resort atmosphere in summer, with a boardwalk, arcades, shops and family-friendly entertainment.

For a different lake experience, choose Exit 24 to Holderness, on peaceful Squam Lake, where the Squam Lakes Natural Science Center offers kid-pleasing exhibits of native wildlife (603-968-7194, www.nhnature.org).

Exit 32 offers a number of diversions for kids including Whales Tale Water Park (603-745-8810, www.whalestalewaterpark.net) and Hobo Railroad, a train ride along the river with a clown for a conductor and lunches packed in hobo bandanas (603-745-2135, www.hoborr.com). Clark's Trading Post, a charming park, has another train ride, an ice cream parlor and a show featuring bears that seem to be having as much fun as the kids watching them (603-745-8913, www.clarkstradingpost.com).

Littleton's classic Main Street lies off Exit 42. The top place the kids will want to visit is Chutters - believed to have the longest candy counter in the world.

Local barbershop chorus is singing for life to save lives

On May 10th the South Shore Men of Harmony are teaming up with the American Red Cross and have joined with over 200 other Barbershop Harmony Society choruses across America and Canada in what could be the largest and most effective blood drive and donor recruitment project in history. The Society "Singing For Life Blood Drive" choruses, quartets and other local musical groups will serve as an all-day draw for local potential donors, resulting in a huge shot in the arm (pun intended) to boost and maintain a 5-10 day blood supply in the communities of North American.

The fact is, nearly 2000 units of blood are needed each day to help those in need right in our own community. The life of Bill Brennan, a 59-year charter member of the Hingham-based chorus, was saved by the transfusion of over 100 units of blood that he required during a recent series of operations. Bill, nearing 90 years of age, is a former resident of Scituate now residing in Linden Ponds, has recovered and returned to the chorus rehearsals and performances. The chorus has pledged a commitment to the donor program that saved Bill's life and has accepted the challenge to collect enough blood to meet the needs of hospital patients year round.

"Giving Blood Now Comes With Background Music" provided by the Men of Harmony Chorus and Quartets have joined the Red Cross team to help ensure that a safe and adequate blood supply is available when needed. Please continue supporting your family, friends, neighbors and coworkers by donating blood on Saturday, May 10, at St.Paul School Hall (behind St.Paul's Church on South St.), 18 Fearing Road, Hingham. The hours for blood donation will be from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.

It only takes about an hour of time — and one small pinch — to become a hero to someone in need. Every donation is an opportunity to help an accident victim, a surgical patient, or a child battling leukemia, to name a few. Anyone 17 years of age or older, weighing 110 pounds or more and feeling in good health may be eligible to donate blood.

Please call 1-800-GIVE-LIFE (1-800-448-3543) with questions about giving blood and to make an appointment, which will save waiting in line, or visit the Red Cross web site at: www.newenglandblood.org. For the Men of Harmony call: 1-781-337-(SING) 7464.

OBITUARIES

Eleanor Claflin Williams Ladd

Artist, former president of South Shore Art Center board of directors

Eleanor Claflin Williams Ladd, of Winchester, N.H. and Cohasset, was born January 31, 1916 and passed away peacefully surrounded by her family on April 19, 2008.

She was the beloved wife of Thomas Blake Williams until his death in October 2000 and William Ladd of Winchester, N.H. since December 2001. Eleanor (Claffy) attended The Winsor School and later Sweet Briar College. She led an active life, playing tennis and skiing well into her 90th year. In 1938 Claffy watched the German troops occupy St. Anton, Austria while training for the United States Women's ski team.

Throughout her life, Claffy's interest in art included studying with George Dergalis of Lincoln and later at the Museum School of the Museum of Fine Arts. For many years Claffy worked as a gallery guide in the MFA where she developed an appreciation of Greek and Asian art. Her knowledge of these cultures greatly influenced the direction of her painting.

Claffy won several awards in major shows, including 15 one-person shows and more than 30 group exhibits in the Boston and New York area. An invitation in 1970 to show in the Grand Prix of Paris, and in the Museum of Modern Art in Tonneins, Bordeaux, reflected her international appeal. The use of nature as a subject of her paintings integrated a blend of exotic Eastern simplicity and Western abstraction.

In the 1980s Claffy served as president of the Board of Directors of the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset. During her tenure she coordinated the campaign drive that financed the exquisite new gallery and teaching space for the Center, which opened in 1987.

She leaves four children: Thomas B. Williams, Jr. and wife Mary of Warren, Vt., Susan W. Dickie of Weston, Mass., Eleanor W. Wright and husband Tim of Clark, Colo., and Sandra W. Weiss and husband David of Arrowsic, Maine. She also leaves 11 grandchildren and eight great grandchildren.

A funeral service will be private, for family members only.

Donations in her memory may be made to the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd., Cohasset, MA 02025.

WORSHIP NOTES

Mitzvah Day at Sha'aray Shalom

Members of Hingham's Congregation Sha'aray Shalom will join in a local tradition that connects them to the deepest roots of Judaism on Sunday, May 4.

Mitvah, plural, mitzvoth, is a Hebrew word that means both a commandment and a good deed. Performing mitzvot is an ongoing, lifelong requirement for Jews, who are told in the Bible story that the Patriarch Abraham found favor with the Divine because of his many loving acts of kindness toward family, friends and most importantly, to strangers. Nearly four millennia later, Abraham is still the ideal of the righteous person whose charitable behavior remains the model for modern Jews.

Mitzvah Day is an annual event in which the congregants of the Reform synagogue on Main Street, whose members come from all over the South Shore, join in the performance of communal mitzvot. In this they honor a central tenet of their faith.

Judy Kalla, co-chairwoman of the synagogue's Social Action Committee, which oversees Mitzvah Day, said, "What's most special to me about the day is that it is a multi-generational celebration. Our volunteers, parents, our Hebrew school kids, grandparents, everyone comes together to work for a greater good."

Along with the laity, Sha'aray Shalom's religious leaders, Rabbi Shira Joseph and Cantor Steven Weiss, whose vocations call them to ongoing acts of kindness, express their commitment to Mitzvah Day by joining in the day's activities.

There are mitzvot for every age, temperament and interest: A blood drive, conducted by Brigham and Women's Hospital and open to the public, 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.; visiting a local nursing home; helping elderly residents of Hingham with home repairs; joining Boston's annual Walk for Hunger; gardening and clean-up at the synagogue; CPR training course; and beach clean up in Hull.

Cindy McDonald the other co-chairwoman of the Social Action Committee assumed her leadership position last fall. When asked about her inspiration to join in she spoke of her mother. "My mother passed away last year, after a prolonged illness. I was her primary caregiver. When I look at her life, I realize how much she did for others. She raised four kids, and worked full time and still found time to volunteer in so many worthy causes. After she was gone I realized that I had to give something back too. I know I can never equal her generosity but she is my inspiration."

From generation to generation stretching back to antiquity, Jews have been called upon to serve others. In Mitzvah Day, the members of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom reaffirm the call of the Prophet Micah: "and what does the Lord require of you: only to do justice and to love goodness and to walk humbly with your God; then your name will achieve wisdom."

Pembroke Dealer Refuses To Suspend Upcoming Event:

Hugely Successful $29* Down & $89* Per Month Pricing Event Will Go On.

Due To the Overwhelming Response Innovative Car Buying Program Will Continue Despite Local Competitors' Attempts to Pressure Dealer to Discontinue Event.

Staff Writer: Dan Ready

PEMBROKE, MA – Rob McGee, Owner of McGee Pre-Owned Superstore on Route 139, announced today that he is planning to conduct another "Insider" pricing event this Friday, April 25th thru Monday, April 28th, regardless of any attempt by the local competitors' to pressure him to suspend the program which he began running recently. This unique auto buying concept has stunned a number of his local competitors' who are less than pleased with McGee's ability to offer vehicles for just $29 down and only $89 per month. The program, also known as the "National Auto-motive 'Insider' Sales Event", has been conducted at dealerships throughout the country. Customers who have participated in this unique sales event have been raving about the tremendous deals they have received and are thrilled at the prospect of being able to buy Pre-Owned vehicles for only $29* down and $89* per month.

The next event scheduled at McGee Pre-Owned Superstore will be held this Friday, April 25th thru Monday, April 28th. McGee offers a simple explanation, as to why these innovative events will continue, "Dealers today are facing stiff competition and I simply can't stand by and watch business suffer so I've made a commitment to turning over our entire inventory of Pre-Owned vehicles every month, as quickly as possible. Every day we receive low mileage lease turn-ins, factory-program cars, recent trade-ins and bank repossessed vehicles from each of our other dealership locations that we must sell. By aggressively discounting these vehicles, we have seen our sales rise as we easily beat the competition on price and selection." He adds, "rather than these vehicles languishing on our lot unsold for over 30 days and then being forced to sell them to wholesalers or strangers at auctions for zero profit, we've begun taking a new approach. We're offering them at drastically discounted prices direct to the general public." During this upcoming event, vehicles will be clearly marked and sold for as low as $29* down and just $89* per month. Every effort will be made to secure credit approval for those who may have had credit problems in the past.

"We Discovered An Affordable Way For Customers to Purchase Vehicles for Just $29* Down & $89* Per Month & Now the Local Competition Is Up In Arms"

Rob McGee-Owner

The selection of vehicles we now have to choose from is the best it's been in recent months. Many are late model vehicles with low mileage and the balance of their factory warranties remaining. There will be many makes and models to choose from including Dodge, Chev-rolet, Ford, Chrysler, Honda, Nissan and Toyota. An abundance of SUVs will also be featured, including Tahoes, Rav-4s, Cherokees, Explorers and more.

For auto shoppers looking for a very low monthly payment, there will be many choices, including a 2005 Ford Taurus for just $29 down and $89 a month. Sample payments will be clearly marked on vehicles. Simply pick a vehicle and a payment. It's that easy.

McGee cites another example, a 2004 Chevy Impala, for only $29* down and $89* per month. We'll even pay off your trade regardless of any balance due. This is a unbelievable opportunity to buy a car, truck, minivan or sport utility vehicle for just twenty-nine* dollars down!

Loan processing & finance representatives will be on-site during this event to ensure prompt credit approval and same day delivery of all sold vehicles.

Response to these programs has been substantial. As a result McGee Pre-Owned Superstore will extend their sale hours to accommodate everyone. To expedite the sale process to ensure that you can take delivery of your new vehicle promptly they are recommending that customers bring the vehicle they wish to trade, pay-ment book or title (if vehicle is paid off) and all decision makers.

McGee would like to remind customers that the event is first-come, first-served, so it's critical to come early to have the best chance of getting the vehicle of your choice. Remember, the exclusive site for this event is:

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF APRIL 21, 2008

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You easily handle your tasks this week, thanks to those high energy levels that never seem to run down. But pace yourself, Lamb, for the demanding week ahead.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) With the arts dominant this week, you might want to pick up any of those creative projects you've neglected. A workplace situation benefits from some fresh insight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Music helps replenish your energy levels. Play your CDs if you must. But a live concert could prove more rewarding, especially if you go with that very special someone.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Close friends reach out to help perk up your lagging social life. That workplace situation also eases, leaving you time to do more fun things by week's end.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A revelation clears up that perplexing job-related problem. Some changes will have to be made, which, no doubt, will meet with the Big Cat's roaring approval. Good luck.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Reaching out to someone in need is the noble thing to do. But try to restrain the temptation to add a lecture — no matter how well-intended — to your good deed.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) There could be another tough challenge to face before the month is over. But all that hard work is winning you lots of important recognition from your peers.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Keeping to your work schedule could prove difficult with all those personal distractions. Best advice: Stay with it. There'll be time later for socializing.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Jumping hurdles this week might be vexing for most, but not for the sage Sagittarian, who recognizes that meeting a challenge can open up opportunities.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) More obstacles might be thrown in your path as you try to finalize a new agreement. But the sure-footed Goat ignores the stumbling blocks and stays the course.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) We know the Water Bearer takes pleasure in giving to others. But why not let someone else enjoy the experience too by accepting that offer of help?

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might find you need to ease up on your hectic schedule this week. Don't fret about it. It could be helpful to take a break and replenish your energy supply.

(c) 2008 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of finding practical solutions to complex problems, and you do it with grace.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

'Hairspray' is a big time production

Musical hits Boston's Wang Theatre

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

"You're going to have to start eating more chocolate, the costumes are getting too big," is advice most actresses will never, ever hear. Unless, like Brooklyn Pulver, they're playing Tracy Turnblad, a big girl with big hair and a big heart in the musical "Hairspray," opening Friday at Boston's Wang Theatre. The Utah-born Pulver says genetics only go so far in helping her maintain her full figure during what can be some grueling days on the road, so double-thick milkshakes and candy bars are sometimes called into service.

"There are some shows that you can totally cast blindly. Obviously, this show has to be cast with very specific types. You have to have a plus-size girl for Tracy. If you cast a skinny girl and put her in a fat suit, it just doesn't hold the same weight – literally or figuratively – that it does when you see a girl who's plus-size up there bustin' it," explained Pulver by telephone from Buffalo recently.

And bust it Pulver does in the current tour of the 2003 Tony Award winner for best musical, based on the 1988 John Waters cult film and the inspiration for the 2007 movie musical. By 1962, with Ike and Mamie retired to Gettysburg and Jack and Jackie in the White House, change is everywhere including Baltimore, where teenage Tracy's one passion is to dance. And when her fast-moving feet land her on the small-screen dance program "The Corny Collins Show," Tracy is transformed from an outsider to an irrepressible teen celebrity who not only wins the heart of heartthrob Link Larkin, but also helps her African-American friends integrate local television, all without missing a beat.

"Tracy has a lovely quality of naïveté that gets her through some tough times. She's definitely an underdog, but she's young and she lays things out simply. Adults see the danger in the change she leads, but ultimately they realize the risks are worth it because they lead to greater good," Pulver said.

The young trendsetter has support, too, from her equally over-sized mother, Edna Turnblad, a role first played on film by the late, great Divine, and later by a fat-suit clad John Travolta. Jerry O'Boyle will play the agoraphobic mother in Boston alongside Dan Ferretti as loyal husband and father, and jokeshop proprietor, Wilbur Turnblad.

"Tracy and Edna are coming into their womanhood together supported by Wilbur's unconditional love which is very sweet to watch," Pulver said of the trio of Turnblads played on Broadway, to Tony Award-winning perfection, by Harvey Fierstein ("A Catered Affair"), Marissa Jaret Winokur ("Dancing with the Stars") and Dick Latessa.

It wasn't long after the show, with music and lyrics Marc Shaiman and Scott Wittman and a book by Thomas Meehan, debuted at New York's Neil Simon Theatre that Pulver realized the young female lead was a role she wanted to play.

"I got the cast album as soon as it came out and then I watched the original movie, with Ricki Lake as Tracy, on video. I loved the story, the dancing and, of course, the hairdos. I was a big John Waters fan, too, so I was like, 'I can do that show. That's totally feasible.' I could actually be a leading lady and still be plus-sized. I mean that usually just doesn't happen so I couldn't look away from this show."

The show's producers passed on Pulver at audition after audition, however, until she was finally cast in 2006 on a tour that has taken her all over the U.S., to Tokyo and Osaka, Japan, and soon to Shanghai, China. The international tour stops have proven the musical's worldwide appeal even if some of the jokes take a little longer to sink in when told in other languages.

"The Japanese are very into American pop culture so they loved the show. We had wonderful live subtitlers, but the timing of everything was still a little different. Some of the jokes worked and others did not. Also, the Japanese audiences were very quiet during the show, which took some getting used to for all of us in the company. We were warned in advance, however, that they might go wild at the end and it would feel like a rock concert. They did and we ate it up, even adding three or four more curtain calls at each performance. I've never in my life heard people scream so loud at the end of a show."

"Hairspray" will be at the Citi Performing Arts Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont St., Boston, April 25-27 for five shows only. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 866-348-9738 or go online at citicenter.org.

"How I Learned to Drive" concerns an affair between its protagonist, Li'l Bit, and her uncle Peck. The affair takes place over the course of years, with the character of Li'l Bit maturing from age 11 to 18 before she puts an end to it. In spite of the serious situation, there are many comical elements of the play, which avoids the expected condemnation of this situation to look at the basic humanity that binds these two characters.

The cast of students of "How I Learned to Drive" come from all over the Massachusetts area: Mike Lacey of Braintree, Emily Buckley of Bridgewater, Erin Draper of Bridgewater, Sarah Cook of Brockton, Carole Shannon of Canton, Joseph Helm of Dartmouth, Adam Joy East Bridgewater, Alley Bernier of Fall River, Andrew Adler of Mansfield, Stephanie Kelley of Mendon, Lauren Lewis of Newburyport, Melanie Bernier of Norfolk, Nicole Fitzpatrick Oxford, Kacie Dietrich of Pembroke, Bethany Trepanier of Rehoboth, Jamie Salemi of Revere, Kevin Hayes of South Yarmouth, Shannon Dwyer of Walpole and Curtis Bellaflore of Weymouth.

"How I Learned to Drive" will be performed at the Rondileau Campus Center Auditorium at Bridgewater State College on April 25 and 26, and May 1, 2, 3 at 8 p.m. and on April 27 at 2 p.m. Ticket prices are $10 for the general public and $5 for BSC students. For information or reservations, call the Bridgewater State College Box Office at 508-531-1321.

No decision on Ripley Road

More information needed on project

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A seven-unit, two affordable, condominium development is on the table for the large single-family house at the corner of Ripley Road and Sohier Street.

Neighbors have listed off numerous concerns with the site, the Housing Partnership Committee needs more information before making a recommendation and the Selectmen did not take a firm stance on the 25 Ripley Road project.

Cohasset resident, Will Charles, is proposing the housing project under Chapter 40B, the state's affordable housing law. Charles has submitted an application to Mass Housing for the project and Mass Housing is seeking the town's input on the project.

Under Chapter 40B, the zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards, like Cohasset, are vulnerable to 40-B projects.

The project can proceed in one of two ways. If the Board of Selectmen endorses the project, the development would become a Local Initiative Program, or LIP, which is often called "friendly 40B." In a LIP, the town and developer working together to bring forward the project to the state. If the Board of Selectmen does not give its support, the project could still proceed under Chapter 40B.

In both cases, the project will need to seek a zoning board comprehensive

Happily ever after on stage

Middle schoolers perform in drama festival

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Have you ever wondered if fairy tale characters really live "happily ever after?" What if those fairy tale princesses met with their worst enemy on a television talk show?

These questions will be answered when over 20 middle school students take to the stage — both in front of the curtain and behind it — in search of a "happy ever after" Saturday. They will perform the one act play "The Ever After" in the middle school division of the Massachusetts High School Drama Guild Festival.

Comedy abounds when the evil stepsisters try to reconnect with Cinderella, Snow White is ready to forgive the Evil Queen, Jiminy Cricket is on hand to offer expert advice and a frog gets kissed by two princesses.

All three middle school grades are represented in the effort. From set props to lights to acting, the middle school students have created a topsy-turvy fantasy world where nearly everything is larger than life: microphones look like giant ice cream cones

Chamber finds its voice

New members breathe new life

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"We need to be more of a voice and not be so dormant."
— Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's

From Route 3A to the village, Cohasset has dozens of shopping and service options — boutiques to antiques, lawyers to accountants, jewelry to real estate agencies.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is the one association where all those different business interests can come together for a greater good. While the chamber has been relatively quiet for the past few years, recently additional members have joined bringing new energy to the group.

With quarterly networking nights, monthly board meetings, a re-vamped website the Chamber is hoping to establish its presence inside and outside the city limits.

"We need to be more of a voice and not be so dormant," said Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's and secretary for the chamber.

The Cohasset Chamber is comprised of nearly 100 members representing a cross section of businesses from merchants to service-based businesses throughout town. While many of the members call the village their home base, the Chamber includes several 3A businesses and is looking for more Cohasset businesses to join their ranks.

Instead of creating a village association, Evans said many of the village merchants made the decision to join the town-wide Chamber of Commerce this year. "We didn't want to duplicate work," said Evans.

Although local businesses are the reason for the Cohasset Chamber, they would like to go beyond promote all the town has to offer from Sandy Beach to the numerous walking trails to the historical museums.

The Chamber is working on getting materials together to market Cohasset as a great place to visit as well as a great place to live. In the past, the chamber has created and distributed a Cohasset map and shopping guide — a 2008 version is in the works.

The re-vamped website (www.cohassetchamber.org) contains information about Cohasset, its business and its amenities. Evans says people are visiting the website and e-mailing to find out more information about where to stay in Cohasset and what to do while they are there.

"Cohasset is a nice community and has a lot to offer. It's not just a nice beach and pretty views, there's an economically viable community here," said

Village parking

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

From 6 to 9p.m. be careful where you park in the village. In the coming weeks two new 15-minute parking spaces will be added in front of Village Wine and Liquors.

The Board of Selectmen approved the removal of one 15-minute spot in front of Atlantic Bagel (left over from when the building housed a pizza place) and the two new spots.

The request was made for the short-term parking spaces by Chris Ford, owner of the property at 29 South Main St.

"I am concerned that the current parking policies on South Main Street are adversely impacting my tenant, Village Wine and Liquors," wrote Ford in a letter to Town Manager Bill Griffin.

No decision on Ripley Road

More information needed on project

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A seven-unit, two affordable, condominium development is on the table for the large single-family house at the corner of Ripley Road and Sohier Street.

Neighbors have listed off numerous concerns with the site, the Housing Partnership Committee needs more information before making a recommendation and the Selectmen did not take a firm stance on the 25 Ripley Road project.

Cohasset resident, Will Charles, is proposing the housing project under Chapter 40B, the state's affordable housing law. Charles has submitted an application to Mass Housing for the project and Mass Housing is seeking the town's input on the project.

Under Chapter 40B, the zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards, like Cohasset, are vulnerable to 40-B projects.

The project can proceed in one of two ways. If the Board of Selectmen endorses the project, the development would become a Local Initiative Program, or LIP, which is often called "friendly 40B." In a LIP, the town and developer working together to bring forward the project to the state. If the Board of Selectmen does not give its support, the project could still proceed under Chapter 40B.

In both cases, the project will need to seek a zoning board comprehensive

Happily ever after on stage

Middle schoolers perform in drama festival

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Have you ever wondered if fairy tale characters really live "happily ever after?" What if those fairy tale princesses met with their worst enemy on a television talk show?

These questions will be answered when over 20 middle school students take to the stage — both in front of the curtain and behind it — in search of a "happy ever after" Saturday. They will perform the one act play "The Ever After" in the middle school division of the Massachusetts High School Drama Guild Festival.

Comedy abounds when the evil stepsisters try to reconnect with Cinderella, Snow White is ready to forgive the Evil Queen, Jiminy Cricket is on hand to offer expert advice and a frog gets kissed by two princesses.

All three middle school grades are represented in the effort. From set props to lights to acting, the middle school students have created a topsy-turvy fantasy world where nearly everything is larger than life: microphones look like giant ice cream cones

Chamber finds its voice

New members breathe new life

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

From Route 3A to the village, Cohasset has dozens of shopping and service options — boutiques to antiques, lawyers to accountants, jewelry to real estate agencies.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is the one association where all those different business interests can come together for a greater good. While the chamber has been relatively quiet for the past few years, recently additional members have joined bringing new energy to the group.

With quarterly networking nights, monthly board meetings, a re-vamped website the Chamber is hoping to establish its presence inside and outside the city limits.

"We need to be more of a voice and not be so dormant," said Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's and secretary for the chamber.

"We need to be more of a voice and not be so dormant."
— Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's

The Cohasset Chamber is comprised of nearly 100 members representing a cross section of businesses from merchants to service-based businesses throughout town. While many of the members call the village their home base, the Chamber includes several 3A businesses and is looking for more Cohasset businesses to join their ranks.

Instead of creating a village association, Evans said many of the village merchants made the decision to join the town-wide Chamber of Commerce this year. "We didn't want to duplicate work," said Evans.

Although local businesses are the reason for the Cohasset Chamber, they would like to go beyond promote all the town has to offer from Sandy Beach to the numerous walking trails to the historical museums.

The Chamber is working on getting materials together to market Cohasset as a great place to visit as well as a great place to live. In the past, the chamber has created and distributed a Cohasset map and shopping guide — a 2008 version is in the works.

The re-vamped website (www.cohassetchamber.org) contains information about Cohasset, its business and its amenities. Evans says people are visiting the website and e-mailing to find out more information about where to stay in Cohasset and what to do while they are there.

"Cohasset is a nice community and has a lot to offer. It's not just a nice beach and pretty views, there's an economically viable community here," said

Village parking

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

From 6 to 9p.m. be careful where you park in the village. In the coming weeks two new 15-minute parking spaces will be added in front of Village Wine and Liquors.

The Board of Selectmen approved the removal of one 15-minute spot in front of Atlantic Bagel (left over from when the building housed a pizza place) and the two new spots.

The request was made for the short-term parking spaces by Chris Ford, owner of the property at 29 South Main St.

"I am concerned that the current parking policies on South Main Street are adversely impacting my tenant, Village Wine and Liquors," wrote Ford in a letter to Town Manager Bill Griffin.

PICTURE THIS/Joseph R. Nedrow

Name: Joseph R. Nedrow.

Former occupation: 30-plus years as General Motors executive. This included an assignment to the White House during the Ford Administration. The last 20 years prior to retirement as regional executive and corporate lobbyist.

Best day or most memorable moment: Too many to count. Marriage, children, three graduate degrees, grandchildren, travel, golf and retirement.

Favorite song: I have no musical aptitude or talent. My children would probably suggest it be "My Way" by Frank Sinatra.

Best part of Cohasset: The best part of Cohasset is Cohasset. The sum of its individual attributes are greater than its whole. Its people, natural beauty, town spirit, the golf course, the ocean, the schools. It's the total package that makes Cohasset the great place it is.

What does Cohasset Elder Affairs mean to you: My initial exposure to the Council was through my interest to create senior housing opportunities to keep our seniors in Cohasset. Our demographics indicate 25 percent of the town's population is seniors. My retirement has been enriched by meeting and working with many people I had not known before. It has been a pleasure working with these volunteers, and especially gratifying when our efforts are appreciated by those we serve. The seniors in Cohasset contribute significantly to the quality of life we all enjoy as residents of this great town. We should make every effort to keep each one in town as long as possible.

If your knew then what you know now: Fate seems to play a major role in our lives. I am not sure prior knowledge would make much difference.

COURTESY PHOTO/JERI HERMAN

Joseph Nedrow stands by the sign outside the South Shore Community Center at 3 N. Main St. which also houses the Senior Center. In May, the Mariner is celebrating Older Americans Month with the Council on Elder Affairs by highlighting senior citizens.

What have you learned in your life that you would like to share with others: A good education is a great equalizer, and the harder you work the luckier you will be.

What is your motto: I like Henry Ford's quote, "If you think you can or if you think you can't you are probably right."

May is Older Americans Month

"Across the nation May is celebrated as Older Americans Month. President John F. Kennedy designated May 1963 as Senior Citizens Month, asking the nation to pay tribute in some way to older people across the country. In 1980, President Jimmy Carter changed the name to Older Americans Month as a time to celebrate older adults through ceremonies, events and fairs." United States Census Bureau.

Hull man faces counterfeit money charge

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

On Saturday (April 26) Cohasset police arrested a 22-year-old Hull man in connection with an on-going counterfeit money investigation.

Chief James Hussey said stores along Route 3A were notified after a man passed a counterfeit $20 bill last Thursday (April 24).

"We put out notices telling the stores to be cautious," Hussey said.

"We put out notices telling the stores to be cautious."
Police Chief James Hussey

Saturday evening police received a call from a store that a man had passed a counterfeit $20 bill within the last 10 minutes. Police interviewed witnesses who provided a description of the vehicle and put out a BOLO (be on the lookout) to area towns.

An hour later at about 9:40 p.m., a Cohasset officer observed a car fitting the description heading from Hull Street in Cohasset down Rockland Street in Hingham toward Muzzi's Corner. Cohasset and Hingham police stopped the car on Summer Street at the Rotary. There were two people in the car and police placed the passenger, Christian R. Lavoie of 6 Olney St., Hull, under arrest.

Lavoie allegedly negotiated two counterfeit $20 bills at a Cohasset business on April 24; he has been charged with uttering a counterfeit note and possessing a counterfeit note.

The investigation is ongoing and includes the US Secret Service, Hussey said.

Trespassing

For the second time in as many months, Cohasset police have made an arrest for trespassing along the Greenbush right-of-way.

At about 7 p.m. on Friday (April 25), an officer on patrol saw a man walking along the tracks near the Sohier Street crossing; as a result of his observation, police arrested Jonathan Allen, 23, of Weymouth, for trespassing on the railroad right-of-way, a violation of state law. Commuter rail service was not interrupted.

On March 27, the dispatch center received reports of a man walking along the tracks near Sohier Street and police arrested the 22-year-old Rockland man.

Cohasset police have a zero tolerance policy on trespassing along the right-of-way.

"We have tried to make it clear from the beginning that it is very important for people's safety to stay away from the tracks," Chief Hussey said. "We will take criminal action against anyone who is trespassing along the railway."

Resisting arrest

A Cohasset teen is facing several charges including resisting arrest and assault and battery on a police officer following an incident last week at the basketball court off Ripley Road behind the library.

A police officer saw a vehicle with its lights on in the parking lot near the court and four teens playing basketball at just before 1 a.m. on Thursday (April 24). The officer went over to the boys, one of whom started walking toward him and was unsteady on his feet. Another cruiser arrived and police recognized all the boys – three of whom were determined to be under the influence of alcohol, police said.

The one who displayed no signs of intoxication had the car and was allowed to drive home. Police found a 40-ounce bottle of beer at the scene and planned to take the three boys, who had been drinking, under protective custody.

However, one of the teens pulled away and took off. A short foot chase ensued and he was subsequently charged with resisting arrest. At booking the same boy struck one of the officers in an attempt to flee, so he was also charged with assault and battery on a police officer. As he tried to flee, a metal door was damaged so he also faces a vandalism charge.

Money taken

A resident of Old Pasture Road went to the police station last week to report that a couple of hundred dollars was taken from his car that had been parked in the driveway. Police think the theft occurred sometime between 9 p.m. and 6 a.m. overnight Tuesday (April 22) to Wednesday (April 23). There was no forced entry to the vehicle and other items of value in the car were not taken. The incident is under investigation.

Marijuana

Police were unable to locate a car that a caller reported seeing the occupants smoking marijuana in. The call came in at 4:36 p.m. on Thursday (April 24). The caller reported that a few minutes before she was next to a black sedan full of teens smoking marijuana. Police also contacted Scituate police but did not have a plate number or better description of the car.

Disorderly conduct

Police caught one Cohasset teen that faces a disorderly conduct charge after reports of cars parked on Aaron River Road and kids drinking in the area.

Chief Hussey said when the officer first arrived at the scene at about 10:45 p.m. on Friday (April 25), a car had its door open and the teen that was standing by the car took off upon seeing the officer. There was no one else nearby and the officer did not apprehend the teen.

Later, the officer returned to the area and talked to a boy and girl who were then standing by the same car. This boy said he drove the car to the scene and did not know that another boy had been near the car earlier. The officer thought the teens were being truthful.

The officer found two unopened beers in the car and was not comfortable with the teens driving, so parents were contacted. However, there was no indication that those two teens had been drinking.

Sometime later, the officer returned and this time, there were several teens around, they scattered, running through people's yards. Some residents came out of their houses when they heard the disturbance. The officer apprehended one boy, who was heavily intoxicated. He was charged with disorderly conduct and was checked out by paramedics at the station due to his high level of intoxication, police said.

Door-to-door

A complaint about door-to-door solicitation last week turned out to be members of the Jehovah's Witnesses. Religious organizations are allowed to go door-to-door without registering with police.

Dropped wallet

A man who dropped his wallet onto the tracks at the train station, went down to retrieve it last Friday (April 25) at about 4:23 p.m.. A person called it in as a possible trespasser, police said.

Found cards

A Scituate resident found two insurance cards and an AAA card belonging to a Cohasset resident last week and brought them to the station. The owner was contacted and picked them up, police said.

Hoax

Police are treating a phone call asking a local business if any "armored cars" were coming today as a hoax. An employee at a local business reported the incident to police but there was not caller ID and little other information.

Mock accident is good practice

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Chances are the real thing would not happen on a quiet Sunday morning when most area residents are either in church or sleeping in.

But Sunday's mock train disaster at the Water Street grade crossing in Hingham provided valuable training for public safety services – including area police and fire departments, area hospitals and the MBTA – should an unspeakable tragedy occur.

"The whole idea of the drill is to find the weak spots," said Hingham Fire Chief Mark Duff immediately after Sunday's event.

Hingham civilian dispatchers were careful to reiterate over the radio each time they asked for more assistance at the accident scene that involved a car, school bus and commuter train: "this is only a drill."

The "staged" accident and comprehensive response involved several area towns, the MBTA, South Shore Hospital and Quincy Medical Center, the State Police, Plymouth County Sheriff's Department and private ambulances.

About 80 volunteer "actors" served as the victims, upwards of 20 were taken to the hospital where one victim "died."

The event unfolded like a scene from a movie. The press and spectators were allowed to watch from a cordoned-off area. Hingham Police spokesman Lt. Michael Peraino provided a play-by-play from the time the 9-1-1 call went into dispatch at 8:37 a.m. and the first police cruiser arrived on the scene until permit and approval from the state Department of Community Housing & Development (DHCD) to insure that it meets state regulations and guidelines.

More information needed on Ripley Road project

"We're willing to consider a LIP, absolutely," said attorney for Will Charles, Robert Devin. But, he said he needed to know where the town was not willing to be flexible before they could agree to work together. In his experience, Devin said he's been placed in a situation where halfway through zoning board permit hearings the town rescinded their support on a project and he did not want to place himself or his client in that situation.

Devin requested the town draft up a "wish list" of official conditions for the project to see if there could be compromise on the project. Devin said the developer's application to Mass Housing is representative of their "wish list" for the project.

The Housing Partnership Committee met with Charles and Devin early last month. The seven-unit development proposed two affordably priced one-bedroom condos and five market rate two-bedroom units.

"In general, we felt there wasn't enough information to make a recommendation. (The presentation) raised more questions than answers," said Clark Brewer, co-chairman of the Housing Partnership Committee.

The Housing Partnership identified six areas where they had questions or concerns with the development. Several letters from neighbors have been received by the Selectmen's office speaking out against the project and about a dozen were on hand to comment.

Primary in the Partnership's concerns was the economic feasibility of the project, both in the unit mix and the construction budget.

Primary in the Partnership's concerns was the economic feasibility of the project, both in the unit mix and the construction budget. Brewer said the listed prices ($180,000 for the one-bedroom affordable units and $415,000 for the market-rate units) seemed high and did not include the condo fees. He said both the Partnership and Mass Housing would like to see at least one affordable unit be a two-bedroom.

The Partnership felt several elements of the construction budget were not realistic; Brewer also said the developer lacked contractor experience for a substantial development such as this.

Brewer said the Partnership shared the concerns about parking with the neighbors. The plan proposed a 14-space parking lot on 6/10th of an acre parcel.

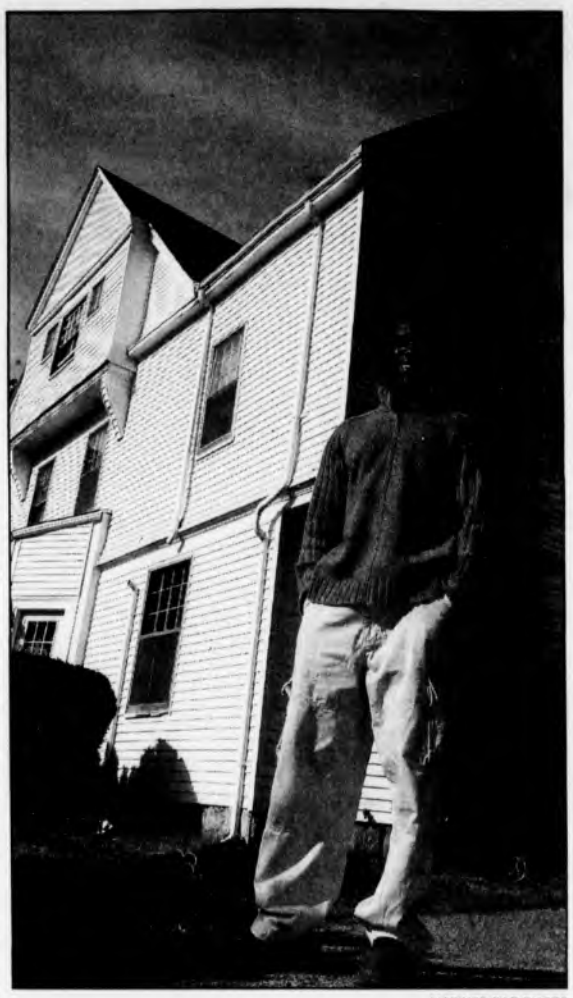
However, Brewer did not share the neighbor's concerns about the density of the project.

"It is certainly denser than what is typical, but that is the price you pay to get 20 percent affordable housing. Six or seven units does not seems unreasonable given the size of the home," said Brewer.

The current 2-1/2-story, 2,200-square-foot building has 13 bedrooms and seven bathrooms. It is operating on a septic system, although its application to Mass Housing indicated a connection to town sewer.

Marie Pratt of 83 Sohier St. said she used to work at 25 Ripley Road when it was a nursing home and during that time there were serious problems with the septic tank.

"The Board of Heath ordered (the owner) to have the septic tank pumped every month because (the next door neighbor) was getting sewage in their backyard," said Pratt.



Several neighbors cited ongoing noise, parking and quality of life problems generated from a nearby four-unit complex at 150 South Main Street.

"I can attest to the fact (a multi-family development) is an incredible detriment to the quality of life of the neighborhood. This proposal is completely out of scale with the neighborhood and incredibly high priced. This project needs to be vetted out a lot more than it is right now," said Chris McGowan of 164 South Main St.

At least one Selectman expressed serious concerns with giving town support to the project.

"Moving forward with something not supported by the neighborhood, that will have negative impact and is highly controversial I don't think is not a wise course of action," said Selectman Karen Quigley.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he would draft a letter to send to Mass Housing incorporating the concerns raised by the Housing Partnership and neighbors. All correspondence on the project, including the letters from neighbors, will be sent in a packet to Mass Housing. The Board of Selectmen will re-visit the issue at their Monday meeting.

Stormwater Committee ready to recharge

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I see them being very productive and making sure things don't fall through the cracks."
— Selectman Karen Quigley

With the major hurdle of establishing a stormwater management bylaw behind them, the Stormwater Committee is looking for new efforts to focus on.

It's been nearly two years since the selectmen-appointed committee got off the ground, but with flooding and other stormwater-related issues percolating in town both parties agreed their work is far from done. However, what form the committee would take and what specific items they would be charged with needs to be determined.

Members of the Stormwater Committee would like to continue serving in the advisory role and be a place where residents can come to air their water-related concerns. The committee has been successful in seeking out and receiving grants to install best management practices in flood prone areas. They also wanted to remain active in public education and outreach about the impacts that polluted stormwater runoff can have on water quality.

"I don't see us doing anything on our own," said Stormwater Committee member Sarah Charron, who cited the Stormwater Committee's partnership with the Conservation Commission to get a grant and Community Preservation funds to install raingardens in the James Brook watershed. "We were the seed and the idea."

The Stormwater Committee was established as an advisory committee to the Board of Selectmen on issues relating to stormwater. For the last year, much of their efforts have been consumed by drafting the stormwater management bylaw. On its second attempt on the floor of Town Meeting the stormwater bylaw passed muster with voters at the most recent Town Meeting.

Originally, the committee incorporated a representative from several town boards that are directly or indirectly involved with stormwater — the Water Commission, Planning Board, Board of Health, Conservation Commission — as well as two citizen representatives.

However, Charron said she didn't feel there was a need to burden current board members with another responsibility.

"What we need is interested, dedicated people that will come to meetings," said Charron.

Several ideas were floated as to the future composition for the Stormwater Committee. Selectmen Fred Koed suggested an approach similar to the Advisory Committee, with seven to nine members with diverse interests and backgrounds.

"(The Stormwater Committee) is the appropriate board to get more of a pulse of where the problems are," said Koed. While the Selectmen have many issues on their plate, the Stormwater Committee is able to "drill down" to get to the root of the stormwater problems and possibly recommend solutions to the Selectmen. A suggestion was made to include residents from different neighborhoods suffering from severe stormwater issues.

Selectman Karen Quigley agreed, "I'm in favor of the Stormwater Committee being the advisory board to do all the basic work, gather the information, working with the engineer and stormwater agent then come to us, the executive department."

Quigley saw value in the committee with their knowledge and ability to focus on one issue, "I see them being very productive and making sure things don't fall through the cracks."

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer would like to see as much political element taken out of the issue as possible, rather rely on quantitative expert analysis to evaluate stormwater issues. Dormitzer also felt the committee going forward should have very specific duties that don't overlap with other town boards.

Dormitzer cautioned the Stormwater Committee to not get involved with items, like hiring the stormwater agent, that now fall directly under the Conservation Commission according to the new stormwater management bylaw.

The Selectmen did not take a vote on a new composition for the Stormwater Committee and requested the Stormwater Committee keep doing what they were formerly charged to do until the Board of Selectmen vote on a new charge.

Cohasset safe from summer water ban

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Our interest is to sell water to other towns."
— Nathaniel Palmer, Water Commission

Last summer, unlike other towns on the South Shore, Cohasset water users were fortunate enough to escape a months-long water ban, but will this summer be a repeat?

According to Water Commissioner Nathaniel Palmer, all indications are it will.

"We don't foresee a ban," he said in a phone interview. But, he explains multiple variables could come into play that the water department can't currently predict. While he said there shouldn't be a problem with the amount of water in Lily Pond, a prolonged period without rain could lead to a pre-emptive measure taken at the state level.

Cohasset's water wealth has made it the envy of neighboring towns that had to impose strict water bans last year. Even North Cohasset, which is serviced by Aquarion Water, was forced to conserve its water. While their fellow town residents were allowed to keep their lawns green, North Cohasset was banned from outside watering.

Given the plight of neighboring towns in regard to water, Palmer said they have had preliminary discussion with both Scituate and Hingham (which is provided water service by Aquarion Water). Yet to date, Palmer said there have been no specific negotiations with either town.

"Our interest is to sell water to other towns," said Palmer.

The statement follows recent efforts by the Water Commission to the town and the state to sell water to other water companies and municipalities. A bill allowing the Commission to sell water, which got its start at the 2007 Annual Town Meeting, passed through the State House and Senate in February. Under the legislation, Cohasset is allowed to sell up to 50 percent of its safe yield, or about 2 million gallons of water a day, either by entering into long-term contracts up to 20 years or by emergency circumstance.

Before the bill passed, the legislation enabled the Commission to only sell water to private parties or private homes, not other municipalities or other water companies. Cohasset took advantage of this legislation by negotiating a 20-year contract to provide water to the Linden Ponds development in South Hingham.

At full build-out the Commission will provide approximately 306,000 gallons per day to the complex. During the last calendar year, the water department took in $200,000 in revenue under the Linden Ponds contract. When the senior housing complex is fully built out the deal will bring $600,000 in revenue annually.

The Water Commission will be limited by the provision that the aggregate of the contracts may not exceed half of the daily safe yield. In addition, contracts will not take effect without Town Meeting approval.

The town consumes approximately 800,000 gallons per day and projections indicate that number will not go significantly higher, the Water Commission has said.

As far as North Cohasset is concerned, there are complex issues involved with incorporating those 285 homes serviced by Aquarion Water. Palmer, along with a North Cohasset resident and Selectman, are exploring a number of different ways to help North Cohasset in the event of a summer water ban. Nothing specific has been determined thus far, he said, but they are hoping to have some sort of solution in place if a water ban is instated this summer.

"(With our efforts) we'd like the outcome to be North Cohasset would not be put in a restrictive water ban while the rest of Cohasset is not," said Palmer.

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

AH, SPRING!

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone doing this week? The weather has been a bit up and down lately but the warmer stuff is coming soon. It is so nice to walk around town now and see all the flowers and trees in bloom. The downside of course are the springtime allergies that come along with it all but we certainly cannot complain I guess (all right, every now and then we can, hee, hee.) At any rate, take the time to enjoy this spring and stop to embrace those small moments that happen each day.

SAILING CLUB

Location, location, location is the mantra of the real estate experts and one of the best features of Cohasset is our location right on The Ocean. It's in our backyard (or front, depending on how you're standing). And the Cohasset Sailing Club can give you the access you've dreamed of. Not all of us can afford a sailing yacht, but if you join the Cohasset Sailing Club you have nine Capri 14s, two Lasers and four Club 420s for training, racing or leisurely offshore sailing. You also have skilled instructors and a summer home getaway overlooking one of the most picturesque harbors in New England . The kids have the best place to learn and hang out all summer long, and let's not forget the pleasure boating, racing and lessons for kids AND adults. The Wednesday Night adult races are very fun! All of this for just a few clams. It's arguably the best deal in town. Registration for summer courses for Juniors and Adults is a bit earlier than usual this year (as is everything it seems.). Get over to the Sailing Club on Saturday, May 3rd from 9-2 and Sunday, May 4th from 12-2 for registration. (NO mail-in applications accepted.) The big blue water can be your oyster.

Once again, the Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association is having its annual Little League Parade.

The 2007 championship major league baseball and softball teams will be proudly riding fire trucks to celebrate last year's victories. Opening day ceremonies will follow at Barnes Field.

Hope to see you!

and costumes complement each characters distinct personality

"They've created a fantasy world, nothing is real," says "The Ever After" director Stephanie Noble.

The play is a show within a show; the plot unfolds on "Totally Live with Monty," a talk show complete with outspoken audience members and one-of-a-kind guests. Like a real talk show, advertisements are seamlessly weaved into the play for whimsical products like "prince wake me up"— a potion that really would have helped out Snow White.

The play has it all — hilarious banter, a dramatic fight and its own version of a happily ever after ending.

The costumes and personalities are all over the top and Noble says it's all the students doing.

"The students are very invested in what they do and are very productive. They really run with it," says Noble, a sixth-grade teacher.

Noble and assistant director Barbara Baumgarten read dozens of plays before deciding "The Ever After" was the right choice.

"The play needs to be age appropriate, funny and something we know the kids will enjoy doing," says Noble. "The Ever After" was all those elements. The play also needs to have a run time of under 30 minutes.

The students have been working on the play for the better portion of two months.

"I like working with middle schoolers, they are very enthusiastic. A lot of what they do is improvisational," says Noble. "They are very invest in what they do and are very productive."

The Middle School festival competition is about performing to the group's personal best. Each group is awarded a gold, silver or bronze rating. This is the third year the middle school has participated in the drama festival. In 2006, their efforts earned the group a gold rating and last year, they garnered a bronze medal.

The students will perform at the Mansfield Middle School along with six other schools.

The Cohasset Middle High School does not have a drama program curriculum so the one-act plays give kids the opportunity to participate in something they may be interested in.

This year, Noble decided to expand the after-school program to a fall and spring activities. In the fall, the students put on a big cast one-act play. "it gave everyone the opportunity to participate in drama."

For the festival competition, she chose the best of the best. Next year, she hopes to add a winter program to focus on monologues.

As the host of "Totally Live with Monty," Trevor Schramn interacts with the ugly stepsisters from Cinderella played by Isabelle Dunne and Olivia Franklin. The Middle School group will perform their one-act play "The Ever After" in the Massachusetts High School Drama Guild Festival this Saturday.

Reflections in Exile

African artists display at Art Center

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Across the world, art speaks a universal language.

Currently, at the South Shore Art Center, five artists representing four African countries speak to the violence, unrest and daily challenges in their home countries. "Reflections in Exile: Five Contemporary African Artist Respond to Social Injustice" is on display in the Bancroft Gallery until Sunday, May 11.

The South Shore Art Center, along with the help of donors, has enabled several inner-city schools to come to Cohasset to view the exhibit.

The mixed-media show has painting, installation art, graphic design and video; the exhibit is set up sparsely so each piece of art has the opportunity to speak.

A seemingly welcoming twin bed, covered in colorful flower petals, upon closer look reveals symbols of violence — a gun and bullets are embroidered on the pillowcases and along with the flowers are pistols. "Forced Removal" by Ilona Anderson, who moved to the US from South Africa in 1988, shows how violence pervades everyday life.

A three-screen (triptych) video presentation, "Ruptures" created by Salem Mekuria explores the complex history and culture of Ethiopia. Zimbabwe-born Chaz Maviyane-Davies's overtly political posters challenge the viewer to make informed decisions so one does not become a victim.

Ezra Wube's "Exodus" utilizes warm oranges and reds to convey a message displacement; blank faces seem to move throughout the canvas.

The wall description states the painting is "about immigration and creating a community after being displaces,while internally remaining in one's homeland."

Almost an entire wall of the exhibit is devoted to Khalid Kodi's installation, "Violence Inscribed." Far from clean clothes hang covered in what appears to blood and dirt, people's faces linger behind the dirt. Khalid piece comments on the ravages of war, abuse of power, disruption of family life and Participants and spectators take part in last May's dedication of the Healing Field.

Support 'Healing Field' on Memorial Day

The effort should result in hundreds of American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets. The island faces Veterans Memorial Park where the annual Memorial Day observances are held.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces. (Those who purchase flags will be able to pick them up after 10 days).

Tom Wigmore, who is coordinating the flag installation, says he has only 70 flags left.

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post and at both branches of Pilgrim Bank. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

degradation of human in his native Sudan.

"In today's changing world, we all need to experience a culture other than our own. The current African art exhibit, 'Reflections in Exile' provided an opportunity to engage in another continent, to become aware of the motivation and courage need to overcome suffering," says Cohasset resident Shirley Marten.

Through the gift of funding, she and her husband, Jim, made the exhibit accessible to inner-city middle schoolers. A group from Roxbury Prep Charter School, grades six through eight, came down to Cohasset this week to view the exhibit. Groups from the Epiphany School in Dorchester, the Boston Arts Academy and the Codman Academy Charter School in Dorchester have or will make the trek to the Arts Center.

"Through creative artists work, the onlooker becomes a more compassionate, empathetic human being. My personal involvement was to encourage field trips for middle school students from the inner-city to learn from these powerful images of cultural customs and histories that are forever evolving," said Marten.

Heather Collins, the Art Center's director of community programs, said without the Marten's underwriting the cost of the bus trip, the schools would never have been able to make the trip.

Many of the inner-city schools place African issues and culture more prominently in their curriculum and Collins has been surprised at how much knowledge the students have of Africa when they arrive.

"It's made our discussions very interesting," said Collins. While visiting the exhibit, the students also work on a hands-on art project: printmaking using "adinkra" symbols from Ghana.

While the students come with an understanding of some of the issues facing African countries, Collins says the art allows them to delve into the issues in a more personal way through the artist's work.

If nothing else, the exhibit raises the students' and any visitors' awareness of the issues facing Africa—the AIDS epidemic, poverty, displacement, political unrest and violence.

"There are so many issues (in Africa) we are so oblivious to in this country," said Collins.

"Reflections in Exile" will be at the South Shore Arts Center until Sunday, May 11, then it will be on display at The Museum of the National Center of Afro-American Artists in Roxbury from June 1 until July 27. Admission is free, but donations always welcome.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Being prepared

Over the long years and controversy about restoration of the Greenbush Line of the Old Colony Railroad – the issue at the forefront of both the proponents and critics was safety.

No one on either side of the Greenbush debate wants to see an accident at a grade crossing. However, the sad fact is that accidents do happen.

Our fire and police departments know this all too well. They deal with unexpected occurrences every single day. Their day may include medical emergencies, car accident or house fire, among others.

This past Sunday, the Hingham Fire Department in coordination with police and other fire departments – including Cohasset's — staged a true "nightmare scenario:" a speeding car crashed into the rear of a school bus stopped at a crossing and pushed the bus into the side of a commuter train. The mock accident resulted in a mass casualty incident at the Water Street crossing just a few hundred yards from the Fruit Center.

The accident, while not impossible, is improbable because, for one thing, the buses wait at stop lines well before the tracks.

However, the staged event provided valuable training. All participating agencies are reviewing how the response to the accident was handled and how they can improve.

From our perspective, the morning unfolded like a scene from a movie — with local "actors" playing the role of the victims and actual, public safety personnel playing themselves.

The press and a handful of spectators observed the accident and response develop from behind a cordoned-off area. Hingham police spokesman, Lt. Michael Peraino, provided us the play-by-play from the time the 9-1-1 call came over his radio to the press conference following the event.

We all owe a debt of gratitude to our area police and fire departments, local hospitals, private ambulance services, the sheriff's department, Salvation Army, and the MBTA for all working together on this very important drill.

The train is here and it is a fact of life. Let's hope that all of us use caution when approaching and stopping at grade crossings. After all, our welfare starts with us.

However, it is comforting to know that our public safety officials are prepared to provide help should the unthinkable occur.

On a related issue, we applaud Cohasset police for their "zero-tolerance" policy regarding trespassing along the right-of-way. Chief James Hussey explains that police cannot prevent trespassing because entry to the tracks can be gained at the various grade crossings.

However, police can take action when trespassing occurs by sending a strong message.

This past week for the second time in as many months, police arrested a man for trespassing along the tracks.

"We have tried to make it clear from the beginning that it is very important for people's safety to stay away from the tracks," Chief Hussey says. "We will take criminal action against anyone who is trespassing along the railway."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Re: Aaron Reservoir Fence

Editor's note: Betty K.H. Waegemann provided the following letters to the Mariner for publication.

Dear Ms. Waegemann:

The Department has recently inspected our fence on the perimeter of the Aaron River Reservoir. We discovered that many areas are in disrepair, some abutters have installed gates to allow illegal access to the water and other sections have been removed.

We plan to repair the entire length of the fence (approximately 1 mile) this spring. The repairs will include removing all gates and replacing damaged and missing sections.

Should you feel you have legal access to this reservoir please contact our office at 781-383-0057 to discuss alternate plans.

Sincerely,
Cohasset Water Department
Steve May
Construction Manager

Dear Messrs. McNabb, Palmer and Pratt:

In response to your letter dated April 4, 2008, I am perplexed. For the past 28 years I have lived at the address below and have been impacted by several odd policies by the Town of Cohasset and the Water Department. This most recent notice to repair an unnecessary existing fence is concerning and smacks of wasteful policies.

It is my understanding that the water from the Aaron River Reservoir runs in the Aaron River into the watershed known as Lily Pond. Your treatment facility, at the above address, is located on Lily Pond and the water that the Cohasset residents and other communities use is treated at that facility. There is no fence around any part of Lily Pond or in front of the properties around Lily Pond (for that matter, most of the Aaron River Reservoir on the Wompatuck State Park side has no fence either). Therefore, I question the rationale of repairing/replacing the existing "approximately 1 mile" fence. It does not seem to demonstrate any compelling purpose, while it is the only such fence in my informal survey of other similarly used bodies of water in the surrounding communities. In addition, some residents clean-up brush, ivy, and other debris on both sides of the fence to ensure that there are no fires or other dangerous conditions for both humans and wildlife. This costly new fence will cause larger long-term problems for the community and is an obvious waste of monetary resources assuredly to be passed onto the Town, taxpayers, and/or Water Department customers. As you have already allowed public access at 21 Aaron River Road, I would suggest you take the existing fence down. It is an eye sore and merely window-dressing. Not having a fence or simply leaving it in its disrepair would offer better access for cleaning and maintenance is a sound policy as a matter of public health and safety, and obviously a more prudent manner with which to conserve monetary and natural resources.

Therefore, I would like to invoke my legal access to the abutting land. I request more information as to what legal authority requires the Aaron River Reservoir to be fenced in, while beginning the discussion as to why the fence needs to be repaired or even exist at all. I trust we can work together on this matter. Thank you for your time and attention.

Respectfully,
Betty K.H. Waegemann

Relay For Life planned for June 13-14

Relay for Life is the signature fundraiser of the American Cancer Society. Participants raise money by personally collecting donations and organizing group fundraisers prior to or at the event. The money goes towards cancer research, patient services, advocacy and education. It also provides hope to those how have cancer and their family and friends that a cure is available, it provides hope that cancer can be detected in its early stages and it provides hope that cancer is eradicated in our life time. The Hingham/Hull/Cohasset and Scituate Relay will be held on June 13th and 14th organizations clubs, family, friends and co-workers form teams of at least 8-15people and gather at Cohasset High School on the 13th.

Members of the team take turns walking around the track for the duration of the event. An important part of Relay is honoring and remembering those people in our lives who have faced cancer. Each Relay invites cancer survivors in the community to walk a special Survivors Lap. Another focal point of each Relay is the Luminaria Ceremony, held after dark, where candles are sponsored and lit in honor and memory of our loved ones who have battled this disease. Part of what makes Relay for Life special is its atmosphere — the sense of community, camaraderie and hope that permeates the event from start to finish. Hope has become the catchword of Relay, because hope is what it's all about; the hope that one day we will be free from the fear of this terrible disease, that our children will grow up in a world where cancer is no longer fatal. Relay is a time to do something about a danger that seems so much bigger than us, and to know that we are actually making a difference. It is a time to reflect, to remember those who have been lost and those who can still be saved. And it is also a lot of fun to be there with friends and take part in the activities.

An important part of Relay is honoring and remembering those people in our lives who have faced cancer.

For information on how you can start a team contact Harry St.Onge at 781-383-9465 orst.onge@comcast.net.

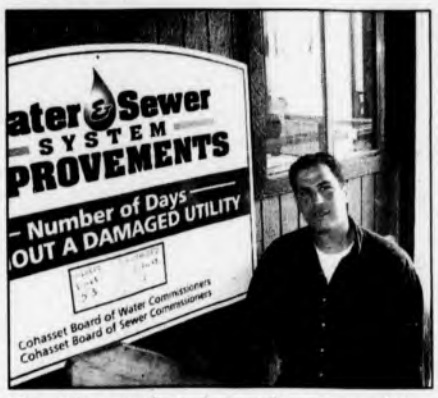
Nichols Rd. gas line to be replaced

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project – In last week's article we presented a new short-term schedule for the project, but also talked quite a bit about the things that can go wrong and cause the schedule to change. In fact, it almost seems like publishing a schedule is an open invitation for schedule-changing events to happen. And, they have.



This is a good long-term action, but it means that we may have to wait until Keyspan is finished before L M Holdings, LLC. (LMH) can do its work.

Nichols Road gas line — In the week since we received the new schedule major things have occurred which will definitely have an impact on the schedule. For example, when we started digging for sewers on Nichols Road we found the old gas line was laid smack dab on top of the water line. This should have never been the case, but it was. There should always be a horizontal separation between two buried utilities so that each can be dug up without affecting the other.

In addition, there have been numerous gas leaks in this area due in most part to very old steel gas pipe. Now, the gas company, Keyspan (soon to be National Grid), has decided that they would replace the gas line and put it in its proper position on Nichols Road while we have the road opened. This is a good long-term action, but it means that we may have to wait until Keyspan is finished before L M Holdings, LLC. (LMH) can do its work. So the schedule in this area will be impacted.

The new gas line is currently being installed by a subcontractor to Keyspan. Short lengths of the yellow plastic pipe are joined into longer segments and then inserted into the trench and connected to the pipe already laid. The photo shows a long segment waiting to be put into the trench on Nichols Road.

Paving stuff – The Town is in the process of modifying the contract with LMH to change the paving responsibility that should result in savings for the project. The contract that was originally executed with LMH did not include final paving. But it was anticipated to be added to the contract at previously quoted costs. However, there is another way to purchase paving-related work using a volume purchasing costs obtained through a Consortium of South Shore Towns. We have found this pricing to be absolutely the best available since it is based on the combined paving needs of about 12 towns who are members of the Consortium. (We did the recent Forest Avenue sidewalk and street work using these Consortium prices and were very pleased with the savings. Without these prices we cold not have afforded the Forest Ave. project.) The Little Harbor project is in the process of adding a change order to the LMH contract that will allow us to use these lower paving prices.

Faces of the Little Harbor Project — One of the people you might see working around the Little Harbor Project is Paul Cappelletti. Paul is the overall Project Manager for the contractor, L M Holdings, LLC. In this capacity, Paul works closely with Carl Bucknell the Project Superintendent who has direct responsibility for the field construction crews.

Paul's background includes a bachelor's degree in Civil Engineering from Wentworth and an MBA from Boston College. He has been with LMH since its inception in 2005. Paul and his wife and two young boys currently reside on the South Shore in Canton. According to Paul, the experience he gained over the years starting in construction as a field engineer fresh out of school and working himself up the management ladder has given him a deep appreciation for the construction business and its challenges. With construction every day and every job is a new challenge. Paul and his crews must always be prepared for the unknown. Despite preconstruction diligence, construction crews never know for certain what conditions they will encounter under the ground.

According to Paul, good old Cohasset ledge has been one of the most challenging aspects of this project. Not so much from the standpoint of how to remove the ledge, that's pretty well known in his business. But, exactly where the ledge is and when will they encounter it are the questions. This unknown requires LMH to maintain a fine balance between the small equipment needed to dig on our narrow hilly roads and the large equipment needed to pound through the ledge. The logistics of moving this equipment around to maintain the pace of construction is quite difficult.

Paul's goal for this project is to overcome the obstacles and build a quality set of infrastructure for the Town of Cohasset.

No originals in Hollywood

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The Egyptologists among us will be happy to learn that the Mummy will be back on the screen this summer, proving once again that creativity is as dead as King Tut in LaLa Land.

Doesn't anyone in Hollywood have an original idea anymore?

The movie industry has a long record of turning out popular flicks, then beating them to death with remakes, sequels, prequels and "quels" that have yet to be discovered.

Does anyone doubt that Francis Ford Coppola should have stopped with Godfather II?

The Mummy first hit the screen in 1932 starring Boris Karloff as the Mummy and a cast of characters that, years later, were recalled only by their immediate relatives.

Surely, you remember Zita Johann, the actress who played the reincarnation of Princess Ananka, the object of the Mummy's affections if he could ever get those damned bandages off.

Tom Tyler, the old cowboy star, played the Mummy in "The Mummy's Hand" in 1940 and gave the old guy a name for the first time — "Kharis."

Lon Chaney Jr., who ranked second only to Karloff in horror roles at the time, did it three times in "The Mummy's Curse," "The Mummy's Ghost" and "The Mummy's Tomb" in 1942 and 1944.

The Brits made the flick in 1959 with Christopher Lee and again in 1967 as "The Mummy's Shroud," which proved to be such a bomb that the poor guy was left pretty much alone until the current series of remakes started.

The 2008 contribution, "The Mummy: Tomb of the Dragon Emperor," is due out on Aug. 1, starring Brendan Fraser, not as the Mummy but as the Indiana Jones-like character who disturbs the Mummy and tees him off.

The Brendan Fraser revivals began with The Mummy in 1999 and continued in 2001 with "The Mummy Returns," which one critic described as a "Big Dumb Sequel to an original Big Dumb Hit."

But it must have had something — do I hear the ka-ching of busy cash registers — because here we go again.

Brendan Fraser will revisit "The Voyage to the Center of the Earth", due out July 11, this time in 3D. The old one, made in 1959, starred James Mason and Pat Boone as the scientist and his nephew who discover a lost world inside the earth.

Of course, I haven't seen any of the summer's remakes yet. I'm rarely invited to prescreenings anymore. But I have rarely seen a remake that lives up to the reputation set by he original.

Who best plays the tough sergeant whose patrol is beset by thirst and Nazis in the desert in the film "Sahara" — Humphrey Bogart in 1943 or James Belushi in 1995?

"King Kong" has been made and remade twice but it's the 1933 original that lives on while Jeff Bridges, Jessica Lange and Charles Grodin should be embarrassed by their 1976 version and Naomi Watts by the 2005.

Until they hear the ka-ching of the cash registers, that is.

HEALTH NOTES

Fitness starts with the brain

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Early in April Health Notes featured an article on brain plasticity, which told of advances in a new field of neuroscience. Since that time, there have been some developments of particular interest to Cohasset residents. Further inquiry about the field has revealed that several business startups have launched services to improve everything from reading skills to improved driving for elders. In fact, MIT, the spawning place for innovation has expanded their Department of Neural Science. It seems that Cognitive Science has taken hold as a new endeavor for the medical profession. As usual, it's difficult to separate the wheat from the advertising chaff.

Based largely on personal experience, I find that two companies seem to have taken the lead: Posit Science and Lumosity. Both companies have good credentials and both have modules on the market. Posit Science however has taken the course of conducting scientifically valid, statistically verifiable corroboration that the programs they created have improved brain function.

In order to make the program relevant to an individual each of six different exercise modules is presented with an increasing order of difficulty. The program keeps track of correct answers and if an exercise gets too difficult it goes back to a simpler version, again gradually increasing in difficulty. Some exercises train a person on the ability to recognize similar sounds repeated at increasingly shorter intervals, some exercise your ability to remember a succession of events and some exercise the ability to discriminate sounds.

Not only has my memory improved, but my ability to organize and understand things like speech in crowded rooms has gotten better.

Some instruct you to take a succession of actions by moving figures on a computer display. Each of the modules is intended to exercise a different part of the brain.

I still have four sessions left in the first program. Not only has my memory improved, but my ability to organize and understand things like speech in crowded rooms has gotten better. The brain plasticity concept covers a person's adjustment of how to recognize other people's speech patterns and our ability to understand what they are saying.

One of the features of the program is an invitation to keep a reflective journal, which records ones progress while taking the exercises, which have a duration of about an hour and a half. I have tried to maintain a regimen in which the program is used at least every other day, but generally daily. As indicated before, the program is sometimes challenging, sometimes difficult and sometimes boring. It requires some effort to decide to continue, but the good part is that those areas in which I feel I have some mental deficits have improved. Review of the reflective journal maintained while working on the program indicates that in addition to improving memory, one gains confidence in the ability to remember and a certain optimism that things will continue to improve. Moreover, improvements come in different forms. In a recreational exercise such as golf, bowling or tennis, the platitudes such as "keep your eye on the ball" or "rotate your body" are brought into cognizance at the time they are needed. At least my exercise partners and instructors are noticing. Name recall, although still slow, has also improved.

Health Notes has received many comments indicating that improving memory is important. Accordingly, I have initiated some measures designed to deploy some of the Posit Science programs at places where they can be evaluated by anyone wishing to try them. Several folks have asked about the availability of demonstration discs, and Posit Science has indicated that they are sending on a supply which, when they arrive, will be available at the Board of Health, the Library and at Elder Affairs in the Community center. These sites will also have information about when the programs will be installed at their various sites and the conditions under which they may be used. Also these sites will have information and literature as to how individual copies of the programs may be obtained.

Once one has finished the program it's reasonable to ask what's next. Well, I've talked to a lady who took the program a second time and it's certainly a possibility, but there are other programs out there. PositScience has another which exercises visual acuity but more of this at another time.

about two hours later, when Duff and other fire department officials conducted a short press conference and took questions.

Thirty-six fire and emergency apparatus were staged at the Bathing Beach. Each mutual aid call was timed to mimic the amount of time it would really take to get from Cohasset to downtown Hingham, for example.

The accident depicted one of the worst nightmare scenarios – a speeding car slams into the rear of a school bus stopped at the grade crossing, pushing the bus into the side of a commuter train.

Within minutes the cruiser that was patrolling the downtown area arrived with Hingham officers Tom Ford and Lisa McCracken. McCracken grabbed a medical bag and ran to the school bus. Ford ran to the car and confirmed that the two occupants were alive.

Then one after another — like a well choreographed play — fire apparatus, police cars and ambulances raced to the scene. Hingham Sgt. Sean Cavanagh, who was the senior officer at the accident, took over early command. Later, Chief Duff was able to observe the entire response from the Plymouth County Sheriff's Department Command Post vehicle that is equipped with a camera and the latest technology.

Lt. Peraino explained that in a real accident, likely hundreds of spectators would "collapse" onto the scene. If it were a weekday then the Station Street parking lot would have been full of cars.

On Sunday, the nearly empty parking lot provided a triage area where paramedics identified victims and provided medical treatment before the ambulances picked them up.

Crash reconstruction and investigation started immediately.

Even the Salvation Army arrived to provide coffee and refreshments for the tired emergency workers.

Hingham Senior Emergency Medical Services Coordinator James Sheard of the Hingham Fire Department said the drill provided important lessons in three key areas: communication, asset management and accountability.

Sheard said the "mock" injuries ranged from cardiac problems to anxiety-induced asthma. The drill was not designed to have someone die at the scene. However, there was a mock fatality later at the hospital.

Cohasset's Fire Chief Robert Silva walks down the steps from the commuter train during Sunday's mock accident in Hingham. Fire departments from six area towns responded to the "mass casualty incident."

Hingham resident Kevin Jenkins, right, was one of the "victims" in the school bus.

Weymouth's Fire Lt. Michael Scully heads across the Station Street parking lot with one of the victims.

Victims are evaluated and placed in the triage area before they were taken to South Shore Hospital or Quincy Medical Center.

Hingham Officer Thomas Ford, who was first on the scene along with his partner Officer Lisa McCracken, runs to the aid of the victims trapped in a rolled over car. McCracken ran to the school bus.

Winner in Cohasset Logo Contest named

Last month, the Economic Development Committee launched, in the Mariner, a competition open to all residents to create a graphic identity/image for Cohasset, with the objective of better marketing the town.

Several designs were submitted, created by both professionals and amateurs, grownups and young talents. A selection panel, composed of four art graphic experts and one EDC member was formed to designate the best concept.

And, the result is Joyce Whitman is the winner. Whitman is a Cohasset resident. She and her husband, Keith Conforti, operate a creative design business in town by the name of Twist.

Her concept, which will be featured at the upcoming South Shore Art Festival, was chosen because it best represented the committee's objective of capturing the seaside character and artistic tradition, both attributes outlined in the Economic Development Committee Mission statement approved in February by the Board of Selectmen. The panel felt that Whitman's design will provide the best foundation for promoting these benefits locally as well as outside the community.

There are three elements that made this mark distinctive and will give the committee a flexible but consistent framework to capture the many aspects of Cohasset. The three elements are:

- The "Cohasset signature."
- Reference to Cohasset's rocky coast in the foreground with Cohasset images in the background.
- Combining the "framed images" of Cohasset's natural and architectural character.

The committee thanks and expresses its consideration and admiration to all other contestants who put to work time, artistic imagination and talent to produce designs. Those who should be recognized are: Owen Bleicken, Anthony W. Lanier, Ed Fox, Jeannie de Murias, Robert C. Ernst Sr., and one anonymous artist.

The selection panel included:

- William J. Hannon, professor emeritus of Massachusetts College of Art and Design. His work has been featured in many design journals and is a recipient of numerous awards. He lectured at Harvard, the London Business School, the Design Museum in London, L'Atelier in Paris and Toyama Design Center in Japan. He is the founder of the Design Management Institute and is currently an adjunct professor at Sawyer School of Management at Suffolk University where he teaches a course in Innovation and Design Management in the executive MBA program. He is a Life Member of the Industrial Designers Society of America and a Fellow of Britain's Royal Society of Arts.
- Michael Westcott has been in brand marketing and design for more than 20. He has founded and managed several marketing and creative firms and has written and spoken extensively on brand marketing and creativity. His work has been featured in Brandweek, Event Marketer, Expo, Graphis, Print and Communication Arts and Innovation magazines, as well as numerous books.
- Ron Goodwin operates Goodwin Graphics, a Cohasset company specializing in designing and creating marketing and wearable promotional products for small businesses. A former director of South Shore Arts Center, he is also a member and former director of the Chamber of Commerce, member and past president of the Rotary Club, Paul Harris Fellow, and a director of Pilgrim Bank.
- Diane Kennedy is currently assistant director and Arts Festival coordinator of South Shore Art Center. She has worked in program development and marketing for both performing and visual arts organizations, including having served an arts administration fellowship with the National Endowment for the Arts. She is also serving on the Cohasset Day Committee, a sub-committee of the EDC.
- Alain Pinel from the EDC is part-owner of Imminence, the main provider of MLS, technology and marketing services to real estate brokers in Europe. Prior, he was SVP for Coldwell Banker in California and led his San Francisco, Peninsula and Silicon Valley region to a record $13 billion in sales. He also is the founder of Alain Pinel Realtors.

The selection panel thought Joyce Whitman's design best represented the committee's objective of capturing the seaside character and artistic tradition.

The panel felt that Whitman's design will provide the best foundation for promoting these benefits locally as well as outside the community.

About Joyce Whitman:

Joyce Whitman has 20 years of experience designing retail catalogs, point-of-purchase, collateral and corporate identity for high-profile New England businesses. Her agency experience began at Robinson Associates in Boston, where she served as Associate Art Director on campaigns for Scott Paper Company, BASF, Big Brother Association of Boston, and others. From there, she became Art Director at Boston Marketing working on accounts for Puma, Etonic, One Beacon Street, Reebok, Parker Brothers and other regional businesses.

Since 1996, Whitman and her husband, Keith Conforti, have been operating Twist Creative Group out of their home in Cohasset, and continue to serve many financial and corporate clients in their communications endeavors. As a two-person studio, their advantage is that they offer this service more intimately and directly, and at more competitive rates, than larger agencies. Their clients include Fidelity Investments, SBLI, and Koko Fitness, but they have also been known to volunteer their design services for local organizations, such as Our World Children's Global Discovery Center, South Shore Community Center, Joseph Osgood School and St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

Whitman says, "working from home affords us the benefit of spending more time with our two boys — Ryan, age 8 and Jason, age 6."

David Bigley of All the Best Natural Foods.

"With the increase of big box stores, malls and other options to shop out of town, it's important for merchants within the community to get together to figure out a way to present themselves as a viable shopping area," said Bigley.

He said often people don't realize they can get what they need or want right here in town, "in my case, people go to Whole Foods or Stop & Shop. I think they'll find the prices competitive and they'll get a lot more personal service when dealing with a local merchant…When people come in here they speak to the owner," he said.

Working collaboratively with other community organizations, like the Cohasset Triathlon and the Economic Development Committee, the Chamber hopes to help put Cohasset's best foot forward. Both the triathlon and the Road Race by the Sea bring hundreds of people into town. Evans said they Chamber plans to have an information booth at Sandy Beach the day of the Triathlon to keep participants in town after the event.

Inside the Chamber is a resource for businesses owners so each is not an island in and of themselves.

"We share ideas and give each other support," said Chamber Vice President Karen Kirkendall of Coastal Countryside. Coastal Countryside has been a part of the chamber since the real estate company's inception a decade ago.

With new endeavors on the horizon, the Chamber is looking to include all Cohasset businesses as members. Local businesses can become a member for a $100 annual membership fee.

"For less than $8.50 a month, you get a lot," said Evans. The chamber's website lists all chamber members and will spotlight a different business monthly. Eventually, Evans said they would like to make the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce website the go-to place for a calendar of town events and information on the town.

Lisa Hewitt of Sheehy and Hewitt Law Office and chamber treasurer would like to see Cohasset's tradition of commerce continue and sees the chamber as a way to ensure that.

"(Cohasset) has always been a place of commerce, it's never been a sleepy town with only commuters," said Hewitt. "(Cohasset) is a very remarkable place to live and we really want it to stay vibrant."

In addition to the Chamber of Commerce, the Selectmen-appointed Economic Development Committee is focused on bringing increased economic vitality to the town.

"The EDC believes one of its functions is to help promote business groups, like the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. One of our missions is to promote business interest in the town and the interests of the chamber and the EDC are aligned," said EDC Chairman Peter Brown.

The Chamber of Commerce hopes to work collaboratively with the Economic Development Committee in their efforts to put on a "Cohasset Day" in September.

Holding pattern for Cat Dam

The contentious neighborhood issue of Cat Dam will have to wait a little while longer before coming before the Board of Selectmen again. Currently, the issue of the tide gates' schedule is before the Conservation Commission.

At a previous meeting, the Selectmen has proposed addressing the governance issue of Cat Dam with interested neighbors this week, but determined Monday night they would wait until they knew where they stood with the Conservation Commission.

The neighbors surrounding inner Little Harbor, where Cat Dam is located have been before the Board of Selectmen on numerous occasions since last summer. There are differing opinions within the neighborhood on how much the gates should be allowed to open — some want increased flushing while others say there is enough.

Over the winter, a committee put together a proposed schedule for the opening and closing of the dam. The schedule was implemented before the Selectmen approved it. When any change is made to a body of water, the Conservation Commission is obliged to get involved.

An informal meeting was held with town officials and neighbors at a recent Conservation Commission meeting. The Commission determined the town would have to file a notice of intent and likely provide more information about the dam and its adjacent water bodies, said Town Manager Bill Griffin. The Conservation Commission was discussing the scope of information they will require at their meeting Thursday, after the Mariner went to press.

The Selectmen were all in agreement to wait until the process with the Conservation Commission moved further along before discussing the issue again.

"I'd rather wait to have the conversation until we know as much as we can," said Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer agreed, "we need some data in order to make a decision here."

The Board recommended the proposed new schedule pending Conservation Commission approval.

"We're in a holding pattern no matter what," said Griffin.

Two more 15-minute spaces in village

He stated he and others have found the parking spaces in front of Village Wine and Liquors are frequently occupied for extended periods of time by patrons of the adjacent Bia Bistro during the hours of 6 to 9p.m.

"(These hours) should normally be the busiest hours for a wine and liquor store," wrote Ford. "When potential customers of Village Wine cannot find a space near the store they are not likely to park a long distance away. Generally, a restaurant patron is more willing to make a short walk a part of their evening dining experience."

The Board of Selectmen was agreeable to the idea; Selectman Ralph Dormitzer even thought these 15-minute parking spaces had been installed following the village revitalization project. Installing the restrictive parking spaces was approved unanimously.

"There are other spaces including the town parking lot for those who will be in the area for an extended period."

— Police Chief James Hussey

Police Chief James Hussey said there would be no problems of enforcement with this change.

"We will make sure our officers are made aware of this change. After the signage is put in place we will commence ticketing violators as we do for other locations," said Hussey in an email. Tickets for violating the parking regulation are $25.

Hussey said the 15-minute parking spaces help local business that relies on people doing a quick shop. There are 15-minute spaces across the street in front of Tedeschi's.

"There are other spaces including the town parking lot for those who will be in the area for an extended period," said Hussey.

On a larger level, the Planning Board is working collaboratively with its village consultant, Angus Jennings of Concord Square Development, to establish guidelines for parking in the village. In a phone interview, Planning Board Chairman Al Moore said small steps like encouraging business owners to have their employees park in the town parking lot can make a difference.

The discussion is an extension of the Planning Board's extensive review of the village last year, which culminated in a significant village bylaw change at the fall Special Town Meeting. The board will be tackling the issue in a series of discussions over the next few months.

Little Harbor staging area

Following a discussion at the April 14 Selectmen's meeting on the Little Harbor sewer and water project staging area, Town Manager Bill Griffin requested Town Counsel's advisory opinion on the status of the issue.

At a Selectmen's meeting in March, there were questions as to whether the town had violated the state procurement laws (Chapter 30B) in its use of the private property on Jerusalem Road (owned by Leland and Lenora Jenkins) as the project's staging area. Under Chapter 30B, or the Uniform Procurement Act, procedures for local governments to use in contracting for supplies, services, and real property are outlined.

A protest was filed with the state Office of the Inspector General following the Zoning Board of Appeals denial of an appeal, which rendered the staging area allowable in the residential district. It was the Inspector General's opinion a Memorandum of Agreement, a document signed by the town, the contractor and the Jenkinses, put the town out of compliance with the procurement law because it changed a less formal "license agreement" into a lease agreement, which is subject to the procurement laws. The memorandum of agreement was created during the course of the Zoning Board hearings.

Griffin reported at the April 14 meeting the town had taken steps to bring itself into compliance with the procurement laws. The memorandum of agreement was terminated and the Jenkinses granted a temporary easement for the property to the town.

After these actions were taken Town Counsel conferred with the Inspector General's office, which, according to Town Counsel, stated a renewed protest had been received regarding the issue. Upon hearing the actions taken, the Inspector General agreed the procurement provisions were no longer required.

"The Office of Inspector General confirmed Town Counsel's analysis that the issue raised with respect to Chapter 30B had been resolved and that compliance with the procurement provisions of the statute was no longer required," states the opinion of Town Counsel, Rodney Hoffman of Deutsch Williams..

Big stretch ahead

Girls lacrosse team anxious to get out and play

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

There hasn't been much rhythm and flow to the Cohasset High girls lacrosse season so far. At 3-3 overall, 1-1 in the South Shore League, it has taken quite some time for the girls to string together any number of games.

Thursday's game against Pembroke (after Cohasset Mariner deadline) is their first since a Scituate loss before vacation. That is a long stretch between games.

"The season has been herky-jerky," said Cohasset head coach Chuck Jaffe. "We're anxious to get into it, game after game after game."

That may be coming very soon for the Skippers.

With a Saturday road game scheduled against powerhouse Hopkinton Saturday, the girls are scheduled to play four games over the next week.

"We will know a whole lot about ourselves very soon," Jaffe said.

Cohasset has 17 games on the schedule and making the tournament won' be easy. The young and inexperienced Skippers will have to win nine games or finish second in the SSL.

Jaffe hopes his team can mature over the coming weeks and stay with some of the more powerful teams on the schedule.

Cohasset 13-Hull 3

"It was a beautiful day to play our archrival," said Cohasset coach Stew Curran. "Their goalie played pretty well, our guys played just well enough."

Gordon Smith scored 3 goals and had 2 assists, while Charlie Czerkawski finished with 2 goals and 2 assists against the Pirates.

Cohasset improved to 7-2 overall, 3-0 in the South Shore League with the win.

Jack Murphy subbed for Nate Porter in net and had nine saves.

The Skippers were set to face Pembroke, after the Cohasset Mariner went to press, Thursday afternoon. Their next game is at Arlington High School, Saturday at 4 p.m. The Spyponders are one of the state's best teams. At 9-1 they are currently ranked 17 in the www.laxpower.com ratings (Cohasset is 12).

"We are making progress and working hard everyday," Curran said. "We will like to see who we are after these next two games against Pembroke and Arlintgon."

Cohasset 11 – Dover-Sherborn 9

Led by its All-American attackman Mark Flibotte, the Cohasset High boys lacrosse team got back on the winning track with a tense, hard-fought win on the road Thursday morning (April 24).

Both teams seemed to show some effects from vacation week with some poor passing and unforced turnovers throughout the game. Cohasset improved its record to 6-2 on the year with the DS win. Cohasset head coach Stew Curran thought it a big mid-season win, possibly important for the state tournament seeding in late May.

"Dover-Sherborn is a quality lacrosse program," he said. "For the last four years, the Raiders have been competing with us, Scituate, and others for the top spot in Division III. This was an important win for my guys coming after our disappointing effort in the Chowder Cup final."

Mike Grimm started the Skipper scoring with a left-handed laser after dodging from behind. After a Raider goal, Cohasset got caught in a substitution switch and Dover-Sherborn scored again in transition to take the lead.

Andrew Smith picked up a loose ground ball and made a nice clearing run the length of the field. Mark Flibotte found the back of the net after a nifty roll dodge to tie the score.

But the Raiders scored again on a fast break to close out the first quarter with the lead.

Sailors blow by Skippers

Team looks to improve during second half of season

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High School softball team has yet to hit its stride. The Skippers lost 11-6 against Scituate Wednesday to fall to 1-7 overall.

"Kelly Naeglin is a good pitcher for Scituate," Cohasset head coach Rob Spofford said. "We hit the ball well but left a lot of runners on base."

Spofford is pleased with the way the bats are coming around, now he needs the defense to reciprocate. With a young pitching staff a lot of balls are put into play. The Skippers have to find a way to perform under the added stress.

"We are beginning to hit the ball well now, we just have to tighten up the defense."
—Rob Spofford

"We are beginning to hit the ball well now, we just have to tighten up the defense," Spofford said.

Meredith Kelly, Kristin Monaco, Christine Conor, Carley Salerno and Anna Haggerty all connected on big hits against the Sailors.

"We just couldn't string together two or three at the right time when we needed to," Spofford added.

The week off from vacation didn't help matters.

"It's hard to come back after putting the glove down for a week," Spofford said. "We have to stay positive and work hard on the fundamentals."

Cohasset is scheduled to play Hull, Thursday, May 1 after Cohasset Mariner deadline. The Skippers next game is at Mashpee, May 5 and at Abington, May 6.

"I like a lot of the things we are doing," Spofford added. "We just have to take care of the ball on the defensive side."

The junior varsity team continues to chug along. They are 8-0 on the season.

Cohasset's Carley Zappolo lays down a bunt in the second inning before an error allowed her to reach base, the only Cohasset player to do so against East Bridgewater. Zappolo was thrown out trying to steal second a few pitches later as East Bridgewater went on to win the game 15-0 in six innings.

in spots they haven't played in the past," he said. "We can't afford to fall behind teams. We have to get to a point where the girls mature and this offense works. There are days in practice where we are getting it and making it work."

Lindsay Hill (Jr.) leads the team with 9 goals and 2 assists. She is moving from defense to attack and playing a versatile role.

Kelsey Erler (Fr.) is second on the team with 6 goals and 3 assists. Caitlin Mahoney (Jr.) and Kaci Kucinski (Fr.) have eight goals each.

Isabelle Franklin has missed time with a knee injury and her healthy return will be a welcomed site.

Cohasset U-13 boys youth lacrosse notes

Cohasset Boys U-13 White

The boys White team racked up another win this weekend against Barnstable, with a 9-7 final score. The team played well during the first quarter, feeding the attack and working the offense. The first goal came from middie Jack Conti, who ended the day with a second goal and 1 assist.

Attackman Jimmy Maher had a great start with a shot and goal from the top of the crease after a feed from Conti. Maher ended the day with 2 goals and 4 assists. Henry Brown had a goal in the first after winning the face-off and bringing the ball right down the middle for a goal. Henry went on to make two more goals and an assist.

Joey Sestito had his second goal for the year after a feed from behind the crease by Maher. Another offensive notable was Sam Morris, who continues to impress with great skills and an assist for the day. Pat Holway had one assist and numerous shots. Matt Arnold also played a strong game with a number of strong plays to the crease and passes, working the offense.

Midfield strength came from Matt Froio, Martin Buckley and newcomer, William Marsden. Marsden was exceptional for a new laxer with aggressive defense a successful clear.

Mats Nelson lead the defense as goalie and made seven saves. Our defensive standout was Colin Whelan with a half dozen clears. Colin is built like a wing attackman, but his speed and tenacity were too much for Barnstable in the first half. Our defenses weakened as the game progressed, but Jack Hoffman, Mike Yerardi and Mats in the crease were what we needed to keep the score in our favor.

Cohasset Boys U-13 Black

Strike-up another big win for the Black. Hull came to town with a full team of large players. A great offensive dual was won by Cohasset 11-6. Max Montgomery led with ten shots, three goals and four assists. Will Golden delivered six shots, three goals and three assists. Curtis Golden made five saves as goalie in the first half and contributed two goals on two shots in the second half.

Mark Brown dominated face-offs and had a goal and an assist. Zack Coggins made four shots and one goal. Charlie Steele had two shots and one goal. Cam Steele was a constant threat to Hull all day. The midfield line of Ben Buckley, Christian Kennedy and Jake Johnson continue to grow as a strong mid field unit and showed impressive control as an attack line as well. Jack Stanganelli raised to the occasion as the goalie for the second half. Jack made four key saves that kept the game in Cohasset's control.

The defense pf Jack Leffel, Harry Seraikas and Dylan Bomeisler held down the Hull attack the entire game. Cohasset Boys U-13 Blue

The Cohasset U-13 Blue Team is off to a competitive start with a 2-1-1 record with wins against Abington and Bridgewater, a tie against Lakeville and a physical loss this past Sunday to Norwell (7-4). The team was led by returning players Tommy Powers, Cole Kissick and Danny Tangherlini who have all provided leadership, stability and ball control with their size, speed and tenacity.

Powers has been a constant threat with his size and rocket shot while Kissick and Tangherlini have been invaluable with their ability to win faceoffs, ground balls and lightning speed to get the ball down field when it absolutely has to be there.

The defense is led by the efforts of Cole Morrison, Derrick Benson and rookie Timmy Gillis who has been a physical threat to all attackmen and midfielders attempting to score on the solid goalie skills of Owen Kefallinos.

The offense is led by four upcoming hot shots Charlie Michalowski, Jeff Powers, Adam Benson and Sam Murphy all who move the ball consistently and score goals when they have to.

The midfield has a combination of rookie and veteran players providing a well-balanced offense and defense including Timmy Giuggio, Tommy O'Brien, Chris and Michael Lund, Conner Heyden, Ian Kennedy, Holis Hunnewell, Timmy Hayes and Chris Brierley.

Smoke'em if you got'em

Red Sox legend Tiant introduces name brand cigars to South Shore

By Ryan Bray
RBRAY@CNC.COM

Boston Red Sox legend Luis Tiant takes a break from being interviewed at Cigar City in Weymouth. He made this appearance to promote his new line of cigars, "El Tiante."

The smell and light haze of cigar smoke might be bothersome to some, but not to Luis Tiant.

Tucked away in an upstairs common room above Cigar City in North Weymouth, the smell of cigar smoke fills the room as Tiant, in jeans and a white collared shirt, relaxes on a plush leather couch while radio personalities, reporters and fans of all ages flock to the Red Sox great for autographs, photos and a little light conversation on a crisp Saturday afternoon.

He accommodates everyone with laid back charm and grace, a cigar lightly pinched between his fingers. But it's not just any cigar. Instead it's an "El Tiante," one that not only bears his famed moniker but is also tailor made strictly to his own specifications.

It's been two years since Tiant, his son Daniel and business partner Kevin Anderson collaborated and got the ball rolling on El Tiante Cigars, which have since found their way around the country in states such as North Carolina, Florida and Texas in addition to their home base of Massachusetts. The cigars were first put on full display as the Sox engaged in a celebratory smoke following their 2007 World Series championship, giving the company a solid introduction to the New England area.

"Louis is known for two things, playing baseball and smoking cigars," said Anderson, the company's vice president and CFO. "There's almost a built-in market for the cigar here."

But that's not to say the famed Sox hurler is resting on his name to sell the product. Instead the "23 Series," the company's introductory cigar named in honor of Tiant's old number, was meticulously crafted and fashioned to Tiant's liking. A mild cigar, the 23, like all other El Tiante brands, is hand crafted in Nicaragua and boasts its own unique flavor.

"It's the kind of cigar I would like to smoke."
Red Sox Hall of Fame pitcher Luis Tiant

"It's the kind of cigar I would like to smoke," Tiant said. "I didn't want to put my name to something that wasn't a good product. It's a good cigar."

And if there is one thing Luis Tiant knows a thing or two about beyond baseball, it's a good cigar. An avid cigar lover and smoker since he was 17, Tiant has always boasted cigars as his second love.

"I think I had my first one in 1958," he recalled. "I quit a few times, a year here or a few years there, but I always loved to smoke cigars. I never liked cigarettes, only cigars."

The stop at Cigar City is one of several promotional stops Tiant and company will be making around the state to promote their new line. The company will host additional tastings in Worcester, Framingham and Nashua, NH, throughout May and June.

Anderson said the company plans on introducing new brands to shops and vendors in the coming months, including the Maduro, which has a stronger taste than the milder 23 brand. But first on the agenda, he said, is to get the 23 series up and running.

"I think a lot of shops want to see how the product stands up before taking on other brands," he said. "They want to see that we're here for the long term."

But Don Brennan, co-owner of Cigar City, said customers have responded well to the cigars since the shop first introduced them in August. He said the shop also sells the Maduro brand as well.

"People really seem to like them," Brennan said of the El Tiantes. "Everybody around here knows Luis, but on top of that it's a good product."

In his 18 year Major League career, Tiant had seven stellar seasons for the Red Sox from 1971-1978, where he boasted three consecutive 20 plus-win seasons from 1974 to 1976. He was inducted to the Red Sox Hall of Fame in 1997 and is regarded by many as one of the greatest living pitchers not inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, NY.

"Growing up as a kid in Cuba, playing baseball was a dream," he said. "I feel lucky to have been able to do it and do it well."

Cohasset's Brendan Doonan (9) takes a swing at the plate earlier in the season.

Cohasset's Kinch rookie of the week

University of Massachusetts Boston men's lacrosse player Jared Kinch (Cohasset, MA) has been named Little East Conference Rookie of the Week for the week of April 21-27, it was announced today by the conference.

Kinch racked up nine points in three games to average 3.0 per outing, while netting seven goals and two assists to go with 15 ground balls to average 5.0 per game. The midfielder was also impressive in face-off situations, winning 57.1% (8-14) of his efforts. The freshman began the week with four points on a pair of goals and two assists vs. Salem State College on April 22 to go with five ground balls. A product of Boston College High School, he netted a season-high three goals, including the game-winner in a 10-6 victory at Massachusetts Maritime Academy on April 26 and capped the week with a pair of goals and a season-best seven ground balls vs. Eastern Connecticut State University on April 26.

Kinch has been one of the Beacons' top scorers for the season, posting 32 points to rank second on the squad, while distributing a team-high 16 assists in 14 games for an average of 1.14 per game, which ranks eighth among Little East Conference leaders. Kinch's total of 16 goals also ranks him third on the team. The first-year player has started seven of 14 games, while scooping up a total of 52 ground balls to place him second the team, while contributing with a game-winning score and a man-up tally. Kinch has registered at least one point in all but two contests, including nine outings with two or more points, including a personal-best of five vs. Saint Joseph's College (ME) on March 27.

UMass Boston is currently 4-10 on the season, including a 1-5 mark in LEC play and will enter the Little East Conference Tournament as the number six seed, taking on third-seeded Western Connecticut State University at 5:00 p.m. on Tuesday, April 29 in Danbury, CT.

With good pitching, winning is easy

Skippers take two over the weekend

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset High baseball team won a pair of games over the weekend led by two outstanding pitching performances turned in by senior starters. Both Dave Snowdale and Brian Hill showed how easy it is to win a game when a team has good pitching.

The 6-2 win over Cardinal Spellman and the 11-0 win over Archbishop Williams now puts Cohasset at 6-2 overall on the season and in position to take first place in the league this upcoming week.

Snowdale and Hill turned in almost identical pitching performances. The seniors pitched complete games, recorded seven strikeouts, walked only two, and allowed only four hits.

The win made Snowdale 2-0 on the season and Hill 3-1. Both were helped with two games of great offense.

The Skippers broke the game open against Spellman with a four-run third inning in which the team capitalized on two hit batsmen and two Spellman errors.

Brendan Doonan's two-run double and senior Sam DeGiacomo's RBI single capped off the inning.

The offense picked it up a notch in its game versus Archie's as five players had multiple hits.

This included, Snowdale, who's hits were doubles that drove in five runs, Doonan, who had three RBI's on a single and a triple, and Pat Doonan who drove in two runs on two singles.

Both Chris Rose and John Sturino also had two hits in the game.

The offense in the game came in two innings in which the Skippers scored five runs in the fourth inning and six runs in the fifth inning.

Cohasset head coach Al Gallotta was pleased with the offensive output, but wants more consistency.

"We need to be more consistent hitting wise and spread out hits and runs around more," he said.

Other than that, Gallotta seemed pleased with his team's performance this far into the season.

"We've done everything well, good pitching, good hitting, and outstanding defense."

Cohasset boys lacrosse notebook

FROM BOYS LAX, PAGE 17

Flibotte tied the score on another roll dodge and low bullet after a strong clearing run by Jake Cuneo. Dover-Sherborn then went on a three-goal run, which included a goal to an empty net after a botched Cohasset clear attempt, to take a commanding lead.

With less than a minute to go in the half, Flibotte brought the Skippers closer on a bounce shot dodging from up top. Chuck Czerkawski won the ensuing face-off. Freshman midfielder Thomas Flibotte picked up the ground ball and somehow found Johnny Wade on the crease for a critical sidearm quick stick that brought Cohasset back before the buzzer.

At the start of the second half, Grimm, dodging from behind, drew aggressive slides from the Raider defense and found Mark Flibotte alone in the slot for the tying goal. After another Dover-Sherborn goal on a wayward Cohasset clear, Flibotte found the back of the cage twice after beating his defender clean and Cohasset took the lead.

Grimm quickly followed with a pinball dodge through four Raider defenders beating the goalie to the top corner as he was knocked down. Dover-Sherborn inched closer at 9-8 with a goal on the man-up (Cohasset's only penalty of the day). Wade scored his second goal on another quick stick to start the final quarter, this time on a beautiful feed from the older Flibotte.

Dover-Sherborn scored again to keep the Skipper faithful on edge. However, with less than a minute to go and with a Raider defender stick slashed across his neck, Grimm fired a pass to the crease that ticked off the top of Mark Flibotte's stick into the cage for a two-goal margin.

The Raiders simply had no defensive answer to Flibotte's outstanding play all day.

Curran was pleased with his team's defensive effort and the absence of penalties.

"Stupid fouls have been hurting us all year," he said. "Today, we switched out of our aggressive man-to-man defense into a match-up zone from time to time. It seemed to confuse the Dover-Sherborn offense and it kept our guys under control and out of the penalty box."

Jake Kissick, Jake Cuneo, Anderson Lynner, Nick Lieberman, Andrew Smith and John Maher all did a terrific job in the new zone defense quickly sliding with sticks up to prevent any Raider scoring opportunities.

Mark Flibotte led all scorers with 7 goals and 1 assist. Mike Grimm had 2 goals and 2 assists. Chuck Czerkawski and Alex Kinnealey won over 80 percent of the faceoffs and Nate Porter had 14 timely saves.

Okay, that probably didn't provide you with enough assistance in this impromptu game of "Guess Who," so stay tuned for next week when I reveal yet another fun piece of this puzzle.

Switching gears, senior parents, please do not forget to send in your senior ads to "The Spinnaker." These ads are a fun, not to mention financially beneficial factor in the production of this year's last issue. The deadline is May 4th, but please feel free to stamp those envelopes and sign those checks before Sunday. For more info or if there are any questions, send an e-mail to Spinnaker@cohassetk12.org.

Also on the menu is the clothing drive, whereby grades 9-12 are pitted against each other in a friendly yet humanitarian themed competition. Each class with donate clean clothes either new or old (but in good condition) to their grades designated bin. The drop-off boxes are located at the front entrance of the High School. Now is a perfect time to go through your closet and get rid of any unused clothes. Who doesn't love spring cleaning with a charity twist! The donation box with the most clothes will win a free breakfast for their class. So, if you want an enjoyable breakfast on the house, you know what to do!

Now, for the recap of this week:

- Monday: A nice rainy day back from vacation. Consequently, all sports games were cancelled much to the dismay of the athletes.
- Tuesday: Despite the rain, there were some sweet surf-worthy swells, in addition to yet another sports game cancellation.
- Wednesday: Girls Varsity Softball battled against Scituate on the Freedom Field, while the JV Girls stepped up to the plate at Barnes Field for an equally entertaining display of athleticism.
- Thursday: The Boys and Girls Track and Field competed against East Bridgewater at Alumni.
- Friday: AP students began to brace themselves for next week's daunting exams. Time to rest up and sharpen those 2B pencils.

Well, that's it for me this week. Have a safe and fun weekend.

Tennis benefit for Children's Hospital

Save the date for Cohasset's longest-running tennis tradition, which swings into action again this summer to benefit Children's Hospital Boston beginning Friday, July 18th through Sunday, July 20th. The popular weekend tennis tournament dates back to the 1950's, when Cohasset's legendary philanthropist Jesse Cox gathered family and friends for a charitable game of tennis to benefit some of the neediest children and their families at Children's Hospital.

The event was a tremendous success and soon became an annual summer tradition. In the past 10 years alone, more than $100,000 has been raised to benefit patients and their families at the hospital, earning the Cohasset Tennis Benefit a commemorative plaque in the Children's lobby. This year all proceeds will help fund the Pediatric Trauma Program, with 100 percent of the proceeds paying for transportation, lodging and personal care packages for families of trauma patients.

This summer's benefit kicks off with an evening reception on Friday, July 18th at the Lightkeeper's Residence on Cohasset Harbor. On Saturday, July 19, tennis players of all abilities, from beginners to advanced, are evenly matched and play on some of the most spectacular private courts throughout Cohasset. Finals for three levels of play (social, intermediate and advanced) take place on Sunday, July 20th on the grounds of the Roy estate, formerly the home of Cohasset Tennis Benefit founder Jesse Cox.

PAC to meet May 6

Join the Cohasset Parent Advisory Council on May 6 for "Parent 2 Parent."

This is an opportunity for parents to discuss with the PAC Board any issues, concerns and positive information that they would like to share regarding the school district. The PAC Board would like as much feedback regarding what your needs are in order to take steps in planning for next year.

The meeting will be held at Osgood School (located behind Deer Hill School), 210 Sohier St. and starts promptly at 7:30 p.m.

Osgood PSO to host Book Fair

Joseph Osgood School PTO will host a Book Fair fundraiser from 2 to 7 p.m., on Wednesday, May 7, at 210 Sohier St. The PSO will once again welcome Bookfairs by Bookends, a company that has been hosting "books only" book fairs that are packed with a selection of books from more than 40 different publishers. There will be thousands of books with titles that parents and children will want to read including picture books, beginning reader books, chapter books, classics and award winners among fact-packed science and reference books, popular adult titles and gift books.

Attendees can also help the school build classroom libraries and the school library by purchasing books for teachers through the Classroom Wish List.

The PSO is a non-profit organization. The role of the PSO is to act as an advocate for public education. It is the official link between parents and schools. The PSO voices parental responses to school issues, and provides forums for administrators, teachers, and students to present their programs and policies to the public. Through fundraising efforts, like the upcoming Book Fair, the PSO provides programs and activities that enrich the school experience for students, teachers, and parents. Families, teachers, and all members of the community are invited to attend the Fair and discover the magic of reading.

Take on a summer project!

Summer Institute offers research opportunities

The Summer Institute is a unique learning experience in which students tackle a variety of coastal research projects of importance to the town of Cohasset. Students are taught to conduct environmental research as professionals in partnership with local and state officials.

Established in 1999, the Summer Institute has grown in popularity each year. It began as a pilot program with only 16 students, but engaged over 80 students in 6 different projects located in 4 surrounding communities. A total of nine Summer Institute graduates have been recognized as Henry David Thoreau scholars over the past seven years.

Summer Institute Contact information: Jack Buckley, Cohasset High School, jbuckley@cohassetk12.org; 781 383 6100, ext 274; or contact CSCR at 781 383 0129; cscr@verizon.net

• Wetland Monitoring — A project now entering its fourth year; students monitor wetlands to collect data submitted to the Massachusetts Coastal Zone Wetlands Restoration Program. This is the project with which the town needs the most help.

• Cohasset Harbor Study — This project measures the impact of bacteria and nitrogen running into Cohasset harbor from the Gulf River and James Brook. This is a project that is still incomplete; students who worked on it last year are needed to complete this project!

• Parker Ave "Cut" project — The Parker Ave cut is a narrow tidal creek connecting Baily's Creek (Cohasset Harbor) with the Gulf River. students will combine bacteriology studies and wetland monitoring protocols to provide town officials with a more complete understanding of the current health of this fragile system.

• Board of Health Beaches study — Students will collect bacteria samples at 6 different swimming beaches in Cohasset and split samples with G and L Labs, Quincy, Ma. Students will then statistically compare CSCR student results with those of the professional lab.

• James Brook Non Point Source Pollution Assessment — This project focuses exclusively on measuring the impact of storm water that flows from James Brook into Cohasset Harbor.

• CSCR Staff Training and Leadership Development — Join a group of highly responsible students who have formed to tackle the weekly, monthly and yearly management needs of CSCR. Students do PR, budgets, newsletters, fundraisers, etc.

• GIS Computer Mapping — This is an evening program; students learn GIS computer mapping and data presentation skills.

• Treats Pond — Treats Pond is the focus of considerable attention in town; CSCR students have been asked to collect some basic water quality measurements in this system.

• Videography production and Website Design— Learn how to produce, edit, and publish research project videos.

First Parish kids reinstall woodland sign

Just five days after the official observance of Earth Day April 22, members of the First Parish Unitarian Universalist reinstalled the Cohasset Conservation Trust sign at Great Brewster Woods. The new welcoming sign bears the name of the Youth of the First Parish maintaining the land for the Cohasset Conservation Trust.

Melissa Alves, Arianna Tosi and Christian Torres are members of the Keepers of the Earth project initiated by the First Parish to introduce third-through sixth-grade youth to one of the trust's properties and give them a sense of stewardship. In the spring and fall, they patrol the Great Brewster trail, cutting back vines and picking up trash. The First Parish youth will also fund-raise to help pay for the new sign.

Great Brewster Woods is an 18-acre woodland north of Highland Avenue and east of Beach Street, granted to the Cohasset Conservation Trust in 1985 by the Great Brewster Corporation, a real estate development venture of Cohasset residents: Edgar Hill, Walter Railsback, Raymond Remick and George McLaughlin. The name Great Brewster comes from another venture of Edgar Hill's, a gravel mine on Great Brewster Island in Boston Harbor. Because the Cohasset land was unable to perc, it was donated to the Trust, thus saving it in perpetuity from any further development.

Residents are encouraged to enter by way of Highland Court off Highland Avenue at the southeast corner of the property, which is an easy walk from the parking lot at Cohasset Town Hall.

Rain barrel conservation program offered

Aquarion Water Co. of Massachusetts is offering Hingham, Hull and north Cohasset residents the opportunity to purchase rain barrel water conservation materials at the discounted price of $66.50, a 25 percent saving off the retail price. Aquarion Water has teamed up with New England Rain Barrel Co. to residents conserve.

According to Larry Bingaman, Aquarion senior vice president, the average homeowner uses approximately 40-percent of water for outdoor use.

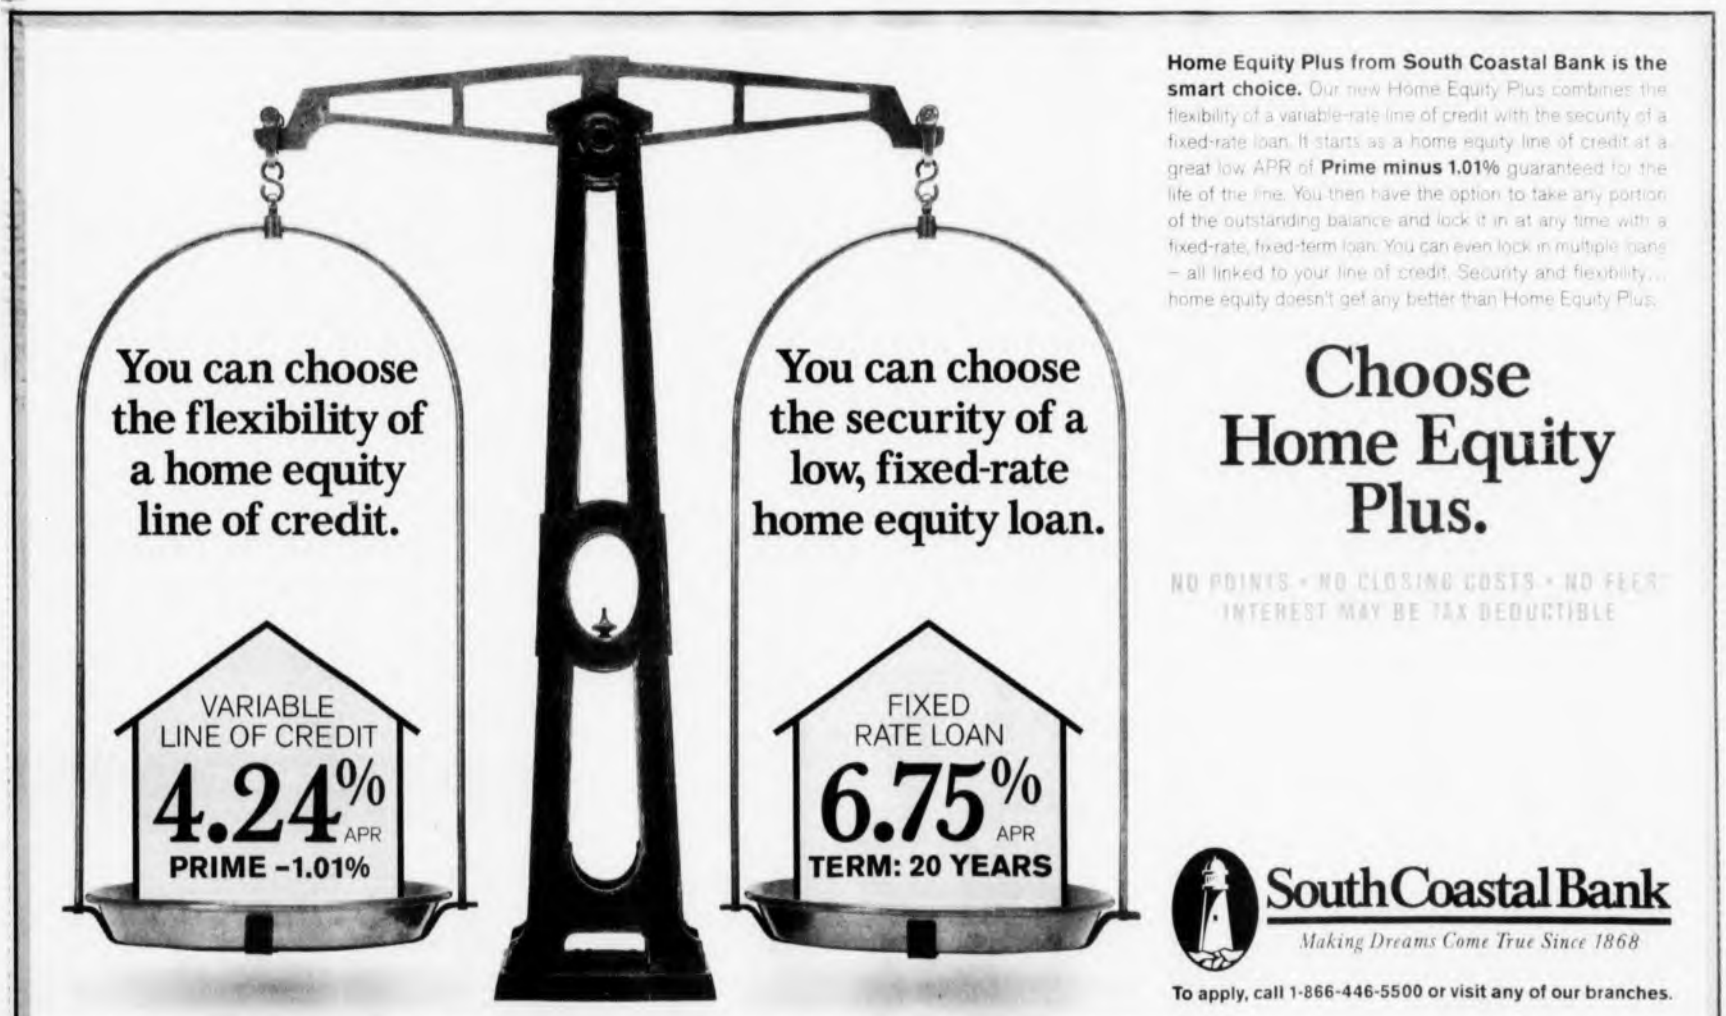
Bingaman said, "A 1-inch rainfall on a 1,200 square-foot roof will yield over 700 gallons of water. Using a rain barrel is an excellent way to conserve some of this water.

"A quarter-inch run-off from an average roof will easily fill the barrel," he said. "If you have five storms a season, that equals 275 gallons of free water.

"Rain barrel use reduces the stress on municipal water systems during the summer months and improves storm water management.

The rain barrels are made from 55-gallon blue plastic recycled containers. The top does not come off, so no children or pets can get in the barrel. It has a 6-inch diameter inlet opening covered with a screened louver to keep insects and debris out. The barrels have two brass spigots, one to allow a connection to a hose for watering, and one for overflow. By connecting a hose to the overflow spigot, water can be redirected away from a home. Each barrel comes with a 5-foot hose with a shutoff valve so that multiple barrels can be joined for additional capacity.

Orders may be placed through May 7, and be picked up on Saturday, May 10, during the water company's annual open house from 1 to 4 p.m., at its facility at 900 Main St., Hingham. For more information call 781-740-6695 or visit aquarion.com/massachusetts.



Rabies clinic offered May 17

The Town of Hull will be hosting its Second Annual Multi-town Rabies Clinic offering reduced cost rabies vaccines for dogs and cats in Hull, Cohasset, Hingham and Norwell, on Saturday, May 17, from 2 to 4 p.m.

Dr. Grace Strake, DVM, South Coastal Animal Health, Weymouth, will be assisting the Town of Hull, administering these vaccinations. The clinic will be held behind Hull Police Headquarters, 1 School St., Vaccinations will be $10.

All dogs must be leashed. Aggressive dogs must be muzzled. All cats must be crated.

GetAWAY

Aboard the Carnival Imagination

Jessica Scarpati
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Who's a better kisser: Debbie or Freckles? Frankly, it doesn't matter. With 25 stingrays swirling around a shallow beach off Grand Turk - playfully darting between your legs or brushing up against you like cats - there's plenty of love to go around.

"She's just a big portabella mushroom," coos tour guide Roger Cunningham to "Debbie," a 3-foot-wide Southern Atlantic stingray that he kisses with his lips and cradles in his arms.

It's moments like these that will make you thankful you ditched the beer buckets and got off your five-day cruise on the Carnival Imagination at the ports of call - Grand Turk, Half Moon Cay and Nassau, Bahamas - to go exploring.

If you want to do more than bake in the sun, the excursions ($71 per person for the "Reefs & Rays" outing) afford the chance to literally and figuratively dive in.

Happy sharks and hairy chests

The Grand Turk rays have come to associate the sound of the boat with food. The same thing happens in the snorkeling site in Round Cay reef, where Cunningham take groups to see barracudas and sharks.

He says "Harry," the 3-foot barracuda, and "Shaun," the 6-foot shark, remain happy and docile by being fed regularly. Although it seems to be working, marine life experts might argue these practices could cause the fish to attack people.

If you have any leanings toward ecotourism, the expedition may not sit well with you. Then again, the vibe among passengers on the 2,052-passenger ship, which leaves from Miami, doesn't exactly scream "political correctness."

Instead, you may wander onto the pool deck and right into the hairiest-chest contest, in which half-naked men compete - for better or worse - right next to the buffet line.

The Carnival Imagination is smaller and older than most other ships in the Carnival fleet, so you won't find a movie theater or an upscale steakhouse, as on the newer vessels. But the recently refurbished Imagination seems to attract a crowd diverse in age and more interested in things like sunning, snoozing and boozing.

Exploring the Bahamas

Although they call it a "Fun ship," the real fun for me was onshore.

The second port after Grand Turk is Half Moon Cay, operated by sister line Holland America.

Here you can try parasailing ($87 per person), which is the kind of activity that sounds like a better idea while on dry land, but in the end is worth the breathtaking view and peaceful hush 450 feet above the sea.

When you're all adventured-out, Carnival throws a fun, complimentary party and barbecue on the beach. Frozen drinks are never far away (for a fee), and there is plenty of snorkel gear, paddle boats and kayaks to rent.

In Nassau, Bahamas, my companion and I went off on our own and learned no one there can tell you the exact address for anything.

As you stroll past all the duty-free alcohol, perfume and jewelry stores on the main drag, Bay Street, it's easy to miss the Pompey Museum (Adults, $3; seniors over 60, $2; children under 14, $1). Most people will describe it as "next to the Straw Market." Even the curator couldn't read the weathered numbers outside; the cross street is George Street.

But it's well worth a visit. The former slave market rotates exhibits, usually highlighting the impact of colonialism and slave trade on the Caribbean. It's a wake-up call from the scene outside - a community that is both dependent on and clearly tired of tourism.

Attractions on the Carnival Imagination include a water slide.

In the famous Straw Market at the end of Bay Street, a man hacked at a piece of woodcarving. An American woman asked brightly, "What are you making?" He kept swinging the ax and replied flatly, "Money."

We eyed the authentic-looking Caribbean food many of the merchants were eating and inquired where they got it. We were directed to "Da Junkanoo Shak" (again, no address given - "Make a left at the Gucci bags" - but it's at the corner of Bay Street and Navy Lyn Road, an unmarked side street adjacent to Woodes Rogers Walk).

Everything on the menu is vague, such as "chicken snack" or "pork dinner." We took the waitress' recommendation and each ordered a delicious conch burger for $5.50.

Back on the ship later, I savored my final four-course dinner - the Carnival food is surprisingly good. But pushing a portabella mushroom around my plate, I couldn't help thinking dreamily about Debbie, the stingray.

'Evolutions of Fun' overhaul

The Imagination - a 13-year-old ship - is one of the first two Carnival "Fun" ships to be refurbished as part of line's Evolutions of Fun relaunch.

Many of the changes will be noticeable to dedicated Carnival cruisers, including remodeled rooms, wider hallways, reupholstered furniture and low-energy LED lighting.

The Imagination has added 50 new adjoining cabins for families, said Hotel Director Miles Willis. Willis said another change guests will notice is all guestrooms now have flat-screen TVs and bathrobes.

Many changes come in an attempt to make the old ship new again: bowl sinks, wireless Internet and a new sound system. But the glaring fluorescent colors and Art Deco designs still scream 1995.

Some of the things you can do on the ship have also changed.

A 300-foot-long water slide, dual-racing slides and water sprays replaced a pool and hot tubs.

If you want to get wet without getting wild, the Imagination also added an adults-only hot tub area (appropriately dubbed "Serenity").

Long gone is the topless sunbathing deck; in its place is a miniature golf course.

Inside, the ship's rebuilt spa, new exercise equipment in the gym is good for working off the midnight Mexican buffet or the infamous chocolate melting cake served at dinner every night.

The kids are all taken care of with Camp Carnival for tots, Club O2 for teens and the new Circle C program for "tweens," ages 12-14.

Other features on the ship remain, such as the free sushi bar and late-night poolside parties, casino, dance clubs and comedy shows.

Pay extra and you'll have access to the espresso cafe, yoga classes and airbrush temporary tattooing poolside.

Members of Hingham's Congregation Sha'aray Shalom will join in a local tradition that connects them to the deepest roots of Judaism on Sunday, May 4.

Mitvah, plural, mitzvoth, is a Hebrew word that means both a commandment and a good deed. Performing mitzvot is an ongoing, lifelong requirement for Jews, who are told in the Bible story that the Patriarch Abraham found favor with the Divine because of his many loving acts of kindness toward family, friends and most importantly, to strangers. Nearly four millennia later, Abraham is still the ideal of the righteous person whose charitable behavior remains the model for modern Jews.

Mitzvah Day is an annual event in which the congregants of the Reform synagogue on Main Street, whose members come from all over the South Shore, join in the performance of communal mitzvot. In this they honor a central tenet of their faith.

Judy Kalla, co-chairwoman of the synagogue's Social Action Committee, which oversees Mitzvah Day, said, "What's most special to me about the day is that it is a multi-generational celebration. Our volunteers, parents, our Hebrew school kids, grandparents, everyone comes together to work for a greater good."

Along with the laity, Sha'aray Shalom's religious leaders, Rabbi Shira Joseph and Cantor Steven Weiss, whose vocations call them to ongoing acts of kindness, express their commitment to Mitzvah Day by joining in the day's activities.

There are mitzvot for every age, temperament and interest: A blood drive, conducted by Brigham and Women's Hospital and open to the public, 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.; visiting a local nursing home; helping elderly residents of Hingham with home repairs; joining Boston's annual Walk for Hunger; gardening and clean-up at the synagogue; CPR training course; and beach clean up in Hull.

Cindy McDonald the other co-chairwoman of the Social Action Committee assumed her leadership position last fall. When asked about her inspiration to join in she spoke of her mother. "My mother passed away last year, after a prolonged illness. I was her primary caregiver. When I look at her life, I realize how much she did for others. She raised four kids, and worked full time and still found time to volunteer in so many worthy causes. After she was gone I realized that I had to give something back too. I know I can never equal her generosity but she is my inspiration."

From generation to generation stretching back to antiquity, Jews have been called upon to serve others. In Mitzvah Day, the members of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom reaffirm the call of the Prophet Micah: "and what does the Lord require of you: only to do justice and to love goodness and to walk humbly with your God; then your name will achieve wisdom."

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF APRIL 28, 2008

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Don't waste your time and energy fretting over remarks you consider unnecessary or unkind. Best advice: Ignore them, and just keep doing your usual good job.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Getting that new perspective on a workplace situation could lead to a solution everyone will accept. Meanwhile, make time to keep up with your creative pursuits.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Those changes you planned to implement in early summer might need to be reassessed. But don't make any moves until you've discussed this with someone you trust.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your aspects favor harmony, making this a good time to work out problems in relationships — whether personal or professional, big or small. An old friend comes back.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) While you're still riding that high-powered beam, you might begin to lose focus by week's end. Could be you'll need to do a little cat-napping to restore your spent energies.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) An unexpected development creates a lot of excitement. Where it takes you is your decision. Check out the possibilities, then decide if you want to go with it or not.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Although your supporters help you squash an unfair claim against you, don't let this go unchallenged. You need to learn more about the motives of those behind it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) There are still some tasks to clear up by midweek. Then you can welcome the new month on a high note. A friend brings surprising but very welcome news.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might want to change your plans before they're set in cement. Consider advice from colleagues. But remember that, ultimately, it's your choice.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A difficult situation is working itself out. Lingering problems should be resolved by week's end, allowing the Goat to enjoy a calmer, less stressful period.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Be careful not to move so quickly that you miss possible warning signs that could upset your plans. Slow down. Your supporters will continue to stand by you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your generosity in sharing your time and wisdom with others leads to an intriguing development that could have you considering some interesting choices.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of influencing people to be and do their best. You would make an excellent teacher.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Hoo Boy

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Pops starts with a bang

123rd season kicks off Wednesday, May 7, with Natalie Cole

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Natalie Cole joins Keith Lockhart and the Boston Pops May 7 at Symphony Hall.

Eight-time Grammy Award-winner Natalie Cole will join Keith Lockhart and the Boston Pops Wednesday, May 7, at Symphony Hall for the opening of the orchestra's 123rd season, which will include appearances by jazz legend Arturo Sandoval, 10,000 Maniacs front woman Natalie Merchant, Dresden Doll Amanda Palmer, Broadway leading man Brian Stokes Mitchell, and John Williams leading film nights featuring Lynn Redgrave, as well as a first-ever local high school sing-off, the Pops debut of Garrison Keillor, and a season-long tribute to Leonard Bernstein.

"We worked with Natalie Cole last summer on Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard and she had 10,000 people eating her up" Lockhart said from Salt Lake City by telephone last week. "She sounded great and she looked great and we knew right away that we wanted to have her back this year. Natalie's arrangements work just beautifully with an orchestra like ours."

The daughter of the late Nat King Cole, Natalie Cole first came to fame in the mid-1970s with hits like "This Will Be (an Everlasting Love)," "Inseparable," and "I've Got Love on My Mind." In 1991, Cole released "Unfogettable...With Love," featuring her own arrangements of her father's biggest hits. Although she had previously been reluctant to perform her father's songs, her decision to record them brought her once again to the top of the charts. The best-selling album earned Cole Grammy Awards for Album of the Year, Record of the Year, and Best Traditional Pop Vocal Performance. A duet with her father on the title track, created by blending a vintage Nat King Cole recording with new vocals by his daughter, reached number 14 on Billboard's Hot 100 chart. Cole's opening night Pops song list will include music from the all phases of the 58-year-old singer's career including her current Verve release, "Leavin'," her 20th studio album.

"Natalie will be doing all kinds of great music with us including jazz standards and a lot from the Sarah Vaughn, Nancy Wilson and Peggy Lee songbooks," Lockhart said.

Lockhart – who will depart his post as Music Director of the Utah Symphony in 2009 – says the upcoming Pops season, his 14th in Boston, will continue some long-held traditions while starting some new ones, too, including the Boston Pops High School Sing-Off in which local high school students will compete for the chance to perform with Lockhart and the Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra as part of the Fourth of July concert on Boston's Esplanade. Broadway music will be the theme of the competition and other concerts throughout the 2008 season.

"Part of our job as America's orchestra is to play America's greatest music," Lockhart said. "We like doing really great Broadway musicals that aren't revived or heard all the time so this year we will be doing a semi-staged concert version of Stephen Sondheim's 'A Little Night Music,' featuring Christine Ebersole and Mary Louise Wilson who were both so brilliant in 'Grey Gardens.'"

The brilliance of the late Leonard Bernstein will be celebrated opening night and throughout the season – including Saturday, Aug. 2, in Cohasset, when Lockhart and the Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra will perform at the South Shore Music Circus. The Lawrence-born, Harvard-educated Bernstein, who would have turned 90 Monday, Aug. 25, began what would become a lifelong association with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1940 while studying with conductor Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood. Bernstein would later write three symphonies, two operas, and five musicals, including "Wonderful Town" and "West Side Story." A longtime conductor of the New York Philharmonic, Bernstein is one of the most influential figures in the history of American classical music.

"Bernstein is celebrated not just because of his extraordinary talents, but because of the wide-ranging influence he had over all kinds of music," Lockhart said. "In our season-long Bernstein retrospective, we'll incorporate music from the ballet 'Fancy Free,' his score for the film 'On The Waterfront,' and selections from 'On the Town,' 'Candide,' and, of course, 'West Side Story.' Leonard Bernstein has been gone for almost 18 years now, but he remains a model for all of us. He was a Renaissance man of music. He was a great pianist, composer, and conductor, but most importantly he was a great advocate and communicator of music. Any American conductor who says he or she is not influenced by Bernstein is lying."

The Boston Pops will open its 123rd season at Boston Symphony Hall, 301 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-266-2378 or go online at bostonpops.org.

Kathy St. George performs Tuesday, May 6, in Norwell

R. Scott Reidy
CORRESPONDENT

Kathy St. George

If you missed Kathy St. George in the Lyric Stage run of "And Now Ladies and Gentlemen, Miss Judy Garland" last summer – and Stoneham Theatre's just-announced June 2009 reprise of the musical seems too long to wait – then you just may want to head to Norwell's Company Theatre next Tuesday night, May 6, to see St. George in concert.

St. George won this year's IRNE Award for Best Solo Performance from the Independent Reviewers of New England and is nominated for Outstanding Musical Performance at the 2008 Elliot Norton Awards – set for Monday, May 12, at Sanders Theatre in Cambridge – for her powerhouse portrayal of the legendary, and legendarily troubled, Garland in the one-woman show conceived, created and directed by Quincy's Tony McLean.

The song list for St. George's May 6 Norwell cabaret appearance will include plenty of Garland as well as music from many of the other shows St. George has done in a career that has included featured roles in the 1990 Broadway revival of "Fiddler on the Roof," opposite Topol as Tevye, and the off-Broadway run of "I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change." Well-known to local audiences for her work in the sit-down runs of "Menopause: The Musical" and "Respect: A Musical Journey" at Boston's Stuart Street Playhouse, St. George has also earned a loyal following with memorable turns in quirkier fare like "Ruthless" and "Johnny Guitar" with Boston's SpeakEasy Stage.

Kathy St. George will appear in concert, with Tim Evans on piano, at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, Tuesday, May 6, at 7:30 p.m. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787 or go online at companytheatre.com.

A day to celebrate Cohasset

Mark Sept. 20 on your calendar

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Saturday, Sept. 20, there will be dancing in the street, the smell of food in the air, art on the sidewalk and a handful of other activities for Cohasset residents and visitors to take part in. The event is "Cohasset Day" and it's all about celebrating and highlighting everything that makes Cohasset what it is.

Members of the Economic Development Committee, a selectmen-appointed committee, are planning the event in an effort to generate excitement, civic pride and business interest around the town of Cohasset. They made their first presentation Monday night to the Board of Selectmen.

The afternoon/evening event (1 to 8 p.m.) will take place in the village and on the town common, and will feature myriad options for family fun throughout the day.

"The star of the show will be the Cohasset, its co-stars will be the residents and visitors attending the event," said Alain Pinel, EDC member and one of the main organizers of the event. "It's a day to enjoy the town and to be proud of the town."

Putting the best foot of Cohasset forward is foremost in the mind of the organizers. The Historical Society will have a table to present the rich history of Cohasset. Village businesses will be open and welcoming of new customers. The South Shore Art Center is planning on putting together vignettes of local artists work throughout the village and common. Kids will be encouraged to decorate their bikes for a bike parade. Local clothing stores will put together a

Remembering Katherine Stanton

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Her profound love of life, perennial upbeat attitude, independent nature, generous spirit and outspoken voice is what long-time resident and Citizen of the Year 1998 Katherine Stanton will be remembered for most by the many Cohasset residents whose lives she touched. The much admired lady passed away at the age of 89 on Saturday.

A mother, grandmother, great-grandmother, teacher, volunteer, friend, neighbor, Stanton was many things to many people.

"I always came out of our visit knowing I had been with someone who had so much to give," says Marjorie Murphy, outreach coordinator for the Paul Pratt Library, fondly remembering Stanton's hearty laugh. "She was a great little lady."

Common curbing up for discussion

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For years, cars have routinely pulled up onto the common to park. On North Main Street the parking serves as drop-off, pick-up space for the South Shore Community Center. On William B. Long and Robert E. Jason, it's regularly used by churchgoers. On Highland Ave. the spots are hard to come by on a busy evening at Town Hall or during a Cohasset Dramatic Club performance.

When the Little Harbor Water and Sewer Project makes its way to the Cohasset Common area in the late summer, the parking on the Common tradition could change or it could stay the same. The question of how to curb the streets surrounding the Common for the future is up for discussion.

New water and sewer lines will be installed on North Main Street and new water lines on Highland Ave. After the new piping is put in, the roadway will be reclaimed and paved with a new asphalt base and top coat.

Over the years, the roads surrounding the common have been paved over and over; this process will remove all the asphalt that has built up over the years. With the asphalt built up, the streets are approximately the same level as the curbs and the land on the Common side of the curb making it very easy — and welcoming — for cars to park. When the paving is reclaimed, the road could be as much as one foot lower than it is now.

"I tried to float an underground parking, but I guess the pond is in the way."
— Mark Brennan

Water Commission chairman Glenn Pratt and resident town engineers Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber came before the Board of Selectmen Monday night to get the conversation going. Brennan and Gruber brainstormed several options for Selectmen to mull over.

- The curbing could be reset with a normal six-inch curb, which would prevent cars from parking on the Common.
- The curb and sidewalk could be moved inland, reducing the size of the Common, but creating more road space for parking on both sides of the North Main. (Telephone poles and trees are obstacles in this option.)
- The curb and street pavement could remain the same height allowing cars to park on the Common.

May is Older Americans Month

"Across the nation May is celebrated as Older Americans Month. President John F. Kennedy designated May 1963 as Senior Citizens Month, asking the nation to pay tribute in some way to older people across the country. In 1980, President Jimmy Carter changed the name to Older Americans Month as a time to celebrate older adults through ceremonies, events and fairs." United States Census Bureau.

1,688 of Cohasset's 7,588 residents are 60 years or older, and of that number 408 are 80 and above.

On May 7, at noon, please join the Council on Elder Affairs as it honors all Mothers with a Mother's Day Brunch at the Cohasset Senior Center. Harpist, Michele Pinet will provide entertainment. Michele is being partially funded by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee calls out to all of Cohasset and asks for the donation of salable items for its annual yard sale to benefit the Joseph F. Walsh III Memorial Scholarship Fund. Correction

Due to a reporting error last week's article, "No Decision on Ripley Road," incorrectly stated the square footage of the building at 25 Ripley Road. According to owner Will Charles, there is approximately 6,600 square feet of livable space in the building, with approximately 1,000 square feet of unfinished space.

Suspicious vehicle report ends in arrest

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A resident on Hillside Drive reported a suspicious car parked on the street around 10:30 on Monday, April 28. A woman had been sitting in the car for some time. When officers responded and the woman was identified, they discovered she had an outstanding drug-related warrant. They took the woman into custody and transported her to Quincy District Court the next morning.

This incident is an example of how the community can be the eyes and ears for the police department, said Police Chief James Hussey. If a resident observes something they believe is suspicious he encourages the resident to report it to the police. Residents should be able to articulate why they think the activity is suspicious. The caller should be able to give as much information and details (car or person description, license plates etc.) about the activity as possible.

"The more information the caller can give us on why they believe the activity is suspicious, the better is it for us to do our job," said Hussey. The information can aid the responding officers so they approach the situation appropriately.

Train gates

Shortly after midnight after the last train had gone by early last Monday (April 28) morning, the grade crossing gates on Pleasant Street remained partly down with the lights flashing and bells ringing. An off-duty police officer on his way to work came across the gates and called it in to dispatch.

"The MBTA is still fine tuning the gates and sometimes the gate doesn't go all the way back," said Chief James Hussey. Because the officer had gone through the safety-training course with the MBTA, he was able to implement a fix almost immediately. The MBTA was notified and sent out a crew to look at the problem.

"When the lights are flashing drivers are encouraged not to cross the tracks," said Hussey. "Ideally, we want people to call the police."

In the event of a gate malfunction, there are safety measures in place. Hussey said the train conductor and engineer are aware if a gate is malfunctioning and will stop the train before it reaches the gate. The train conductor will exit the train and ensure the crossing is safe before the train crosses.

Coat missing from classroom

A high school student came into the police station to report a missing jacket that had money in the pocket. The student had left the jacket in a classroom and upon returning to the classroom the coat was gone. The police are investigating the incident as a larceny.

Gas drive off

On Monday evening, April 28, a car drove off from Leo's Exxon without paying for its gas—at total of $63.54. The employee at the gas station was able to get the license plate from the video surveillance system and reported it the police. When police contacted the owner of the vehicle, he had forgotten to pay and later returned to the gas station to settle his bill.

"This happens at least a half dozen times a year and almost always people have forgotten to pay," said Hussey.

Rifle, pistol turned in

An old rifle and pistol were turned into the police department last week. While cleaning out their late parents' house, the firearms were found. None of the family members were interested in keeping the firearms.

"They turned it in to us for safekeeping and for us to get rid of them," said Hussey, adding the police every once in awhile perform this service. "They want to put it in the right people's hands."

Missing wallet

At Shaw's market parking lot last Tuesday, April 29, a wallet containing over $200 was taken from an unlocked car. Two days later, the wallet was found in Hingham with credit cards and identification still intact. The Cohasset Police made arrangements for the wallet's owner to retrieve their wallet.

Chief Hussey reminded residents to not to leave any valuables in plain view in an unlocked car, or even a locked car.

"Valuables in plain view just invites someone to break a window to get the purse or wallet," said Hussey. "Lock them in the trunk out of a sight or take their valuables with them even on a short trip."

Doors in village

The police department keeps an eye on the business interests of Cohasset by making sure buildings are secure.

"We try to routinely check the premises make sure everything in our business districts both in the village and Route 3A are secured overnight," said Chief Hussey. They look for open doors or open windows where a break-in could have occurred or, possibly, has occurred.

Each of the three school buildings are checked for security nightly as well.

Erratic operation

A cell phone caller reported seeing a blue Ford driving erratically heading southbound on Route 3A last Friday (May 5). While in most cases the police are able to locate the vehicle, officers searched the area but were not able to find the car.

"We encourage people to call the police if they see a vehicle driving dangerously or a situation where the driver seems impaired," said Hussey.

Broken faucet floods kitchen

A resident on Forest Ave. called for police assistance when the kitchen faucet could not be shut off. The water had begun to flood the room. A police officer and the fire officials responded to the home. The water was shut off at its main source.

The wiring inspector was called in to ensure the water did not cause any electric problems.

Ding dong ditch

A residence on Deep Run has an ongoing problem with kids ringing their doorbell and then running away. Chief Hussey said this type of incident has happened in various locations throughout town. While the kids might think they are just having a little fun, the activity can negatively impact a homeowner, especially if they have difficulty coming to the door or the noise could scare the resident.

"We ask parents to talk to their kids about this type of activity so they realize their actions could have a negative impact on the person in the house," said Hussey.

Gas odor

During the construction of the Little Harbor Water and Sewer Project there have been several instances with gas breaks. Last Friday (May 2) shortly before 5p.m. a gas odor was reported on Nichols Road. The fire department responded and was able to determine the source of the odor. Keyspan was called and was on the scene to fix the problem within 20 minutes.

"The gas company has been responding quickly to any issues," said Hussey.

Parking complaint

A resident called in a car parked illegally and without license plates on Beechwood St. near the corner of Doane St. and Beechwood on Saturday afternoon, May 3. The police had the car towed to McBrien's auto shop until it could be properly claimed.

As it turned out, a prospective buyer of the car had been on a test drive with the car when it broke down on Beechwood. He removed the plates from the car and had planned to have the car towed later.

Possible missing person

The police received a call from concerned sister, who hadn't heard from her brother in two days. The brother was traveling to Maryland to see his wife and child, but had yet to arrive. The officers tried to make contact with the family in Maryland as well as the brother's cell phone, which had a full voice-mail box.

An officer was able to get in touch with the Hartford, Conn. police to check out a Super 8 Motel where the brother was last known to stay. The Hartford police made contact with the brother and gave him the message to contact his family.

CO detector

The fire department responded to a Beach Street residence after its carbon monoxide detector was going off. Fire officials couldn't find a specific problem, but called the gas company to come and check all the appliances in the house.

Car near N. Main tracks

A caller reported a car was parked inside the railroad tracks on North Main Street, but it turned out the car was park in a space before the tracks. The driver was looking for stray golf balls along the side of the road.

Two-alarm fire on Church Street

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

It was not the way any family wants to wake up.

But for the Canavans of 17 Church Street in Cohasset – smoke signaled one of their worst nightmares early Friday morning.

Somehow fire from the chimney that is connected to their state-of-the-art wood-burning stove in their family room got into the walls and traveled up to the ceiling and into the second floor of the Victorian-era home.

Homeowner, Jim Canavan, was still trying to absorb it all as he nursed a cup of coffee while standing in his driveway.

"My wife was on the couch downstairs," he said when the fire was discovered at about 5 a.m. "The power went out and the TV went off – and that is what woke her up."

Over the next few minutes, family members went on a mad dash for the remote-style phone which their son had up in his bedroom. The battery to that phone needed to be charged.

Amy Canavan located the cell phone and called 9-1-1 while Jim tried to put the fire out from the outside with the hose, which was kinked.

Cohasset Fire Chief Robert Silvia said the call came in at 5:02 a.m. about smoke in the house. When the firefighters arrived there was smoke and fire in the area outside the chimney, which is on the back of the house.

"Our preliminary investigation revealed the fire went into the wall and ceiling and into the two rooms above."

Silva said the firefighters, who initially responded, evacuated the four residents and started to work to get to the seat of the fire.

A second alarm was struck and mutual aid was provided by Scituate, Hull and Hingham. Firefighters opened the wall and the ceiling. The fire and damage was contained to four rooms, two upstairs and two downstairs.

The State Fire Marshall's office was on the scene Friday morning interviewing the Canavans as part of the investigation.

The home has been added onto and the fire was in the older section; it is not clear if the home is habitable. Building Inspector Robert Egan was on the scene by about 8 a.m.

During the overhaul, Silvia said at the scene firefighters had to insure that the fire had not traveled within the walls and ceiling to other areas of the home.

There were no injuries. The Canavans, who are formerly from Scituate, moved to the home about four years ago. They have three children, one of whom is away at school.

CO detector

The fire department responded to a Beach Street residence after its carbon monoxide detector was going off. Fire officials couldn't find a specific problem, but called the gas company to come and check all the appliances in the house.

Car near N. Main tracks

A caller reported a car was parked inside the railroad tracks on North Main Street, but it turned out the car was park in a space before the tracks. The driver was looking for stray golf balls along the side of the road.

Two-alarm fire on Church Street

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

It was not the way any family wants to wake up.

But for the Canavans of 17 Church Street in Cohasset – smoke signaled one of their worst nightmares early Friday morning.

Somehow fire from the chimney that is connected to their state-of-the-art wood-burning stove in their family room got into the walls and traveled up to the ceiling and into the second floor of the Victorian-era home.

Homeowner, Jim Canavan, was still trying to absorb it all as he nursed a cup of coffee while standing in his driveway.

"My wife was on the couch downstairs," he said when the fire was discovered at about 5 a.m. "The power went out and the TV went off – and that is what woke her up."

Over the next few minutes, family members went on a mad dash for the remote-style phone which their son had up in his bedroom. The battery to that phone needed to be charged.

Amy Canavan located the cell phone and called 9-1-1 while Jim tried to put the fire out from the outside with the hose, which was kinked.

Cohasset Fire Chief Robert Silvia said the call came in at 5:02 a.m. about smoke in the house. When the firefighters arrived there was smoke and fire in the area outside the chimney, which is on the back of the house.

"Our preliminary investigation revealed the fire went into the wall and ceiling and into the two rooms above."

Silva said the firefighters, who initially responded, evacuated the four residents and started to work to get to the seat of the fire.

A second alarm was struck and mutual aid was provided by Scituate, Hull and Hingham. Firefighters opened the wall and the ceiling. The fire and damage was contained to four rooms, two upstairs and two downstairs.

The State Fire Marshall's office was on the scene Friday morning interviewing the Canavans as part of the investigation.

The home has been added onto and the fire was in the older section; it is not clear if the home is habitable. Building Inspector Robert Egan was on the scene by about 8 a.m.

During the overhaul, Silvia said at the scene firefighters had to insure that the fire had not traveled within the walls and ceiling to other areas of the home.

There were no injuries. The Canavans, who are formerly from Scituate, moved to the home about four years ago. They have three children, one of whom is away at school.

The journey of a lifetime

Margot Critchfield is new minister at St. Stephen's

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

From the very first day Margot Critchfield stepped foot in Cohasset, she felt like she had found her long lost home.

The new rector at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church grew up attending 13 schools in 11 years, so she never felt a real connection to any one place.

"The sensation I have is I am home at last; I feel that way about Cohasset and St. Stephen's. I feel like I've died and gone to heaven," she says with a big smile.

In innumerous ways, Critchfield feels God has provided her with more than she could have ever asked for or imagined with this new position and home.

It's been quite a journey for Critchfield to arrive at St. Stephen's and her story to get to this point is one that is made for the movies—and she hopes St. Stephen's is her happy ending.

Although she says she always had a spiritual side, Critchfield didn't start out as a spiritual leader. For 11 years she was a producer at NBC News. She did investigative and undercover assignments that took her from a helicopter in the mountains of Colombia to stakeouts of gangsters in Cleveland.

She met her husband, Don, at NBC. They married and wanted to start a family. Sadly, her first baby—a daughter named Faith—died after only three days. Critchfield said Faith was born with multiple heart defects and was only expected to live for one day, but survived three. She hadn't opened her eyes until Critchfield placed a fragrant peony next to her nose and her eyes shot open.

STAFF PHOTO/DAVE NEAULT

Margot Critchfield says she feels at home in Cohasset at St. Stephen's.

The next year Critchfield struggled with the death of her baby. She says she was furious with God, but felt she needed to go back to the church in order to heal.

"Eventually, I felt the grief of having no God was greater than the grief of having no baby," says Critchfield. It was the beginning of a healing process and her journey back to the church. On an Easter Sunday, almost a year after Faith's death, she and husband visited Faith's gravesite where they had planted a peony plant. The first two buds were just beginning to come out; three days later she found out she was pregnant with her daughter, Grace, now 18.

Critchfield's healing journey with God continued when she started attending a 12-step program. In recovery for 14 years, she calls the 12-steps "some of the most powerful spiritual tools I've encountered in my journey."

"It was a powerful healing process that helped heal my relationship with myself, the people around me, and God," say Critchfield. Knowing she had not always lived a life according to God's word had always made her hesitant when she felt "the call" to serve the church.

"I felt a lot of shame and guilt, and told myself, 'why would God call someone like me?'" she says. Now, she says she realizes God calls people just like her, "Jesus came to be with the sinners. I think if God can completely transform me, he can do it for anyone."

Critchfield is very open about her past because she doesn't want anyone to be afraid to come to church because they think they aren't 'good' enough. "I want it (my story) to be something that inspires people."

When she first spoke of her sense of call to her husband, she was floored by his response. "He said 'it was never a matter of if, it was a matter of when."

And so began her efforts to become an Episcopal minister began. She underwent a year of discernment to ensure the inward call she felt was outwardly felt by others. Then, with the support of her church in Washington D.C. and its clergy, she headed to seminary for three years. She graduated in 2001, was ordained a deacon in June then six month later ordained a priest. Her previous post was associate rector at St. Alban's Church in D.C.

As of this past Sunday, she is officially installed at St. Stephen's.

"My story has God's grace written all over it," she says.

Challenges ahead

Critchfield says the biggest challenge any person of faith faces is their very beliefs are counter cultural, "we live in a very secular world. Going to church is not something everyone does anymore."

While success, money and self-reliance are first and foremost in the culture, she says church is about a community that believes in their total dependence on God and interdependence on neighbors.

"It's very difficult to take the faith you have on Sunday and live it out during the week," says Critchfield. But, in the same token, she says people are hungry for spirituality and a more integrated (secular and religious) life.

She doesn't want to make drastic changes to the parish just because she's the new minister in town.

"I've found when changes come up organically from the parish, it really works. It's not about me, it's about the community and I discerning where God is calling us."

She says the fun thing about the Episcopal church is "you don't have to check your brain at the front door." The religion she says encourages the church community to ask faith questions and have discussions, "I love that."

Board balks at plan

Developer pledges to get Ripley Road project done

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The 25 Ripley Road project will go forward to the state Mass Housing without the support of the town. Selectmen approved a letter indicating the numerous issues relating to the project's feasibility and what they saw as negative impacts on the neighborhood from the project.

"Based on the input of the (Cohasset Housing Partnership Committee) and neighbors of the proposed development, the Board of Selectmen has voted that it cannot support this project at this time and would urge Mass Housing to deny a Site Approval Letter," states the letter.

Selectmen cite nine concerns they have with the project, among them economic feasibility, density, septic system, site utilization/parking and developer experience.

The board cited "substantial issues" associated with the project as well as possible negative impacts on the neighborhood overshadowed the benefit of two additional affordable units in town.

The 25 Ripley Road project is being proposed under Chapter 40B, the state's affordable housing law, by Cohasset resident, Will Charles. Charles has submitted an application to Mass Housing for the project and Mass Housing sought the town's input on the project. In addition to the Selectmen's letter, the Housing Partnership and five neighbors weighed in on the project. The Housing Partnership expressed the need for more information on a variety of issues they saw in the project before they could make a recommendation for or against the project.

Neighbors' letters and comments at last week's Selectmen's meeting made clear their opposition to the condominium development.

When reached for comment this week, Charles said he was extremely disappointed with the lack of support from the Board of Selectmen and neighbors.

"Our goal was to work with the town of Cohasset and the neighbors," said Charles. "I live here, I work here, my kids go to school here, and I wanted to work with the town."

The lack of town support did not stifle his passion and drive to complete this project. "Our mission is clear: we want to go forward with the project."

Charles is optimistic he will receive the Mass Housing site plan approval because Cohasset is significantly under the 10 percent affordable housing threshold set by Chapter 40B. Currently, Cohasset has about 2 percent affordable housing stock.

Under Chapter 40B, the zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards, like Cohasset, are vulnerable to Chapter 40B projects.

The project could have proceeded in one of two ways. If the Board of Selectmen had endorsed the project, the development would have become a Local Initiative Program, or LIP, which is often called "friendly 40B." In a LIP, the town and developer work together to bring forward the project to the state. Without the support of the Board of Selectmen, the project can still proceed under Chapter 40B.

In both cases, the project will need approval from the state Department of Community Housing & Development (DHCD) to insure that it meets state regulations and guidelines and undergo a zoning board comprehensive permit process.

Big picture getting smaller

Police department trying to do more with less

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In a small police department, any shortage of personnel, equipment or funding has a ripple effect throughout the department.

"It's one of the challenges we face," said Police Chief James Hussey during Monday night's Board of Selectmen meeting. Selectmen have asked each department head to come before them over the next two months to report on the trends, major challenges, grant opportunities and generally give a "big picture" perspective of their department.

The Police Department is budgeted for 17 sworn officers, including two lieutenants, three sergeants, 12 officers/detectives. The dispatch division includes the equivalent of five full-time dispatchers and the animal control officer shared with Norwell.

For the past year, Hussey said the department has been down two bodies, with one officer out on long-term sick leave and an open officer position since last June. Hussey has hired a new officer with Cohasset roots to start in June.

"As a smaller department it is harder to retain personnel," said Hussey, primarily because there is less chance for promotion and advancement compared to a bigger department.

Hussey said in the future seeking out potential officers who have connections to the town or to the area could be helpful, "we'd like to have homegrown people."

Being down two officers puts increased stress on the remaining personnel, said Hussey. Often he has to make officers work and he says it directly impacts officers' morale.

"It really puts a lot of stress on the department," said Hussey.

A recent trend in police departments is a move to more regionalization and mutual aid efforts.

"(In this area,) police departments are way behind fire departments, who rely on mutual aid almost on a daily basis. It's very second nature to them, but it is a relatively new phenomenon to police," said Hussey. A multi-town study on how police departments can begin to regionalize was recently completed thanks to a $50,000 grant. The towns will be discussing the recommendations of the study to see what is financially feasible to do.

Hussey offered a list of grants the department currently seeks out and has received from the state and federal sources. Selectmen chairman Ted Carr said one the board's objectives is to gather a comprehensive master list of all grant opportunities and eventually have a thoughtful review of which ones the town would like to go after.

Carr asked Hussey about a recent letter from the police officers' union expressing concern about the high mileage and safety of the squad cars.

"It's never been my position to put an unsafe vehicle on the street. The cars are being monitored," said Hussey, adding he understood the officers' concerns. "They are using the cars in emergency situations and they see them going to the repair shop fairly often. They are losing confidence in the cars.

"Hopefully in coming years we'll be able to put a replacement schedule in place," said Hussey. The squad cars at all well over 100,000 miles some after two years on the road. "these cars are running 24 hours a day, seven days a week, they take a beating."

Anthology, a professional women's vocal quartet, will perform a concert of a cappella music at the Meeting House of First Parish Unitarian Universalist on Friday evening, May 9, at 7:30 p.m. For more details on the concert, see page 31.

Boston School of Etiquette shows kids proper behavior for all types of situations

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Growing up in upstate New York, Renate Devin was the second oldest of 10 kids.

"It was chaos," she attests. They lived on a farm and dinner was never served on fine china or with a salad fork, but she says all her brothers and sisters were taught how to be respectful and pitch in around the house.

When Devin became a mom herself, she left the corporate world to focus on her kids. As they got older and started attending more activities, she began to notice a disturbing trend with the kids, including her own – no pleases or thank you's, children ignoring adults and a lack of what she deemed as proper behavior.

She didn't think the kids were bad kids, but thought they just didn't know the proper way to act.

"Everyone's schedule is so crazy, hardly any family has time to sit down to a meal," Devin said. It was then she decided she would educate herself to be able to teach kids proper manners for all types of situations.

She headed to the International School of Protocol in Hunt Valley, Maryland, and then completed the program at the American School of Protocol in Atlanta, Georgia.

With a generous helping of southern charm in Atlanta, Devin felt she had gained the right tools to start her own business in Cohasset. In September 2007, she started Boston School of Etiquette, offering her first classes at the South Shore Community Center.

"Parents sign kids up for so many activities, why shouldn't they learn the niceties of life?" Devin said.

Cohasset parent of two, Linda Fetcher agreed. She signed her daughter Morgan, 10, and son Jack, 8, up for Devin's class.

"It was so much more than I thought it would be," Fetcher said. Before the first class, she wasn't sure what the kids would think about the class so she didn't mention it too much. But, the kids came home from the very first class excited.

"Parents say they notice a change almost right away and with their new knowledge they've gained, their kids are often correcting them at the dinner table," she said with a laugh. Fetcher says it was at that first dinner after the first class that she and her husband began to get etiquette lessons from their kids, "they really enjoy imparting their knowledge on their parents."

Fetcher said while she and her husband do their best to teach their kids manners at home she thought it would be worthwhile to have their lessons reinforced by another adult.

"Manners are really a lost art," Fetcher said.

Right now, Devin is focusing on building up the program from elementary-aged kids from grade one to five. The class isn't just about what fork to use for the salad course, Devin teaches life skills that kids can immediately put to use in their lives – proper introductions, handshakes, conversation skills, writing thank you notes and telephone skills are just few of the items covered

"These are skills they will have for the rest of their life," Devin said. "Knowing the right thing to do builds kids confidence, it gives kids a head start."

Fetcher said one of the differences she has noticed with her kids is with answering the phone.

"Before I think sometime my kids were hesitant to answer the phone, but now I think they have the skills and confidence to answer the telephone," Fetcher said.

For each class, Devin sets the stage by setting the table with china, silver, crystal, fresh flowers and (every kid's favorite part) food at the Community Center.

"It's all about putting your best foot forward."
Boston School of Etiquette founder Renate Devin

As the culmination of the class, Devin takes the children to a fine dining meal at Bia Bistro.

Recently, this class was filmed as part of an ABC World News special that aired Monday, April 21. The class at Bia Bistro was filmed and Devin was interviewed speaking about the importance of etiquette class to both kids and parents.

"Any child who has good manners and knows how to act in any situation, those are the kids who get the attention," Devin said.

Even at home, Devin says a child's small acts of kindness and gratuity can go a long way.

"A child who picks up his plate to take it to the sink and says 'thanks, Mom, that was a great dinner' means a lot."

Devin has the framework in place to expand Boston School of Etiquette with two programs for the middle school and high school age groups.

In the middle school age – sixth through ninth grade – class the boys are separated from girls for gender-specific lessons. For the girls class, she plans a trip to the salon for a hair and skin care tips, presenting herself properly, dining and clothing choices. For the boys class, she covers gentlemen's conversation skills, cell phone guidelines, sports etiquette and giving a one-minute speech.

For the high school-aged, the boys and girls are back together. She plans for a trip into Boston to the theatre production, where both the ladies and gentlemen will learn the proper way to act in that forum.

"Simple things like how to get out of your seat to use the restroom, there is a proper way to do that," Devin said. How to present yourself during an interview for a job or a college admissions officer is covered as well as dining and dating protocol.

"It's all about putting your best foot forward," Devin said of all her classes. She said during her program at the American School of Protocol, she was taught the best way for kids to learn was by role modeling and actually putting the kids in the situations so they learn what is appropriate. That's why the classes take a hands-on approach to each lesson, Devin said.

With success so far, Devin plans to open a home-base facility in the future.

Before becoming a full-time mom, Devin worked in the corporate arena first traveling the world organizing international incentive programs for corporations, then entered the world of finance where she managed large account relationships.

She and her husband, Bill, moved to Cohasset nine years ago and have two young kids, Charlie, 7, and Natalie, 6.

SCHOOLS

Quiet in the halls!

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTINE KENT

Suffice to say, everyone seems to have been caught in the wake of the hectic end of term chaos and AP examinations.

For those wondering where did all the noise go these days, then look no further than the senior hall way. The place where brains are fried and paper is in abundance, at least this week because it is…AP EXAM TIME! A year's worth of studying and preparation for the students of these advanced placement courses has lead up to these tests. Suffice to say, everyone seems to have been caught in the wake of the hectic end of term chaos and AP examinations. It wasn't unusual to encounter the odd sleeping student, but I'm sure they still heard every word their teachers said!

Also, The Spinnaker staff has been working tirelessly around the clock on the layout of the final installment of the paper, which is due out on the 28th of May. Don't forget to bring a dollar and receive your always entertaining issue! May 28th, Mark it in your calendar.

Prepare to channel your inner Nancy Drew or Sherlock Holmes because it is time to reveal yet another clue about next year's Life at CHS mastermind! This beauty has graced field hockey fields all over the South Shore. Her springtime fun is spent catching pop flies. Now, take your clues and get your thinking caps on until next week when yet another hint is offered.

Time for the week's main events:

Monday: The Student Council Clothing drive continues, with upper classmen dominating the cause. Come on people, bring in the goods!

Tuesday: Fie onto Fie! The Middle school drama team met in the auditorium.

Wednesday: Thank goodness for Professional Day, otherwise kids would have had to suffer through another full day of school

Thursday: The Boy's Baseball team tried to regain their momentum in Harwich after Tuesday's loss.

Friday: The eighth grade French students packed their bags for the voyage to Quebec City. Au Revoir kids!

Alright, that's it for me this week. Have a safe and fun week-

CEF awards two new grants

The Cohasset Education Foundation recently awarded two new grants, bringing the total number of grants awarded to the Cohasset Schools to thirteen in the past sixteen months.

The first grant award for $28,000 will go towards a STEM Lab for the Deer Hill School, (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics). Said Dr. deChiara, Principal of Deer Hill, "With inquiry based kits, a laboratory environment, and a state of the art technological infrastructure, students at the Deer Hill will be able to develop early identities as scientists, engineers and mathematicians. They will develop procedural skills for questioning, observation, data gathering and analyzing, problem solving and presentation. This will help them for the STEM curriculum offerings at the secondary level and will ultimately lead to an interest in science as a career for many of our students."

Both of these Grants will be implemented over the next few months.

The second grant award for $500 was for a keyboard for the Music Department at the Middle High School. This grant was matched by the Cohasset Arts Boosters and marked the first collaboration between the two organizations. Elaine Breslow of the CMHS Arts Boosters commented, "We are thrilled to have been able to collaborate with the CEF on this artistic endeavor. The keyboard will not only serve to better complement our students' talents but will enable them to better share their love of music with our community at large."

Both of these Grants will be implemented over the next few months. Because of generous community support, in the last sixteen months the CEF has awarded over $155,000 in project grants to the Cohasset Schools and now has an endowment fund of over $255,000. "Reach for the Stars", a benefit to celebrate and support the Cohasset Public Schools will be held this Saturday, May 3 at the Cohasset Golf Club. For more information about the CEF visit our Web site at www.cohasset-education.org.

CDC summer program to perform 'Grease'

Open registration will be Saturday, May 17 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club announces that they will be overseeing the Cohasset Recreation Department's Summer Theater Workshop Program again this year. CDC has provided a positive summer theater experience where children have fun, an outlet for creative expression, and the opportunity to participate in a full-scale musical production all within a workshop learning environment.

This summer's production will be the current Broadway revival hit, "Grease," with show dates scheduled for July 18, 19 and 20. CDC is so excited to bring this "school appropriate version" of the classic musical to life right here in Cohasset. And in true "Rydell High School" fashion, this year's show will be presented on the Cohasset Middle High School stage in the air-conditioned, Middle High School auditorium. The program will again be open to kids 8 to18 years of age from Cohasset, as well as kids of that age group who are members of CDC, even if they do not reside in Cohasset.

The program includes rehearsal and production of a full scale musical with orchestra, costumes, sets, lighting and sound, along with four separate workshops including "Introduction to Acting; Character Development/Improvisation/Staging" taught by Lisa Rafferty, Director and Playwright; "Set Design Creation and Painting" taught by Denise Feeney, Artist/Set Designer/Teacher/Actress; "Lighting and Sound with special effects" taught by Mark Bono, Lighting and Sound Technician/Music Director/Musician; "Set Construction/Rigging - Making the Magic Happen"— taught by Arthur Harvey, Software Engineer/Carpenter Designer. The program also includes a show T-shirt and cast party for the entire cast. They will probably also have a float and march (in costume) in the Hingham Fourth of July Parade for anyone who is available that day.

The program cost is $350 per registrant, $300 per registrant for two or more kids from the same family. The program cost includes the workshops and all materials that pertain to them, a show t-shirt, cast party, entertainment and refreshments. Open registration will be on Saturday, May 17 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium. Auditions will be held on Sunday, June 1 at 6 p.m., and Monday, June 2, at 6:30 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium, no prepared audition materials are necessary, music and readings will be from the score and script. Rehearsals start Tuesday, June 3, at 6:30 p.m. The rehearsal schedule will be Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6 to to 8:30 p.m. through June 17 when school is over. From that date we will rehearse from 6 to 8:30 p.m. on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. All rehearsals will be at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium until the week of July 14 when rehearsal will move to days and be held at the Cohasset Middle High School Auditorium. The program culminates with four performances on Friday, July 18, at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m., Saturday, July 19 at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, July 20 at 2 p.m. A full rehearsal and show schedule will be available at the registration on May 17. Badge of Courage

Inspired by my wife's courage and strength in coping with her breast cancer diagnosis, I have worn this ribbon daily since its creation three years ago. It's my hope by pinning it on my lapel each day that I inspire others to join the fight against this insidious disease.

Watch out Oprah, here's Cohasset's Big Give!

For those of you who have ever watched an Oprah show, you know how important giving back to the community is to her. And, in her latest endeavor, "Oprah's Big Give", she empowers everyday people to go out and make a difference in their community. Well Cohasset, here we come!

On July 5th, 150 students and 50 adults from Cohasset, will board four Peter Pan buses bound for Kentucky in central Appalachia. Sleeping in school classrooms on cots or floors, showering in locker rooms, and generally dispensing with all the comforts of home, these volunteers will work all day doing home building, repairs, problem solving and whatever else needs attention in order for their assigned family to get back on track. They get dirty, strain muscles they didn't even know they had, and end the day so exhausted that even the sleeping bag on the hard floor looks inviting.

Anyone can sign-up for this annual trip to Appalachia. Gary and Judy Ritts, of 2nd Congregational Church, have been spearheading this effort for 21 years! In conjunction with the National Appalachia Service Project, the Cohasset ASP is a faith-based home repair ministry, open to all people, that fosters human development. And although the group is set for 2008, there are still ways that you can be involved without traveling to Appalachia.

COURTESY PHOTO

Perhaps the most entertaining way is to attend "The Appalachia County Fair" taking place Saturday, May 17 at St. Anthony's Parish Center. From 6:30 to 11 p.m., you can dine on Redbones Barbecue, dance to the live music of The Gr8fls (formerly The Grateful Dads), and bid on community donated auction items. Tickets are $40 per person, advanced sales only, and all the proceeds go to funding the Appalachian trip. Tickets are available at the 2nd Congregational Church office or by calling Debbie Shadd at 781-383-1624.

And if you're thinking about traveling to Appalachia in '09, listen to these words from the group journal of 2007 volunteers. Rick Kirkendall, one of the Center Leaders states, "Our hope (as advisors) is that our teens (and adults too) will be struck by this experience and it will motivate them to do good acts for the sake of it. Not because their parents or church leaders say they should or because it looks good on a college application. There is a need...we all have an obligation. We think that revelation happened for some."

Students Sarah Brown and Kacy Emmett, started their journal with the following, "This is the true story of seven strangers picked to live in a van and change others lives. Find out what happens when people stop painting their nails, and start hammering them!" On Day 6 of the trip, Sarah writes about "mastering the art of hammering" so that, "Amy and John will have a complete new living room." Unlike most other ways of giving, these volunteers get to meet and work with the family they are helping. They develop a relationship and push themselves even harder to get as much done as possible.

Volunteer parent, Matt Salerno, sums up the experience by writing, "So what can you expect, when you put four sets of 50 people on a bus, send then off to travel, eat, sleep, work, and pray together, inches apart, for nine days? You can't explain it; except to say that I have been to ASP, and if you haven't gone yet, My Wish for you is simple...Go.

For more information about, or to make a donation to the Cohasset Appalachian Service Project, contact Rev. Gary Ritts at 781-383-0345.

Bark-a-thon event at Wompatuck State Park

A walk in Wompatuck State Park to benefit the local animal shelter will take place from 9 a.m. to noon, on Sunday, May 18. The walk begins and ends in the parking lot outside the Visitors Center Common Room at the Wompatuck State Park entrance off Union Street in Hingham.

How can people help: Get one or more sponsors, collect a donation in any amount and bring one's dog – real or imagined – to Wompatuck State Park the morning of May 18 and take one of several trails through the park and meet back in the parking lot for prizes refreshments and fun.

How can companies help: Just make a donation in any amount or donate goods or services that can be given out as prizes or help in the care of the animals at the animal shelter. Company information will be posted during the event on the Wall of Fame.

The shelter serves the five towns of Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Norwell on an as-needed basis. It is a non-profit, tax-exempt organization dedicated to the welfare of companion animals. The mission is to rescue abandoned, homeless animals and give them proper care, love and attention. The shelter is a no-kill facility.

The event organizer, William Hall, a junior at Hingham High School, is an avid animal lover. His dog, a 3-year-old terrier mix named Princes Leia, was adopted at the shelter, and he has a pet sitting business that he has operated for several years in his spare time. With the help of the local students his family and friends, he hopes to make "Bark a thon 2008" even more successful than the last two years.

For information, contact Hall by email at william@gailhall.com or call 781 749 4492. Donations can also be sent to Friends of Scituate Animal Shelter, P.O. Box 823, Scituate MA 02066. Note Bark-a-thon 2008 on checks.

Poster contest

Posters and signs will be collected to hang all over the South Shore for the Bark a thon 2008 Walk in Wompatuck all year. Motivational, colorful messages of encouragement to hang in the towns that use and need the no kill animal shelter are sought. The shelter suggests business or school groups to have a poster contest and select the best design, most colorful or just get people together and have a poster-making party. This is also a great way to get kids involved in a community service project and help animals.

This project is ongoing. Once posters are completed, schedule a time to bring them by the event or call Hall at 781-749-4492 to arrange a drop off or pick up.

STUDENTs community service hours

This is a new program developed to engage volunteers in community outreach and get students involved while allowing students to get community service hours and have fun. This nonprofit group event will count toward community service hours and forms will be filled out upon completion of the hours worked. Shelter workers will help students develop an outreach plan and represent the Walk in Wompatuck.

Event support

Volunteers are needed before the event, at the opening of the walk and along the walk during the event. Help out for a couple of hours or sign up for the day. Event volunteer forms are available online by emailing william@gailhall.com and before the event.
